CABINETS TO TALK OVER NEXT STEP

Paris Ministry Meets Tomorrow, That in London Wednesday — Opening of Frontier of France Is Suggested.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Oct. 9.—In a note made public today, Italy rejected the invitation sent last Saturday to join Great Britain and France in a three-Power conference to discuss the issue of Italian volunteers in the rebel army in Spain. Italy's note said it could not enter any such conference unless Germany were invited and attended. It suggested that intervention problems should continue to be dealt with by the 27-nation Non-intervention Committee which has headquarters in London.

Officials here and in Paris expressed their regret over the note and declared the reply "was not reassuring as to Italy's real plans."

Possible steps by the British and French governments, according to previous forecasts, would include opening of the French-Spanish frontier to the flow of men and munitions and the lifting of the embargo on arms exports from Great Britain to Spain.

Informed sources said, however, that Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain and Premier Camille Chautemps of France would not make any swift decisions.

Time will be taken to study the document from Italy for any positive approaches it may suggest, it is said, and then "the most definite decisions" will be adopted "at the proper time." Observers said the note threatened to create "a grave situation."

The next regular meeting of the British Cabinet is set for Wednesday.

The text of the note was telephoned to Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden at Balmoral Castle, Scotland, where he is minister in attendance on King George VI.

Inconsistency Pointed Out.

British officials said that in their view Italy's reply was inconsistent with its attitude in the Non-intervention Committee. They pointed out that when the question of withdrawing foreign volunteers from Spain last was discussed by the committee last July, the conflict of Italian and Russian viewpoints caused a deadlock. It was for this reason that Britain and France suggested the three-Power conference.

Now, the British said, Italy countered with a demand that the issue be returned to the Non-intervention Committee.

One charge was made that Italy was playing for time to make its intervention in Spain more effective.

There is little likelihood Great Britain and France will approve Italy's request for German participation since Russia might then have to be invited.

As Mussolini's Paper Sees It.

Premier Mussolini's Milan newspaper, Il Popolo D'Italia, ascribed great importance to the Italian note.

"The period wherein some states thought to decide the destinies of Europe in imposing upon other states a fait accomplie, must be considered definitely closed," the newspaper said. "Begun with the injustices at Versailles, this had its finish in the insufficiencies at Nyon."

The paper said the refusal of a new conference showed the real strength of the Rome-Berlin axis and "Italo-German" solidarity.

Charges and Countercharges.

British and French on the one hand and Italians on the other indirectly charged that Italy and France were hurrying reinforcements to Spain.

Virginio Gayda, authoritative Fascist writer in Rome, devoted 10 columns in Il Giornale d'Italia to listing alleged violations of the Spanish non-intervention agreement by France and Russia.

Charging that "interventionist action by France and Soviet Russia in favor of the Spanish Reds (Gov-

REBELS IN BIG OFFENSIVE FOR GATEWAY TO GIJON

Insurgents Throw Full Strength Against Cangas de Onis in Effort to Open Main Road to Coast.

By the Associated Press.

HENDAYE, French-Spanish Frontier, Oct. 9.—Spanish insurgents threw their full strength into battle today to open the way for a final advance on Gijon, the Government's last Biscayan stronghold.

Driving at an Eastern gateway to Gijon, the insurgents fought for Cangas de Onis, strategic town 31 miles southeast of their main objective. The town's capture would free the principal highway to the coast. Beyond Cangas de Onis, Villaviciosa remained the last town of importance before Gijon itself.

Insurgents reported the battlefield today was strewn with the bodies of more than 1000 Government soldiers. Government sources countered with the assertion that insurgent casualties were heavier than those of the loyalists.

Austurians Hold Ground.

Asturian defenders of the sole remaining section of Government-held territory in Northern Spain braved repeated assaults by infantry, tanks and airplanes to hold their ground after what was said to be a strategic retreat yesterday.

The insurgents carried hill 430 near Cangas de Onis last night in what Government troops declared was some of the heaviest fighting of the 14-month civil war.

Twenty-eight insurgent bombers escorted by pursuit planes began an attack which was followed by troops surging up the hill in five consecutive assaults.

Government reports said the drive was repulsed until dusk when staff officers ordered a retreat in order to avoid further loss of life. A new line of defenses, with strong entrenchments, was occupied to resist further insurgent advances.

Government dispatches said that in another battle, at Penajuban, insurgents lost 300 men.

Although the Government thought it had damaged insurgent airplane concentration on the island of Mallorca in extensive bombing operations, the enemy struck back quickly with raids on Barcelona and Lerida. The Government reported no serious damage resulted.

Fighting Near Cordoba.

In today's sharp engagements on the southern front, north of Cordoba, the Government reported officially that 400 of the enemy were killed or wounded.

The insurgents launched two powerful attacks with two companies of Moors and a company of legionnaires. This necessitated a rush of Government reinforcements into the Pozoblanco sector, which succeeded in rescuing a detachment which had been surrounded by the enemy.

In autonomous Catalonia region, it was reliably reported President Louis Companys soon will announce his five-year mandate has expired. It is believed, however, the representatives of the Popular Front in Catalonia will vote in favor of continuance.

FRENCH LOCAL ELECTIONS TODAY END BITTER CAMPAIGN

PARIS, Oct. 9.—Cantonal election campaigns ended tonight. Both press and politicians agreed that ballots cast in tomorrow's voting for local officials would indicate national sentiment in regard to Premier Camille Chautemps' Government.

Only Paris and the Seine Department will not vote tomorrow. Their local elections come later.

On the French-Spanish frontier, volunteers in Spain's civil war were reported returning to vote. At Marseilles, ship sailings were delayed because sailors would not leave port until they could vote.

Fourteen members of Chautemps' Cabinet and more than 260 deputies and senators were among the candidates in the provincial balloting.

4 WOMEN IN AUTO KILLED BY TRAIN

Crossing Watchman at Henrietta, Mo., Says He Tried to Stop Car.

By the Associated Press.

HENRIETTA, Mo., Oct. 9.—Four Lexington (Mo.) women were killed tonight when their automobile was struck by a Wabash passenger train at a crossing here. They were Miss Gertrude Schenck, 25 years old; Mrs. Elizabeth Bell, 30; Mrs. Gertrude Kendrick, 25, and Mrs. Bernadine Pangborn, 24.

Edgar Stigall, watchman on duty at the crossing on Highway 13, said he saw the car coming and signaled it to stop for the approaching train.

OHIO GIRL, 9, KIDNAPED; BROTHER, 11, GIVES ALARM

Boy Relates Stranger Seized His Sister and Tried Unsucessfully to Catch Him.

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 9.—An unidentifeid man kidnaped 9-year-old Betsy Jane Rush tonight when she was returning home from a confectionery store with her brother Billy, 11. The boy ran home to his mother, Mrs. Lela Dillon, a widow, and told of the kidnaping.

The abduction took place almost in front of the school where the girl is a pupil in the fourth grade.

"We had been to the store to buy some candy and the kidnaper bumped into Betty right in the middle of the street," Billy related. "He reached over and tried tog rab me with the other hand but I ducked and started screaming too. He hurt Betty. She screamed three times and then stopped. He was choking her, I guess. And he dragged her by the neck down the sidewalk. I ran to the store and yelled to the man to call the police. They came soon. Then I went with them but we couldn't find Betty any place."

A description of the kidnaper and his victim was broadcast to all police cruisers.

INCOME AND EXCESS PROFITS INVOLVED

They Concern Realty Firms Controlled by Former Publisher — Hearing Reset for Thursday.

Negotiations are in progress between attorneys for the Bureau of Internal Revenue and G. A. Buder Sr., former owner of the old St. Louis Times, on a settlement of the Government's claim against three corporations controlled by Buder for $46,688 in additional Federal income and excess profits taxes for the years 1931 and 1933.

Buder's appeal from the claim was scheduled to be heard yesterday in the Federal Building before Charles P. Smith, a member of the 16-man United States Board of Tax Appeals. After conferences lasting more than two hours, however, Government attorneys agreed to put the hearing off until Thursday. If a settlement is reached in the meantime, it will be offered to Smith then for approval. If none is reached, the case will be argued on appeal.

There are four separate claims against three companies—the Arc Realty Co., the Arcadia Realty Co. and the Pontiac Realty Co.—of each of which Buder was president and principal stockholder at the time.

The principal issue in each case is whether a taxable gain for the companies or a deductible loss for Buder as an individual was realized in each of the years through the sale of 58,500 shares of stock which the realty companies—in effect, personal holding companies—had lent to Buder without limitation as to its use.

Used as Collateral.

Buder, in each case, used the stock as collateral with banks and brokers to back up other transactions and in each case the banks or the brokers ultimately sold the stock. In each case the stock consisted of shares in the Burroughs Adding Machine Co., of which Buder is the oldest director in point of service.

In detail the Government contends that profits were realized by the corporations as follows: $110,945 on 12,900 shares borrowed from the Arc Company in 1933; $96,113 on 20,500 shares borrowed from the Arc company in 1931; $11,529 on 2500 shares borrowed from the Arcadia company in 1933, and one of $163,931 on 22,660 shares borrowed from the Pontiac company in 1931.

The amounts of additional taxes sought in each case are as follows: In the 1933 Arc transaction, $15,789 in income tax and $5366 in excess profits tax; in the 1931 Arc transaction, $8911 in income tax; in the Arcadia transaction, $1420 in income tax and $47 in excess profits tax, and in the Pontiac transaction, $15,154 in income tax.

Could Not Afford to Rebuy.

In his appeal, Buder says that he had promised orally to give back the same stock or equivalent amounts of Burroughs Adding Machine stock to each of the companies, but that when the time came he could not afford to buy such stock in the open market. He says that in lieu of this he gave $55,182 in cash to the Arc company in payment for what he had borrowed in 1933 and $20,721 to the Arcadia company for what he had borrowed from it.

The other two loans of stock still are outstanding. In his appeal Buder says that his "finances still are impaired and greatly involved and what proposition of compromise he may eventually be able to make or offer (on these loans) still is a matter of speculation."

Buder contends that the companies are not required to pay a tax on the sale of the stock because the companies merely lent it and that he as an individual sold it. The Government, however, has pointed out that the companies listed the sales of the stock in their tax returns. Buder further maintains that if a tax must be paid, the Government has used an incorrect basis for ascertaining the cost of the stock and the subsequent profit.

JUSTICE BLACK INCIDENT CLOSED, WHEELER SAYS

Montana Senator in St. Louis — Denies He Said Speech Was 'Fine Explanation.'

EXPECTS REVIVAL OF COURT-PACKING PLAN

Expresses Belief President Would Like to Renew Proposal and Predicts Another Bitter Fight.

Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, who stated, after publication of facts showing Justice Hugo L. Black had been a member of the Ku Klux Klan, that President Roosevelt should call for Black's resignation if the charges were true, now feels that the incident is "closed," he said to a Post-Dispatch reporter last night.

In St. Louis to speak before the Liberal Forum of the Y. M. H. A.-Y. W. H. A. tonight, Wheeler declined to comment further on the Black appointment, saying the President also has intimated the case is closed, and that "the Senate won't reconsider the appointment; it never has done such a thing, and it won't."

However, he hastened to correct what he said was a misquotation of a statement he made after Justice Black's recent radio address. As published in Associated Press dispatches, this statement was that the speech was "a fine explanation." What he actually said, he told the Post-Dispatch, was that it was "the best explanation that could be made under the circumstances." It thus appears that Wheeler is no more satisfied with the presence of a former Klansman in the Supreme Court than he was when he demanded an inquiry into Black's record, but that he now believes nothing can be done about it.

Court-Packing Still an Issue.

If this one issue concerning the Supreme Court is ended, however, the other — President Roosevelt's proposal to enlarge the number of Justices—still is very much alive, Senator Wheeler said.

"I am convinced by the President's recent statements," he said, "that he would like to renew the court-packing plan in some way. If the proposal is introduced at a special session this autumn, which I am informed is certain to be called, it will result in a new long and bitter fight in Congress, and may seriously jeopardize other administration legislation."

Wheeler, who led the successful fight against the proposal in the Senate last session, is confident the measure again would be defeated, that indeed a bill "would not get out of the Judiciary Committee of either the House or Senate." He also is somewhat puzzled as to why the President should wish to renew the fight, since "recent decisions of the Supreme Court all have been favorable to him," and indications are that "Justice Black will vote to uphold any piece of legislation Congress passes." However, if the question again must be debated, Wheeler is again ready to lead the opposition.

Possibility of Party Rift.

Discussing the court issue and its relation to the Democratic party, Wheeler indicated that it depended entirely upon the President, whether there would be a serious split in the party. "If the President and the administration senators maintain an attitude of trying to punish those Senators who voted against the court bill," he said, "it will undoubtedly mean a wide rift in the party." Asked if such an "attitude" were now being "maintained," the Senator smiled and remarked, "You can let the facts speak for themselves."

He was referring here to the speech of Senator Joseph Guffey (Dem.), Pennsylvania, last August, threatening political reprisals against those who defeated the court proposal, and the President's own rather obvious snubs of Senators unfriendly to the plan on his recent trip through the Northwest. It will be recalled that the President, when in Montana, cordially received Representative Jerry J. O'Connell, Wheeler's expected opponent in the Democratic primary of 1940. A letter from Wheeler, then in California, expressing regrets that he could not be with the President's party, was acknowledged tersely by a secretary.

Has No Fear of Reprisals.

Wheeler said, however, that he and most other Democratic Senators who opposed the court plan

26TH YEAR OF REPUBLIC CELEBRATED IN CHINA

Observance of "Double Tenth" Subdued Because of Invasion by Japanese.

By the Associated Press.

SHANGHAI, Oct. 10 (Sunday).—China observed today the nation's most important holiday —the "Double Tenth." The anniversary — on the tenth day of the tenth month—marks the passing of 26 years since revolution which resulted in the creation of the Chinese republic.

The celebration was subdued because of the Japanese invasion. The central figure in the celebrations was Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, who addressed the Chinese last night in a nation-wide broadcast from Nanking.

Several Americans and other foreigners were awarded decorations as part of the celebration. They included James A. Thomas, White Plains, N. Y.; Prof. J. Preston Maxwell of the Rockefeller Hospital in Peiping; W. W. Willoughby, adviser to the Chinese Embassy in Washington; William Huskers, editor of the American Tea and Coffee magazine, of New York.

Eighteen German officials, scientists and private citizens were honored and a dozen Italian diplomats, military and naval officers also received decorations which some observers interpreted as a gesture of friendship toward Germany and Italy.

WINDSORS TO LEAVE PARIS TODAY FOR GERMANY

They Expect to Return to France Last of Month and Then Come to United States.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Oct. 9.—The Duke and Duchess of Windsor spent the afternoon in Paris writing last-minute notes to friends before their scheduled departure tomorrow for Germany.

Britain's former King announced he will study conditions among German workmen, and the pair has decided on an extensive tour of the nation in addition to visiting Berlin. After their 14-day trip, the Windsors plan to return to Paris, leaving again at the end of October or during the first week of November for the United States.

ROOSEVELT ON AIR TUESDAY

Will Report on Western Trip in Broadcast at 8:30 P. M.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9. — President Roosevelt will make another of his radio talks to the nation at 8:30 o'clock, St. Louis time, Tuesday night. He will speak from the White House and will be on the air until 9 p. m. The speech will be broadcast over the three major networks, National, Columbia and Mutual.

A brief announcement from the White House said the President had a report he wanted to make to the country following his recent Western trip.

By HALDORE HANSON,
A Correspondent of the Associated Press.

PAOTINGFU, China, via Peiping, Oct. 9.—I am sending this message to Peiping by means I cannot divulge. I have been arrested once as a suspected spy and have been given to understand by the Japanese that if I try to leave this city I will be arrested again.

Six American women and one American man besides myself are safe in this war-torn city. Since Sept. 27, after I arrived here from Peiping, they have told me thrilling stories of their war experiences.

(Paotingfu, former Chinese stronghold approximately 90 miles south of Peiping, has been captured by the Japanese. For a time there were fears for safety of Americans in the city.)

Arrested as a Spy.

I reached Paotingfu on a bicycle. On Sept. 28, I started back but was arrested as a spy by the Japanese military when I got about half way to Peiping. I was brought back to Paotingfu on a military train and questioned for eight hours. I developed a fever and obtained permission to go to the Presbyterian Hospital, where I was in bed for 10 days.

Other Americans who are in Paotingfu are: Marguerite Atterbury of New York City, Minnie Witmer of Mount Joy, Pa., Dr. Maud Mackay of Los Angeles, and Orpha Gould of Cadillac, Mich., all with the Presbyterian missions; Abbie Chapin, Glendale, Cal., and Elmer Galt, Shenandoah, Ia., with the American Board missions; and Rosalind Rinker, New Rockford, N. D., with the American Oriental missions.

The American Presbyterian mission outside the city's northwest wall was damaged on Sept. 24. I am living in a brick-strewn compound where every house has had its chimney shot off or a wall blown in. My bedroom was riddled with machine gun bullets.

Eight Chinese were killed inside this compound and five were wounded during a terrific bombardment. An American flag painted on the hospital roof protected the Presbyterians against the continual air attack of 11 days before Paotingfu fell, on Sept. 24.

Refugee Shelters Bombed.

The Japanese artillery drew nearer all day on the twenty-third. Chinese troops evacuated the city at midnight on that day without a casualty but prepared to resist outside the northwest wall.

They had seven pieces of artillery and a dozen machine guns in the lee of the Presbyterian compound as the Japanese advance swept in from the northwest. From 4 a. m. until 10 a. m. on the morning of the twenty-fourth the Japanese rained high explosives on buildings which sheltered 3000 refugees.

Five American women cared for patients in two hospitals. A six-inch Japanese dud dropped through the roof of a church where 400 persons were hugging the floor. Three duds pierced the hospital

INVADERS ADVANCING FARTHER IN NORTH CHINA

TWO HIGH CHINESE OFFICERS EXECUTED

By the Associated Press.

PEIPING, Oct. 10, (Sunday).—Japanese troops advanced along the Tsinpu Railway today, carrying the war well into Shantung Province as the invaders pressed southward to Techchow.

Chinese officials disclosed that two high Chinese military officers had been executed and others degraded in rank for afiling in war duties.

It was announced that Maj. Tseng Chang-hsiang, a battalion commander of the Fifty-third Army, was executed on the spot for "cowardice and military blunders" after the Japanese battered in the walls of Kwohsien, north of Taiyuan, Shansi province, yesterday.

Maj. Liu Chiang-kuei was said to have been shot down by a superior officer when he attempted to flee.

New Japanese Drive.

Reports received here said Japanese forces opened a drive yesterday against Chinese lines along the Hutoso River in an effort to reach Shihkiachung, Hopeh Province.

Shihkiachuang is the gateway to the adjacent Shansi province. From that city a narrow-gauge railway runs west to Taiyuan, capital of Shansi province and one of the important objectives of the Japanese drive in the north.

After capturing Chengtingfu yesterday, one Japanese column struck westward, occupying Lingchow, and another eastward, capturing the cities of Wuki and Tsienshien.

Advance on Coal Mine Center.

The occupation of Taiyuan would give Japan control of an important rail center, as well as of the Pingtan coal mines, among the most extensive in China.

Reports from Tsinanfu said the Japanese pressed their battle line within 40 miles of that point. The dispatches said heavy Japanese bombing of the railway caused an exodus of the populace of Tsinanfu eastward to Tsingtao.

The Chinese expected the Yellow River to prove a barrier against a Japanese crossing. Despite heavy rains, the Japanese said their aircraft destructively raided railway and industrial centers in Hunan Province.

Storming of Walled City.

Japanese officers reported that the capture of Chengtingfu advanced the Japanese battlefront in Hopeh Province 160 miles south of Peiping.

The capture of Chengtingfu was rendered difficult not only by the city's high walls but also by the double moats surrounding them, Japanese reported.

Under heavy fire Japanese squads crossed the moats to the base of the walls. They managed to scale the northwest tower and capture the gates at the foot of the tower. Forcing open the gates to admit supporting columns, the Japanese occupied the town. The Chinese retreated in orderly fashion to prepared lines south of the city.

Operations in North Shansi.

In North Shansi Province the Japanese column that has been moving toward Taiyuanfu, provincial capital, seized a Chinese airport near Taichow. They captured four Chinese planes and 700 gallons of gasoline, after dispersing a garrison of 600 Chinese troops in a sharp skirmish.

Other Shansi detachments occupied the railroad stations at Yuanping, terminus of the provincial railroad running down to Taiyuanfu.

It was repoted that 25,000 additional Japanese soldiers arrived in North China recently. They brought the estimated total of Japanese north of the Yellow River to 325,000.

There was accumulating evidence

JAPAN FIGHTING 'TO SAVE ASIA,' SPOKESMAN SAYS

Declares That It Means to Keep China From the Death Grip of the Red Comintern.

CALLS WARRING NATIONS BROTHERS

By the Associated Press.

TOKIO, Oct. 9.—The following article has been written for the Associated Press by Yosuke Matsuoka, Japan's chief delegate to the League of Nations who walked out of the Assembly in 1932 when the League commission condemned Japan's establishment of Manchoukuo:

At last Japan is in for the final, for the knockout decision, the once for all house-cleaning of all tortuous tangles in the Sino-Japanese relations which have been plaguing the East for ages.

In 1904 she staked her national existence in a fight against Russia, but that was to beat back a nightmare avalanche from without, an affair around outer fences.

This time she is dealing with a festering sore deep down within the bosom of Eastern Asia, threatening her very life as well as those of all Asiatic races with sure and inescapable death. It is calling for heroic surgery. She has taken up her scalpel.

"Bigger Than Russian War."

She will permit no foreign interference whatsoever. Here plainly, therefore, the present crisis is infinitely bigger and more significant than the Russian war of 33 years ago.

One thing is clear even to a donkey running along an Asiatic highway. A constant and hearty co-operation between the peoples of Japan and of China, that, and that alone, can work out the destiny of Asia.

Nobody knows this better than Japan and she knows also that the two things poisoning the atmosphere between the two peoples are the drunken orgy of China's war lords and politicians and the Red communism eating into the heart of China from without. Japan is out today to put a potter's field wooden cross over these common enemies of the Chinese people and of the lasting peace of Eastern Asia.

Japan has no quarrel whatever with the people of China. Our treatment of the Chinese who are living in Japan today is the most convincing comment on this point. In Hokkaido, in Northern Japan, a Chinese committed suicide rather than be compelled to return to his native home, a little over a month ago. The Chinese in Japan were happy and well protected, enjoying all the freedom of a Japanese citizen even while the infamous Tungchow massacre of Japanese civilians in that Chinese city was all over the front pages of our newspapers.

Japan Is Expanding.

A historic fact dominates Asiatic scenes like a Fuji, namely, without Japan there can be no China. Suppose Japan had chosen to play safe and crawled into her shell on her own tight little islands in the spring of 1904? Suppose again that Japan had gone down before the tidal wave sweep of Russian adventure for her own Far Eastern empire on the plains of Manchuria in the autumn of 1905? There would have been no Manchuria for which the Chinese patriots froth at the mouth or the League of Nations denounce Japan as an international robber, and in place of the proud Republic of China one would have seen a crazy quilt of European colonies after the fond fancies of the author of the breakup of China—no Japan, no China! For some mystic reason our Chinese friends in Nanking find it so convenient to forget this little fact.

We are free to admit that Japan has been exceedingly annoying to her neighbor, China. Japan is expanding and what country in its expansion era has ever failed to be trying to its neighbors? Ask the American Indian or the Mexican how excruciatingly trying the young United States used to be once upon a time.

Natural Growth.

But Japan's expansion, like that of the United States, is as natural as the growth of a child. Only one thing stops a child from growing—death. Geneva has been trying to pass this death sentence on Japan since the Manchurian incident, masking it with tinsel phrases of pious hypocrisy, but Japan does not seem amiable enough to die—even for the sweet sake of Geneva-made peace.

China and Japan are two brothers who have inherited a great mansion called Eastern Asia. Adversity sent them both to the depths of poverty. The ne'er-do-well elder brother turned a dope fiend and a rogue but the younger, lean but rugged and ambitious, ever dreamed of bringing back past glories to the old house. He sold newspapers at a street corner and worked hard to support the house. The elder flim-flammed the younger out of his meager savings and sold him out to their common enemy.

The younger in a towering rage beat up the elder, trying to beat into him some sense of shame and awaken some pride in the noble traditions of the great house. After many scraps the younger finally made up his mind to stage a showdown fight and that is the fight now raging along the North China and Shanghai fronts.

Japan's Heavy Spending.

"Japan is fighting for loot and profit." That is the refrain of all anti-Japanese propaganda the world over. It is an insult to plain arithmetic. Japan has already spent billions of yen in the present crisis. The Imperial Diet a few weeks ago voted for more than two billion yen just to tide over a few months. The final total may reach 50 billions or more, who knows?

Can a financial optimist anywhere conceive of Japan getting back even two or three billion yen a year from China? And that amount would be meager annual interest charges on the Japanese outlay for this present crisis—absurd even to a primary school arithmetic class all this fight-for-loot theory!

For what, then, is Japan fighting? She is fighting simply for her conception of her mission in Asia. There is the whole answer. She is fighting to keep Asia from becoming another Africa, and, in particular at the present moment, to save China from the death grip of the Comintern—just that.

Millions of yen, thousands of her young men's lives, all are offerings on the altar of her own conviction and aspirations. She is simply footing the bill which the leadership of Asiatic races calls for. No treasure trove is in her eyes, only sacrifices upon sacrifices. No one realizes this more than she does. But the very life of her own depends on it as those of her neighbors as well.

The all-absorbing question before Japan today therefore is: Can she bear the cross?

Retired College President Dies.

CLEARWATER, Fla., Oct. 9.—Dr. Julius Daniel Dreher, retired United States Consul and a former president of Roanoke College, Salem, Va., died at his home here today. He was 91 years old. He became president of Roanoke College in 1878 and served as its leader for 25 years. Entering the diplomatic service in 1906, he served as American Consul in Jamaica, B. W. ernment) continues," he added: "It has been intensified in these last weeks, at the very moment the French and British Governments were attempting through notes to Rome to give a new lease on life to the non-intervention agreement."

He alleged that 11,234 volunters crossed the Pyrenees to Spain in June, July and August, that supplies had been sent and that "on Sept. 18, an entire organized Soviet brigade arrived in Spain."

Spain Accuses Italy.

The Spanish Government in a note to the British Government accused Italy of planning an unprecedented campaign in support of the Spanish insurgents and asserted it had information that new Italian intervention in the Spanish war would include "gas attacks on Spanish cities."

Italian submarines disguised with Spanish flags, "so their piratical acts may be imputed to the Spanish Government fleet," would be used, it added. An Italian Embassy spokesman termed the Spanish note "an absurd, bombastic statement."

The Spanish Embassy, described as "absolutely false" an assertion in today's Italian note to France and Italy that a Spanish Government representative, recently sanctioned the withdrawal of volunteers.

French Cabinet Meets Tomorrow to Consider Further Steps.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Oct. 10 (Sunday).—Sources close to the French Foreign Office today said a special Cabinet meeting Monday would study French secret service reports alleging new movements of Italian troops to Spain.

These sources declared there was positive proof that 5000 Italian troops secretly moved from Italy in the past week to fight with the Spanish insurgents.

Data on the alleged installation of Italian naval and air bases in the Balearic Islands, off the east coast of Spain, which the French consider a threat to their communications with North African colonies, was expected to be a determining factor in any action the Cabinet might decree.

Foreign Minister Yvon Delbos tonight declared "we must act" in reply to Italy's rejection of the invitation for conferences on Spanish intervention.

"The Italian note did not come up to our expectations," Delbos told press representatives after he had called it "dilatory." "In form the note was not aggressive—it was even conciliatory—but we must act. There must be no future violation of the non-intervention agreement. We have no intention of excluding Germany from the talks but at the moment we suggested the tri-partite conference it was Italy which was most concerned. If Hitler had sent orders of praise to his troops in Spain and if he had sent them battalion orders, we should have approached Germany. In regard to Italy we need no documents or photographs to prove she is assisting (insurgent) Gen. Franco for Signor Mussolini has admitted it.

"As far as France is concerned there is no question of preference for ideology of any sort. If this was concerned only with the Spanish question we would stand aside, but the vital interests of France are threatened."

Delbos categorically denied Italian press charges that France had sent war supplies to the Spanish Government and said that reports of Non-Intervention Committee officers showed "beyond a shadow of doubt" France had kept the non-intervention agreement.

basements where more than 1000 had taken refuge.

The damage to the Presbyterian property probably was about $15,000.

Babies Born During Battle.

At dawn, 20 Chinese soldiers rushed through a shellhole in the compound, drawing intense Japanese machine gun fire to all Presbyterian buildings. Nurse Witmer delivered two babies during the battle. Other Americans tried to keep the refugees calm.

The American Board mission was not damaged.

Orpha Gould and Rosalind Rinker arrived at Paotingfu from Laiyuan, northwest of here, on the night before the battle. They had walked 60 miles, part of the way through a hail storm. It took them six days. Three times, they said, they were fired on with machine-guns from the air by Japanese planes but they escaped by hiding in bushes and bean fields.

The week following occupation of Paotingfu was one of terror. Hundreds were shot. I saw hundreds of Japanese combing the ruins.

Robbed by Japanese.

A Japanese officer on horseback relieved Elmer Galt of a gold watch and fountain pen, offering a cheap Japanese watch in exchange. Galt refused it. Another soldier took Abbie Chapin's camera. A third threatened to blow up the American Board mission, but was dissuaded. Later the mission money was buried.

The French Catholic Cathedral, flying the French flag, was bombed and shelled. Two French priests, one Netherlands priest, the French Mother Superior and five sisters are safe.

Chinese planes bombed Paotingfu four times during the last week. Apparently their objective is the Japanese air field east of the city where 15 bombing planes are operating against Chinese lines.

The new Government established here by men from Tientsin admitted that Japanese looting was irregular but explained that all soldiers regard Paotingfu as the fountainhead of anti-Japanism in North China.

One Chinese reached here with a bullet in his neck. He said he was returning to his village with two others when soldiers ordered them to their knees. He said the other two were stabbed in the back.

JAPAN TO REFUSE PART IN 9-POWER PACT CONFERENCE

Unwilling at Present, However, to Denounce Treaty Which It Is Accused of Breaking.

By the Associated Press.

TOKIO, Oct. 9. — Japan was represented by reliable resources as firmly determined tonight to stay away from a projected conference of world Powers on its war in China, even though unwilling at present to denounce the Nine-Power Pact it is accused of violating.

The Japanese stand was set forth after the foreign office, replying to condemnation of Japan by the League of Nations and United States, Secretary of State Hull, accused China of provocative acts which forced war on Japan.

Coincident with the foreign office statement, the Domei news agency said the Italian Ambassador, Giacinto Auriti, voiced Italy's approval of Japanese action in China, and stated Italy "will never spare general support to Japan." Auriti conveyed Italy's views to Kensuke Horinouchi, Japanese Vice-Minister of Foreign Affairs, and authorized the Vice Minister to let the whole nation know how Italy stood.

(In Rome an official said the Italian Government viewed developments in the Far East with "complete comprehension" of the aims of the Japanese. This official said he did not know details of the conversation between the Italian Ambassador at Tokio and the Japanese Foreign Office, but that the conversation must have been based on "harmony of viewpoint." Recent press articles in Italy have attacked the stand of the United States State Department in condemning Japan.)

The Japanese foreign office statement, which surprised Japanese sources because it was not written in stronger language, said the action of the League and the United States was "due to misunderstanding Japan's true intentions." It said Japan's action in China was "entirely in self-defense" due to "China's provocative attitude" and proclaimed that "Japan has no territorial ambitions." It denied that Japan was violating any existing treaty.

"On the contrary," the statement said, "China is carrying out her stubborn anti-Japanese policy, incited by red influence, and is planning to drive out Japanese rights and interests from China by force of arms."

Heavy Rain Causes Lull in Fighting at Shanghai.

By the Associated Press.

SHANGHAI, Oct. 10 (Sunday).—There was a lull in the fighting at Shanghai today due to heavy rain.

A Hongkong dispatch said 12 officers and 200 men from the British cruiser Capetown, who had been stranded between Canton and Lokchong, arrived at Hongkong with 12 civilians by train.

The British naval men, whose ship is bottled up in the Yangtze River by barges sunk by the Chinese to block a Japanese advance by river, arrived after a four-day journey from Hankow.

The Government of the British Crown colony at Hongkong appointed a commission to investigate the reported sinking of Chinese fishing junks by Japanese warships. Reports said hundreds of fishermen were killed when submarines and destroyers sank their craft off the China coast.

The Japanese claimed advances of 500 yards in minor operations on the Lotien-Kiating Sector, about 20 miles northwest of Shanghai. Heavy rains hampered the movements of the armies.

Text of Italy's Note Rejecting Bid to Conference on Spain

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Oct. 9.

THE text of the Italian note replying to the British proposal for a conference on withdrawal of foreign volunteers from the Spanish civil war follows:

The Royal Ministry of Foreign Affairs have the honor to refer to the communication of his Brittanic Majestys' Embassy, dated the second instant (Oct. 2).

The Fascist Government willingly take note of the assurance furnished by the British Government regarding the political independence of Spain.

For themselves, they need not recall the assurances furnished on repeated occasions, in the most solemn fashion, regarding the political independence and, consequently, the territorial integrity, of Spain, its mainland, its island and its colonies.

The Fascist Government fully share the hope expressed by the British Government that the internal struggles of Spain may cease to be a cause of suspicion and friction between other nations and that the situation may evolve in such a manner that in other fields, also, progress may be realized toward a general detente (lessening of tension).

They (the Italian Government) are ready, with every possible goodwill, to examine, as they have always done in the past, all means which may be thought suitable to render the policy of non-intervention effective.

Among the elements constituting this policy, the British Government lay particular emphasis upon the question of volunteers and their withdrawal.

Italy's Previous Stand.

Nevertheless, in order to indicate clearly individual political positions and responsibilities deriving from them and not for any untimely emphasis of polemic, it is opportune to recall how it was actually Italy, together with Germany, who was the first to draw attention to the question of volunteers and to insist that their dispatch should be forbidden and, subsequently, that provisions should be taken for their withdrawal.

The Italian Government claim for themselves and for the German Government the merit of initiative directed toward consideration of this question as one of the indispensable elements of any policy of non-intervention.

Insofar as they themselves are concerned, they recall the explicit declaration made to the French Ambassador by the Italian Foreign Minister so long ago as August, 1936, to the declarations obtained in the note verbale of Jan. 7, 1937, addressed to the embassies of Great Britain and France, to that of Jan. 25, 1937, addressed only to the embassy of Great Britain and, finally, to the repeated declaration made by the Italian representative on the committee of non-intervention in London on the occasion of the last discussion of this question.

Same Ideas Still Held.

The Fascist Government have the honor to confirm that, insofar as concerns the whole question of non-intervention in its various aspects and elements, they maintain the same order of ideas as that which emerges from all the above-mentioned declarations.

In their communication of the second instant, the British Government suggest that conversations be initiated between the three governments of France, England and Italy for the purpose of reaching, if possible, an agreement on measures designed to ensure the application of the policy of non-intervention. The British Government suggest such procedure with the intention of obviating difficulties which have occurred to the London committee.

The Fascist Government appreciate in all its value the British suggestion but doubt whether the difficulties in question can be overcome by way of ingenuities or device of procedure and, above all, by that proposed.

They draw attention of the British Government to the fact that the matter under discussion does not regard some states alone but, on the contrary, interests other states beside France, Britain and Italy. The further fact should not be overlooked that, without the adherence of Burgos and Valencia (the two Spanish factions) any decisions on the question would fail to lead to practical results.

All the more so when one remembers the attitude of the representative of Valencia (the Spanish Government), who by his specious pretext excluded in his speech at Geneva any possibility of evacuation of volunteers enrolled in the armed forces of his Government.

Elements of Accord Missing.

The proposed discussion, in the absence of other states, would lack elements indispensable to the reaching of an agreement.

It is the conviction of the Fascist Government that the adoption of procedures—even if only preliminary—outside the London (non-intervention) committee and its organs would in the present situation result not only in not diminishing but increasing the possibility of misunderstanding and complications and in retarding instead of hastening the attainment of a general agreement, an agreement which the Fascist Government regard as supremely necessary.

The Fascist Government are, therefore, of the opinion that the question of non-intervention should continue to be dealt with by the London committee.

The Fascist Government have, finally, the honor to state that they will not participate in conversations, meetings or conferences to which the German Government have not been formerly invited and in which they do not participate.

CHINA MUST FIGHT OWN BATTLES, SAYS CHIANG

Generalissimo Tells People Not to Be Misled by World Sympathy.

By the Associated Press.

NANKING, Oct. 9.—Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek told his people tonight not to expect others to fight China's battles.

"International sympathy, though a source of the greatest encouragement, should not be permitted to awaken false and ill-grounded hopes," the head of China's Government said in a nation-wide broadcast marking the twenty-sixth anniversary tomorrow of the establishment of the republic.

He told the nation that China was doomed to a long and exhausting war with Japan and there was no hope of ending hostilities in a few months.

"We must visualize ever-increasing hardships and afflictions and be prepared to face situations and experiences 10 times more difficult and harrowing than those faced today," he said.

While dealing realistically with the crisis confronting China, he gave the nation his judgment that, "despite this most grave and trying hour in the history of our national emancipation, there are signs of hope and encouragement."

"Our aim and object—China's deliverance—can be realized if the people endure and sacrifice with firm determination," he said.

"The courage and valor of Chinese fighting services have inflicted a serious blow to Japanese morale and also have won the admiration of friendly peoples, who also are touched by China's national solidarity after two decades of internal discord."

Setting forth three essentials, he said the Chinese must "carry on by marshaling all the nation's resources, must strengthen the national solidarity and, thirdly, must maintain their firm conviction that victory will be ours.

"We are fighting for national existence and also for international justice," he continued. "The aggressor has already suffered a moral defeat. So long as we are prepared to fight unendingly, it is impossible that we will not emerge victorious."

Expressing his determination to lead China, whatever befalls it, he cited the last words of Dr. Sun Yatsen, known as the father of the Chinese republic: "Struggle for peace. Save China."

GOV. STARK ORDERS O'MALLEY TO DROP RATE COMPROMISE

Directs Him Not to Present Insurance Deal, but to Have Case Argued on Merits Friday.

"GET POLICYHOLDERS 100 PCT. IF YOU CAN"

Under Agreement They Were to Receive Only 20 Pct.—Superintendent Defends His Action.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Oct. 9. — Gov. Stark today ordered R. Emmet O'Malley, State Superintendent of Insurance, not to present to the State Supreme Court the proposed compromise by which impounded insurance premium funds would be distributed on the basis of a 20 per cent refund to policyholders, 50 per cent to insurance companies and their agents and 30 per cent for lawyers and court costs.

He instructed O'Malley to have the State's lawyers in the case, Floyd E. Jacobs and John T. Barker of Kansas City, argue the case on its merits before the Supreme Court of Missouri and to endeavor to win "100 per cent for the policyholders."

The case will come up for hearing Friday on an appeal from a decision of Judge Nike G. Sevier of Cole County Circuit Court directing that all the impounded funds should go to the policyholders.

The case grew out of a 16 2-3 per cent rate increase imposed by fire insurance companies in 1930. About $1,750,000 yielded by this increase over a five-year period and now impounded is in litigation.

About $10,000,000 in excess premiums were involved in the Federal phase of the case in which the Federal Court at Kansas City approved the same sort of compromise as was proposed for the State-impounded funds.

Gov. Stark conferred with Attorney-General Roy McKittrick, who refused to approve the original compromise when it was entered into in 1935, and after the conference summoned O'Malley to inform him of his decision.

Letter to O'Malley.

In a letter outlining his position to O'Malley, the Governor stated:

"I hereby direct that you instruct Messrs. Barker and Jacobs not to present to the Supreme Court the compromise settlement agreement in the fire insurance rate case whereby the policyholders would get only 20 per cent of the impounded funds.

"You are further directed to instruct Messrs. Barker and Jacobs to present and argue the case on its merits and endeavor to win 100 per cent for the policyholders.

"You are hereby directed to take such steps as may be necessary to withdraw the compromise agreement you caused to be filed in this case in the Supreme Court.

"My position is that the matter should be determined by the Supreme Court on its merits."

In a postscript the Governor requested O'Malley to advise him by 12:30 o'clock today that the instructions had been given to Barker and Jacobs. Within a few minutes O'Malley informed the Governor he had given the instructions to Jacobs, who would convey them to Barker. Jacobs was on the ground when Gov. Stark made known his decision.

In a separate communication to the two lawyers, Governor Stark instructed them to "disregard Mr. O'Malley's recent oral instructions to present to the Supreme Court the compromise settlement in the fire insurance rate case."

Effect of Action.

The effect of the action will be to leave before the Supreme Court only the issues raised in the appeal from Judge Sevier's decision, which was sweeping in its denial of the rate increase sought by the companies, even to the point of overruling a report of Dudley E. Calfee, special master, finding in their favor and rejecting the compromise.

O'Malley and the insurance companies sought to gain immediate approval for the compromise by carrying it direct to the Supreme Court, leaving the appeal from the other aspects of the Sevier decision to take its due course on the docket of the higher tribunal but the court disapproved.

After the Federal Court had approved the compromise in its phase of the litigation, the compromise was again incorporated in the appeal to the State Supreme Court despite its previous rejection. The appeal on the merits was submitted to the Court in January at

In a postscript the Governor requested O'Malley to advise him by 12:30 o'clock today that the instructions had been given to Barker and Jacobs. Within a few minutes O'Malley informed the Governor he had given the instructions to Jacobs, who would convey them to Barker. Jacobs was on the ground when Gov. Stark made known his decision.

In a separate communication to the two lawyers, Governor Stark instructed them to "disregard Mr. O'Malley's recent oral instructions to present to the Supreme Court the compromise settlement in the fire insurance rate case."

Effect of Action..

The effect of the action will be to leave before the Supreme Court only the issues raised in the appeal from Judge Sevier's decision, which was sweeping in its denial of the rate increase sought by the companies, even to the point of overruling a report of Dudley E. Calfee, special master, finding in their favor and rejecting the compromise.

O'Malley and the insurance companies sought to gain immediate approval for the compromise by carrying it direct to the Supreme Court, leaving the appeal from the other aspects of the Sevier decision to take its due course on the docket of the higher tribunal but the court disapproved.

After the Federal Court had approved the compromise in its phase of the litigation, the compromise was again incorporated in the appeal to the State Supreme Court despite its previous rejection. The appeal on the merits was submitted to the Court in January at which time some Justices made pointed inquiries as to how the compromise entered the case and "who represented the policyholders."

Rumor of Division in Court.

Before an opinion could be given a change occurred in membership of the Supreme Court, Judge John Caskie Collet being elevated to the Federal judiciary and Judge James M. Douglas of St. Louis succeeding him on the Supreme bench and the Court ordered the rate case resubmitted. There were conjectures at the time that the court was divided on the case.

Whether the State's new position will affect fire insurance rates, which, as a part of the settlement in November, 1935, were lowered to about 5 per cent below the rates prevailing in 1922 before the controversy began, is not known.

The insurance litigation, particularly the compromise, has been under severe criticism. Last winter it led to an investigation by the Insurance Committee of the House, whither it was transferred instead of being conducted by a special committee.

The committee report, terming the settlement fair and beneficial to the public, was termed a whitewash by the critics.

Last July Gov. Stark conferred in Colorado Springs with Tom Pendergast, Democratic boss of Kansas City, informing Pendergast he would not reappoint O'Malley but would permit him to remain in office for a year on probation "with the distinct understanding that if he does anything I do not approve I will remove him forthwith."

Pendergast approved the original compromise in 1935, O'Malley making a hurried trip to New York to consult him about it just before the Democratic boss sailed for Europe.

There are 73 companies involved in the State litigation whereas there were 173 in the Federal Court case.

O'Malley's Statement.

In a statement tonight O'Malley said the fire insurance compromise agreement was drawn up during the administration of and approved by former Gov. Guy B. Park, and that he felt "in honor bound" to do all in his power to carry out the contract.

"I felt as Gov. Stark did recently when called upon to sign the recent bond issue which had been purchased by a Kansas City investment company," O'Malley commented. "He said 'Not to sign the bond,' he thought, would 'make Missouri the laughing stock of the nation.' I felt that failure on my part, as superintendent representing the State, to keep my part of the contract made with the insurance companies would make Missouri the scorn of the nation."

Asserting he was the authorized representative of the policyholders, the superintendent said appeals to end the long drawn-out litigation had been made to him by policyholders, the chambers of commerce of St. Louis and Kansas City, and civic organizations in other cities of the State.

Almost as soon as he took office July 1, 1933, he said, he was "importuned by insurance agents who complained bitterly of the chaotic condition existing in their business because of the litigation."

O'Malley then turned to the investigation conducted by the House of Representatives last spring.

"Because of attacks made on the settlement by political mountebanks,' he said, 'a legislative investigation was made and not one single individual came before the committee or was there one communication sent the committee in criticism of the settlement."

ANN COOPER HEWITT WED TO GARAGE MAN

By the Associated Press.

GRANTS PASS, Ore., Oct. 9. — Ann Cooper Hewitt, 23-year-old heiress, and Ronald McMillan Gay, 32, a garage worker, sought seclusion tonight after explaining they came here for their wedding "to avoid publicity." They were married yesterday by County Judge Grant W. Mathews in the presence of two woman friends.

The bride, daughter and principal heir of the late inventor, Peter Cooper Hewitt, created a sensation in 1936 when she sued her mother and two physicians for $500,000, charging she had been tricked into submitting to sterilization. Mrs. Maryon Cooper Hewitt, the mother, and the physicians contended the operation was for Miss Hewitt's welfare because she was feebleminded.

The phyisicians went free when the trial court dismissed criminal charges after hearing the prosecution evidence. The court held they had acted in good faith. Mrs. Hewitt never was brought to trial and criminal charges against her were dropped. The $500,000 suit is pending.

CLEANER FILES SUIT TO STOP 'PICKETING' BY COMPETITOR

Petition Charges Patrons Are Wrongfully Led to Believe Plaintiff Hires Non-Union Help.

Russell Harstick, proprietor of a dry cleaning shop at 3734 Gravois avenue, found yesterday morning that his place was being "picketed" by a man carrying an umbrella, which advertised reduced cleaning prices offered by a competitor.

Harstick soon after filed suit in Circuit Court for an injunction to restrain his competitor from continuing this display. He complained that his customers were led to believe he employed non-union help, and that his business was being injured. He said he filed the suit after police told him there was nothing they could do to stop the "picket."

CONVICT SHOT, ATTEMPT OF FIVE TO ESCAPE FAILS

Companion of Pair Killed by St. Louis Police Makes Break on Way to Michigan Prison.

By the Associated Press.

CHEBOYGAN, Mich., Oct. 9. — Five desperate convicts, being transferred from the State prison at Jackson to the Marquette branch prison, attempted to escape at the Indian River today, and the most notorious of them, Joe Scofic, was shot through the right lung by State Police Sergeant Ray Sullivan.

The shooting occurred in a restaurant where the prison party had stopped for lunch.

All five convicts quickly were overpowered. Scofic was taken, under heavy guard, to the Cheboygan hospital. A physicians said his wound was serioous. The other four continued their trip to Marquette in a prison bus, arriving tonight.

Sergt. Sullivan, one of three State policemen who were following the prison bus in a patrol car armed with a machine gun, pistols and a shotgun, said the members of the convoy had expected a break by the prisoners because of their records as unruly convicts.

Two of them, Scofic and John McAllister, had made recent escape attempts. The others were Andrew Leko, life term prisoner, and John Thompson and Raymond Hamilton, serving long terms for armed robberyy.

Officer's Story of Shooting.

"We let them go into the restaurant because they had become quite chilled in the bus," Sullivan explained. "They were seated at a table in a corner. The two prison guards and the three State policemen sat at nearby tables, shutting off every avenue of escape except a window.

'As they ended their meal Leko made a break for the window and began butting his head against the glass. Scofic was with him in the foreground of the break.

"I fired three times. One of the shots hit Scofic. The other men, all of whom were on their feet, fell to the floor. We had no trouble seizing them.

"There were no other patrons in the restaurant. Mildred Pelton, a waitress, had just stepped into the kitchen, and the only other person in the dining room was Charles French, the manager. He was at the cash register, which was to my back."

Robbed Parish House.

Scofic, sentenced originally from Detroit to serve from seven and one-half years to 15 years for the armed robbery of a Dearborn parish house, escaped with two companions over the prison wall last winter. His companions, Alvin Mott and Ray Rusch, were killed a week later in a pistol fight with police at St. Louis. Scofic was recaptured two months ago in New York state and was charged with kidnaping a farmer whose automobile the three prisoners seized in their flight.

The day he was to go on trial, several bars in his cell were found cut. After he had been convicted and sentenced to serve an additional 35 to 50 years, he attempted a break for liberty in the courtroom but was overpowered.

McAllister, Leko, Thompson and Hamilton attempted to escape over a wall of the Southern Michigan prison on Aug. 14. McAllister scaled the wall, but the others were stopped.

McAllister was found the following day. Last Monday he was sentenced to serve an additional three to five years for stealing clothing from a home during his period of liberty. Leaving the court room, he broke from his guards and fled to freedom through the courthouse corridors, under fire. Six hours later he was captured in the basement of a house.

Two convicts who escaped with Scofic from the Michigan prison last February killed Detective-Sergeant Thomas J. Sullivan here, and were themselves shot to death by St. Louis policemen Feb. 25.

They were Alvin Mott and Raymond Rusch. Scofic had left them before Sergeant Sullivan and Detective Raymond Roesler, making a search of small hotels, found them in the Leonard Hotel, 3232A Olive street.

Roesler killed Rusch, after the latter fatally wounded Sergeant Sullivan. Mott fled through a window, held up a motorist and drove away in his automobile, but was pursued by police in a scout car and shot in the head.

MAN FOUND SHOT TO DEATH NEAR BONNE TERRE, MO.

Sheriff Believes He Was Murdered—Cleaner's Label Bearing Name, Hancock, Clew to Identity.

State highway patrolmen and Sheriff A. A. Bayles of St. Francois County were investigating last night the death of an unidentified man found shot in the head near Bonne Terre yesterday morning.

Sheriff Bayles said to a Post-Dispatch reporter that the man, about 38 years old, unquestionably had been murdered, probably at the place the body was found. A large bloodstain was found about six feet from where the body lay. Leaves which had been stripped from the branch of small bush were found under the body.

The body lay in a wooded area, about 40 feet from United States Highway 61, and was found by three men. No weapon was found. In the pockets were four $1 bills and 31 cents.

Entering back of the left ear, the bullet, a .38-caliber, soft-nosed type, had lodged behind the right ear. Coroner Eleuan Province of Farmington extracted it, turning it over to the State Highway Patrol for examination by ballistics experts. There were powder burns on the left side of the head, indicating the shot was fired at close range.

The man had been dead eight or 10 hours when found, in the opinion of Linn Benham, Bonne Terre undertaker, to whose establishment the body was taken. The body was found by Elmer and Frank McGee, brothers, and Chester Hammack of Silver Springs.

Benham said last night that several hundred residents of the area had viewed the body, but were unable to identify the victim.

Marks on the man's blue suit, evidently placed there by a cleaner, bore the name "Hancock." On the right arm were tattoo pictures of a battleship, a knot and a woman in a robe. The man was about 5 feet 8 inches tall, weighed about 165 pounds, and had brown hair and gray-blue eyes.

Bonne Terre is about 60 miles south of St. Louis, in the lead mining belt.

CHARLESTON, Mo., Oct. 9.—Ben Stricker, president of the Charleston Commercial Club, announced today that the club indorsed the movement to preserve the Big Oak, Missouri's largest oak tree, standing in Mississippi County about 20 miles south of Charleston.

"We lend our support to Gov. Stark, the State Parks Board and others interested in creating a State park in that area," he said.

The Junior Chamber of Commerce of Charleston and the Kiwanis Club also have indorsed the movement, as have several other civic organizations of the district.

A special commission of Southeast Missouri residents appointed by Gov. Stark to work for establishment of the park will confer with the State Parks Board and the State Wild Life Conservation Commission at Jefferson City on Monday.

U. S. Navy Weather Station To Be Set Up in Aleutians

Small Party on Way on Cruiser—Will Remain Through Winter to Make Observations.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9. — The Navy Department disclosed today that, in conjunction with the Weather Bureau, it would establish a new station in the Alaska-Aleutian Island area for aeroiogical observations this winter.

A small party of experts will set up the equipment and remain there through the winter, traveling to the station site on the cruiser Portland.

The Portland left San Pedro, Cal., Thursday on a mission described there as confidential. A fleet spokesman was quoted as saying the ship would put in at the Puget Sound navy yard for minor overhauling and would take on special personnel and equipment. The ship will return and rejoin the fleet after discharging its passengers and cargo.

Need for additional observations on winter weather in the Far North was disclosed, it was said here by the navy's maneuvers in the Pacific in recent years.

Weather Bureau officials said the bureau for the second successive year planned extensive winter observations employing airplanes at Fairbanks, Alaska, but declared the navy enterprise was separate from this.

William B. Drawbaugh and Leroy A. Coffin left Washington two months ago, and are now in Fairbanks to direct observations to be made at frequent intervals at altitudes of more than 15,000 feet by planes and by radio meteorographs, which are instruments attached to small balloons.

Officials said these would record the temperature, humidity and air pressure. The planes used at Fairbanks are private and not navy aircraft.

have no fear of possible reprisals, that they believe public sentiment in their states is against the President on this issue, regardless of how strongly it supports him on most questions. Much of the support for the plan, he said, came from farm and labor groups who had no real interest in the issue, but who backed it because they were seeking favors from the administration in other fields.

In regard to President Roosevelt's Chicago speech, urging a "quarantine" against aggresor nations, Wheeler was not ready to express a definite opinion. If it was an "idle gesture," he said, not to be followed by some sort of action, "it will do the United States more harm than good, for other countries of the world will laugh at us in future if we make statements that we are not willing to back up."

If, on the other hand, it is to be "backed up," then its effect will depend upon what measures are taken. Declaring that such an action as an economic boycott, or other sanctions, "might lead us into another world war," Wheeler said that he himself would never vote to put the United States into war unles the nation were attacked.

Some indication that he regards the President's address with skepticism was apparent in his next comment. This was on the fact that British statesmen answering the speech, said they were ready to support the President in any action he might take in China or Spain. "I thought it was the President who was trying to back up the English Government," he said, "because it is certainly England that has the greatest stake in China and the Mediterranean."

FIRES PISTOLS WILDLY, KILLS HIS NEIGHBOR

James Hogan, Who Shot Santo Tocco, Says He Heard "Voices."

Santo Tocco, a service car driver, was shot and killed early yesterday by his next-door neighbor, James Hogan, 1421A North Jefferson avenue, as Hogan fired wildly with a revolver and automatic pistol, imagining he heard "voices" threatening to kill him.

Tocco, who had gone to the back porch common to his flat and Hogan's to investigate the shooting, was wounded in the chest by a bullet which came from Hogan's flat and went through the glass panel of the kitchen door. Tocco stumbled back into the kitchen of his flat and fell unconscious on the floor. He was dead on arrival at City Hospital.

Hogan turned over to the police the two weapons, from which he had fired at least 11 shots. He was frightened, he said, when he fired through the kitchen door, not recognizing Tocco, but seeing only "the form of a man." He told a rambling story of hearing "voices" of a man and woman plotting to kill him. The "voices," he said, came from Tocco's flat.

Hogan's first shots had aroused Tocco's daughters, Josephine, 16, and Anna, 14, who awakened their father and sent him out to the porch to investigate.

Tocco, 49 years old, was a widower. He drove a service car on the Delmar line. Besides his two daughters, a son, Dominic, resided with him. Dominic, helper on a fruit truck, works nights but happened to pass his home soon after the shooting and went in when he saw policemen in front of the flat.

ARGENTINE APPROVAL OF ROOSEVELT SPEECH

President Justo Indorses Appeal for International Action to End Aggression.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—Ambassador Ador Felipe Espil delivered to President Roosevelt today a personal message from Argentina's president, Agustin P. Justo, who congratulated Mr. Roosevelt on his recent Chicago speech calling for concerted international action to end aggression and expressed Argentina's approval of this Government's endeavors in that direction.

It marked the first expression of a Latin-American Government spokesman on this Government's active collaboration in the present international efforts to outlaw war.

A close study of the official League of Nations recommendation for convocation of the Nine-Power Treaty conference has convinced observers here that the conference will be devoted mainly to the exploration of measures designed to halt by moral suasion the Japanese invasion of China.

This probably would mean that the conference would seek to prevail upon Japan through the force of international public opinion to cease activities on the Asiatic mainland pending a settlement. Should this move fail, it then would remain for the conference to determine whether it should go to the extreme of considering actual punitive measures against Japan.

One of two possible courses would be open, in the opinion of observers: The invocation by the conference powers themselves of a general economic "quarantine" designed to separate the island empire from all financial and commercial contact with the outside world, or a recommendation to the League of Nations that it assume the responsibility for further action against Japan.

MRS. HAHN TO GO ON TRIAL TOMORROW

Cincinnati Woman Charged With Murder of Man, 67, by Poisoning.

By the Associated Press.

CINCINNATI, Oct. 9.—Mrs. Anna Marie Hahn, 31 years old, is scheduled to go on trial Monday charged with the murder of George Gsellman, 67, by poisoning. The trial is expected to require three weeks or more.

Mrs. Hahn is charged in two indictments with poisoning Gsellman and Jacob Wagner, 78, but will be tried only on the latter count.

Prosecutor Dudley Miller Outcalt has declined to say what penalty he will demand, although Assistant Prosecutor Gordon Scherer announced previously the State would ask for death in the electric chair.

Investigation into what Prosecutor Outcalt termed the "biggest mass murder in the country," began with the death of Wagner on June 3. Then authorities at Denver and Colorado Springs, Colo., requested investigation into the death of George Obendoerfer, 67, moderately wealthy Cincinnati cobbler. Obendoerfer was accompanied into the West by Mrs. Hahn. He died Aug. 1 in a Colorado Springs hospital.

Both men had become violently ill while in her company or shortly thereafter. Tests indicated presence of poison in their visceras and in vital organs of Gsellman, who was found dead in bed July 6.

Philip Hahn, her husband, produced a half-emptied botle of an oil which medical sources agreed was fatal in dosages of six to 20 drops. He had taken it from his wife during a quarrel, he said.

Hahn told Outcalt he was aware of his wife's friendship with numerous elderly Germans, but denied knowledge of financial transactions by which Outcalt contends she benefited from $50,000 to $70,000.

She was residing in a $12,000 home bequeathed to her by Ernst Kohler, another friend, who died in 1933.

BUS STRIKE PUT OFF UNTIL WEDNESDAY

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Oct. 9.—Ivan Bowen of Minneapolis, attorney and spokesman for the Greyhound Bus Lines, announced tonight union leaders who threatened a strike of 1200 drivers for the company at 5 a. m. tomorrow, had agreed to postpone the walkout "until some time Wednesday."

Bowen said he had conferred by telephone with S. R. Harvey, assistant president of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, who was in Cleveland.

"The union has agreed to postpone the strike until Wednesday at least," Bowen commented. "The continuance will permit further negotiations." He declined to say whether the Greyhound Company and the union leaders had reached any agreement on the drivers' demand for a blanket contract.

Bowen said he and possibly other Greyhound company officials would attend a conference with union leaders in Cleveland Monday. He said no formal conferences were planned for tomorrow.

The strike was ordered on Greyhound lines covering a territory between Detroit, Buffalo, the New England States, New York, Washington, Norfolk, Va., Louisville, Cincinnati and St. Louis.

Charlton Ogburn, American Federation of Labor counsel, said in Washington, "I may ask for an injunction" against the National Labor Relations Board's refusal to order a collective bargaining election among Greyhound bus drivers of the eight lines.

The board certified the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen last month as exclusive bargaining agency for a study of membership claims of unions seeking to represent the drivers. The claims were compared with company payrolls.

LEWIS AND C I O ADVISERS GATHER AT ATLANTIC CITY

Heads of 32 Unions to Meet Monday to Consider Growth of Movement and Its Problems.

CONFERENCE WILL PRECEDE OPENING

Labor Department Concilator and George L. Berry Meanwhile Visit A. F. L. Convention.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—John L. Lewis, chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization, and a group of his advisers went to Atlantic City today for informal conferences preparatory to the scheduled meeting of C I O leaders.

He planned to confer with Philip Murray, chairman of the Steel Workers' Organizing Committee, officers of the United Mine Workers of which he is president, and John Brophy, C I O director.

Lewis will watch closely the contest at the American Federation of Labor convention over the seating of Charles P. Howard, president of the Typographical Union of the Federation and secretary of the C I O. Lewis' associates said they expected Howard to fly from Denver to Atlantic City as soon as the controversy is settled.

Lewis and leaders of 32 C I O affiliated unions will be in session the same week that the A. F. of L. has set for a vote of formal expulsion of the original 10 unions which bolted the Federation to start the new industrial union campaign.

Lewis says the C I O now has 3,718,000 members, about 500,000 more than Frank Morrison, the federation secretary-treasurer, said his organization had six weeks ago.

The C I O officers at Atlantic City will review the growth of their unions in the last year, discuss the strikes in the automobile and steel industries and consider special problems encountered by the unions.

Labor Department Conciliator Talks to A. F. of L. Leaders.

By the Associated Press.

DENVER, Oct. 9.—Appearance of two Federal officials at the American Federation of Labor convention gave rise to reports today that President Roosevelt might be actively interested in ending labor's civil war.

James F. Dewey, veteran Labor Department conciliator, has spent several days quietly talking with leaders. Senator George L. Berry (Dem.), Tenn. printing pressmen's union, addressed the convention although he had told friends only a few weeks ago he doubted he would attend.

Berry made a friendly speech, urging the federation to make known its legislative desire to him at all times. He concluded, however, by saying: "I hope our statesmanship will assert itself to the point where we again will have a happy, united trade movement in the United States."

Berry then started a round of hotel room conferences with A. F. of L. leaders.

No convention session was held today and several hundred delegates went by train to Moffat Tunnel on a Saturday holiday.

LEWIS AND C I O ADVISERS GATHER AT ATLANTIC CITY

Heads of 32 Unions to Meet Monday to Consider Growth of Movement and Its Problems.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—John L. Lewis, chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization, and a group of his advisers went to Atlantic City today for informal conferences preparatory to the scheduled meeting of C I O leaders.

He planned to confer with Philip Murray, chairman of the Steel Workers' Organizing Committee, officers of the United Mine Workers of which he is president, and John Brophy, C I O director.

Lewis will watch closely the contest at the American Federation of Labor convention over the seating of Charles P. Howard, president of the Typographical Union of the Federation and secretary of the C I O. Lewis' associates said they expected Howard to fly from Denver to Atlantic City as soon as the controversy is settled.

Lewis and leaders of 32 C I O affiliated unions will be in session the same week that the A. F. of L. has set for a vote of formal expulsion of the original 10 unions which bolted the Federation to start the new industrial union campaign.

Lewis says the C I O now has 3,718,000 members, about 500,000 more than Frank Morrison, the federation secretary-treasurer, said his organization had six weeks ago.

The C I O officers at Atlantic City will review the growth of their unions in the last year, discuss the strikes in the automobile and steel industries and consider special problems encountered by the unions.

Labor Department Conciliator Talks to A. F. of L. Leaders.

By the Associated Press.

DENVER, Oct. 9.—Appearance of two Federal officials at the American Federation of Labor convention gave rise to reports today that President Roosevelt might be actively interested in ending labor's civil war.

James F. Dewey, veteran Labor Department conciliator, has spent several days quietly talking with leaders. Senator George L. Berry (Dem.), Tenn.

printing pressmen's union, addressed the convention although he had told friends only a few weeks ago he doubted he would attend.

Berry made a friendly speech, urging the federation to make known its legislative desire to him at all times. He concluded, however, by saying: "I hope our statesmanship will assert itself to the point where we again will have a happy, united trade movement in the United States."

Berry then started a round of hotel room conferences with A. F. of L. leaders.

No convention session was held today and several hundred delegates went by train to Moffat Tunnel on a Saturday holiday.

METER MEASURES EMOTION BY PERSPIRATION IN PALM

Iowa U. Professor Says It Records Anger, Fear, Joy and Detects Lying.

By the Associated Press.

IOWA CITY, Ia., Oct. 9.—Prof. C. A. Ruckmick of the University of Iowa has devised a meter which he says measures through the perspiration in the palm of the hand all types of emotional disturbance, including anger, fear, joy and that produced by lying.

Lie detectors generally rely on changes in blood pressure and breathing, Ruckmick said, but in his opinion perspiration in the hand is more reliable.

"Activity of the sweat glands is absolutely involuntary and uncontrollable," he explained. "Persons now are learning to control their breathing and other emotional responses, but they cannot control glandular activity. Besides, it is more convenient and comfortable to test the hands than blood pressure or breathing."

When a person lies, the sweat glands in the hand become more active, he said, and this generates electrical currents which are recorded by the detector's galvanometer. These tiny currents are picked up by two copper electrodes which are tightly clamped against the palm of the hand.

Held in Michigan Bank Robbery

ST. LOUIS U. IN 119TH YEAR

Mass and Special Program to Mark Anniversary Friday.

The one hundred and nineteenth scolastic year of St. Louis University will be formally opened next Friday.

Following mass at the College Church students of the university and its corporate colleges, Fontbonne, Webster and Maryville, will assemble at the university gymnasium for a musical program and an address by the Rev. H. B. Crimmins, S. J., president of St. Louis University.

TWO PLEAD GUILTY OF ROBBING BANK

Michigan Fugitives Arrested in Poplar Bluff, Held Under $100,000 Bond.

POPLAR BLUFF, Mo., Oct. 9.—Raymond Pyle, 26 years old, and Marshall Raisin, 26, both of Flint, Mich., pleaded guilty to Federal charges of robbing the Mayville, (Mich.) State Bank, Oct. 6, when arraigned today before United States Commissioner Arno Ponder who bound them over to the Federal grand jury.

Commissioner Ponder set bond for each at $100,000 after Department of Justice agents, who arrested the two men here early today, had asked high bail for them.

Pyle and Raisin were accused of robbing the bank of $2390 in the Federal warrants. Federal agents said they recovered $2000 with the arrest of the pair. The money was hidden in the spare tire of their automobile. The agents said both men probably would be returned to Detroit early next week.

Sergeant Rufus Reed of the State Highway Patrol, who assisted Federal agents in arresting the suspects, said they also had admitted robbing the Otisville (Mich.) State Bank of $975 on July 23. Reed quoted them as saying they staged the Mayville robbery after spending their loot obtained in the previous robbery.

Elvida Reysinger, 19, also of Flint and Raisin's sweetheart, who was arrested with the men, was released from custody after the arraignment this afternoon. Federal agents said she and Raisin had planned to be married today.

THREE MEN FURNISH BAIL ON U. S. MARIJUANA CHARGES

Named in Warrants Charging Violation of New Law for Tax On Weed.

Three men furnished bail yesterday under warrants issued by United States Commissioner John A. Burke charging them with violation of the new Federal law taxing marijuana. The defendants, arrested Friday by Federal narcotic agents and police, and addresses they gave are: Lee Adams, stationary engineer, 1510A South Twelfth street; Raymond Scoberd, laborer, an Indian, 1234A Chouteau avenue, and John F. Hill, farmer, Kimmswick, Mo.

Hill gave $1500 bond and the others $3000 each. They were charged with unlawfully producing, compounding, administering and giving away marijuana on which the Federal tax of $100 an ounce was unpaid and with transferring the weed without the recipients' written order on a Treasury blank. These were the first such charges issued here.

State warrants charging possession of marijuana were issued by the Circuit Attorney's office yesterday against Larry Schmeider, clerk, who said he resided at 3618A Folsom avenue, and Michael Halbram Jr., musician, who gave his address at 4949 Devonshire avenue. They were arrested by detectives Oct. 2 in an automobile at Kennett place and Mississippi avenue.

POLICE BOARD DELAYS RULING ON REPORTED BEATING

CLOSES HEARING IN M'LOUGHLIN CASE

Accuser Sticks to His Original Statement He Was Assaulted by Two Officers After Arrest.

The question "Who flogged McLoughlin?" remained unanswered last evening at conclusion of the hearing held by the Board of Police Commissioners on the union labor officer's charge that he was beaten black and blue, Aug. 26, by two detectives, questioning him at Police Headquarters about a window-smashing at a non-union cleaning shop. The matter was taken under advisement by the Board and the decision as to filing formal charges against the detectives, or dropping the case, will be announced later.

Matthew A. McLoughlin, secretary-treasurer of the Cleaners' and Dye House Workers' local, stuck to his original account of the incident, and presented testimony of witnesses to support parts of it, photographs of his scarred back taken by a newspaper photographer when he was released, and statements of physicians as to the nature of his injuries, including a rupture of the left eardrum.

City Detectives William Dunman and Lyman Price, in their first public statements since McLoughlin accused them of beating him with rubber paddles, hose, fists and feet, denied they had abused the prisoner. As witnesses, they summoned policemen and others who were at police headquarters that night, who told the board members that there was nothing in McLoughlin's appearance, before he was released, to indicate he had been beaten.

Pahl Says He Beat McLoughlin.

To account for McLoughlin's battered condition, Edward F. Pahl, proprietor of a non-union cleaning company, was summoned to repeat his story, told for the first time several days after McLoughlin filed his complaint. He said that he had beaten McLoughlin in a fight behind his cleaning establishment. Pahl testified that after beating the labor officer with his fists, he clubbed him with a tree-limb.

It happened several hours before McLoughlin was arrested, Pahl asserted. "After I told him he had caused me trouble enough, he said he was going to cause me more trouble. I hit him, knocked him down, he got up and I knocked him down again, then picked up a tree limb about this long (indicating with his hand about four feet) and about an inch thick (illustrating with his fingers) and hit him repeatedly with it. I also kicked him in the stomach."

"You indicate a thickness of about an inch and a half?" McLoughlin's attorney asked.

"Yes, but it was not so thick it couldn't bend—it was flexible," the witness replied. The deposition of a physician who attended McLoughlin set forth that his injuries appeared to have been inflicted with a smooth, flexible instrument.

Corroborative Testimony.

His testimony was confirmed by a Negro employe who said he saw the blows struck, and in part by Lowell Fry, another cleaning company proprietor, who said he saw the finish, but could not identify

POLICE BOARD DELAYS RULING ON REPORTED BEATING

Accuser Sticks to His Original Statement He Was Assaulted by Two Officers After Arrest.

The question "Who flogged McLoughlin?" remained unanswered last evening at conclusion of the hearing held by the Board of Police Commissioners on the union labor officer's charge that he was beaten black and blue, Aug. 26, by two detectives, questioning him at Police Headquarters about a window-smashing at a non-union cleaning shop. The matter was taken under advisement by the Board and the decision as to filing formal charges against the detectives, or dropping the case, will be announced later.

Matthew A. McLoughlin, secretary-treasurer of the Cleaners' and Dye House Workers' local, stuck to his original account of the incident, and presented testimony of witnesses to support parts of it, photographs of his scarred back taken by a newspaper photographer when he was released, and statements of physicians as to the nature of his injuries, including a rupture of the left eardrum.

City Detectives William Dunman and Lyman Price, in their first public statements since McLoughlin accused them of beating him with rubber paddles, hose, fists and feet, denied they had abused the prisoner. As witnesses, they summoned policemen and others who were at police headquarters that night, who told the board members that there was nothing in McLoughlin's appearance, before he was released, to indicate he had been beaten.

Pahl Says He Beat McLoughlin.

To account for McLoughlin's battered condition, Edward F. Pahl, proprietor of a non-union cleaning company, was summoned to repeat his story, told for the first time several days after McLoughlin filed his complaint. He said that he had beaten McLoughlin in a fight behind his cleaning establishment. Pahl testified that after beating the labor officer with his fists, he clubbed him with a tree-limb.

It happened several hours before McLoughlin was arrested, Pahl asserted. "After I told him he had caused me trouble enough, he said he was going to cause me more trouble. I hit him, knocked him down, he got up and I knocked him down again, then picked up a tree limb about this long (indicating with his hand about four feet) and about an inch thick (illustrating with his fingers) and hit him repeatedly with it. I also kicked him in the stomach."

"You indicate a thickness of about an inch and a half?" McLoughlin's attorney asked.

"Yes, but it was not so thick it couldn't bend—it was flexible," the witness replied. The deposition of a physician who attended McLoughlin set forth that his injuries appeared to have been inflicted with a smooth, flexible instrument.

Corroborative Testimony.

His testimony was confirmed by a Negro employe who said he saw the blows struck, and in part by Lowell Fry, another cleaning company proprietor, who said he saw the finish, but could not identify McLoughlin as the other man in the fight.

Pahl admitted he had said nothing to police about beating McLoughlin, although he called at headquarters to see him in the "shadow box". McLoughlin was taken into custody on the report that a member of the union had confessed he was paid $20 for each window he broke at the direction of McLoughlin and other union officers.

It developed that the account of the man's alleged confession had been given to police by Pahl, and was denied by the man when he was questioned later by Detective Lieut. Emmet Morrison.

Lieut. Morrison, in charge of the squad that arrested McLoughlin, Ted Graham, business agent of the union, and Allan Flory, president admitted that neither Graham nor Flory had been questioned, because he was "too busy." They were placed in the holdover and released next day with McLoughlin.

In the "show-up" late at night, after McLoughlin said he had been beaten, Morrison said the union officer did not limp nor appear to have been injured.

Police Lieutenant's Statement.

"I noticed, however, when I arrested him that he walked unsteadily, and grunted when he sat down, as if he were in pain," Morrison said. He denied that the prisoner was slapped when being questioned in an upstairs office, or that anyone had addressed him abusively, as McLoughlin asserted. He was not exasperated, he said, by McLoughlin's reluctance to answer questions.

The detective lieutenant was followed to the stand by Police Headquarters attaches, including turnkeys who testified that McLoughlin was in a cell at about the time he said the flogging occurred. Others recalled that he made no request for medical aid, nor did he complain of pain. None saw a bloodstain on his shirt, or noticed that his hearing was affected. Chief of Detective John J. Carroll was among the witnesses.

Lawrence K. Smarr, a Post-Dispatch photographer, identified pictures he had taken of McLoughlin's injured back, and declared that the marks appeared darker in the picture than they were to his eye. He expressed the opinion that something had been applied to the bruises and wounds to make them photograph darker. He was followed by Dr. E. Richman, who said the marks in the photograph were in the same shades when he saw them.

Defense Allegations.

Sigmund Bass, attorney for the policemen, sat quietly by during examination of witnesses who appeared in their behalf, in decided contrast to his activity when McLoughlin's side of the case was presented. Then, each one who took the stand, including McLoughlin, was subjected to a searching cross-examination, as if the prosecuting witness were the one on trial.

Bass asserted, early in the two-day proceeding, his intention to show that one of the motives for the complaint was an effort to keep the police from performing their duty. He gained the admission that McLoughlin stopped to tell his story to a Post-Dispatch reporter after being ordered to the hospital.

Dunman was acquitted in 1929 on a charge of unbecoming conduct brought before the Police Board by Nicholas Polito Jr. Polito said Dunman and three others arrested him for peace disturbance, then beat him at the police station; the detectives contended they were attacked by Polito and seven companions. The peace disturbance charge was dismissed.

KILLED BY NEPHEW IN SHOTGUN FIGHT

Victim, Fisherman Near Alton, Though Fatally Hurt, Wounds Man Who Shot Him.

After being fatally injured in a shotgun fight with his nephew late yesterday, Luther Proffer, a fisherman, who lived in a shack beside the Mississippi River about four miles above Alton, lifted his weapon to his shoulder with one arm and fired a shot which seriously wounded his assailant. He died soon afterward.

The newphew, John Proffer Jr., an employe of a river towing company, son of a fisherman living in a cabin boat anchored a short distance downstream, was peppered in the back and left side with shotgun pellets and is in St. Joseph Hospital, Alton.

The shooting began when Luther Proffer, 38 years old, rebuked his brother and nephew for firing at a wasp's nest in a willow tree. Luther Proffer Jr., 12 years old, who witnessed the shooting, said some of the pellets struck him, his father and a younger brother, Harold, who were baiting fishing lines.

"Dad grabbed up his gun fired through the brush toward where the first shots had come from," related the boy. "Then he went up on the railroad embankment alongside the river, and called to them to stop or he would shoot."

John Proffer Sr. and his son, the latter carrying a shotgun, advanced to meet Luther, who struck his brother with the gun-barrel, the child said. It retaliation, the nephew shot his uncle in the left shoulder. The child said his father braced himself against a telegraph pole, and staggered down the embankment, where he turned and fired as his nephew walked away. The nephew fell on the embankment.

Luther Proffer then walked toward Norman's Landing, but collapsed and died before an ambulance, summoned from Alton, reached the scene. The account given by John Proffer Sr. to Coroner W. W. Billings of Madison County and Police Chief Paul Smith of Alton agreed substantially with that of the boy.

Luther Proffer is survived by his wife and seven children, from 1 year to 16 years old.

Real Estate Dealer Was Nervous and Planned to Take Rest, She Says.

Paul J. Jarzemsky, 7534 Harter avenue, Richmond Heights, has been missing since Sept. 11, when he parked his car at Eighth and Wash streets, his wife reported yesterday.

Jarzemsky, real estate dealer, operated his own business at 1502 St. Louis avenue. He is 43 years old. A veteran of the World War, he had been nervous and spoke of going away for a rest, his wife said. She added that she was unable to account for his prolonged absence. The missing man is described as 5 feet 7 inches tall, weighing 158 pounds, with blond hair and mustache. He was wearing a dark blue suit, gray hat and rimless eyeglasses.

FREIGHT CAR SHED DESTROYED BY FIRE

A one-story car-rebuilding shed of the American Refrigerator Transit Co., on the river front near Barton street, was destroyed yesterday by fire of undetermined origin which started at 1:30 o'clock in the afternoon. Fire Chief O'Boyle estimated the loss at $12,500.

Five refrigerator cars in the building were badly damaged before firemen, responding to two alarms, brought the blaze under control about 20 minutes after it started. The metal sides and roof of the long shed buckled and fell apart as the beam supports and the wooden structure of the cars burned. A small adjoining building, housing a tar heating furnace, was also destroyed.

About 20 men were at work in the building and on a platform outside when the fire started. The men, who escaped without difficulty, said they did not know how the blaze started. Several freight cars on tracks beside the building started to burn, but a locomotive pulled them away.

COURT TO RULE TOMORROW ON BLACK MOTIONS

To Announce Whether It Will Permit Further Proceedings on Two Challenges to Seat.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—Whether to permit further proceedings on two challenges of Justice Hugo L. Black's title to his position on the United States Supreme Court bench was among questions considered by the Justices at three secret conferences during the week. This decision will be announced Monday.

Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes sat with his colleagues around a conference table this afternoon for the final discussion. Justice Black left the conference long before the meeting was over, and this was taken to indicate he had withdrawn while the other Justices discussed the challenges of his elegibility to serve on the Supreme Court.

Challengers of his right to sit on the bench were Albert Levitt, former Federal Judge in the Virgin Islands, and Patrick Henry Kelly, Boston attorney. They contended that the retirement of Justice Willis Van Devanter, whom Black succeeded, did not create a vacancy and that he must resign before Black could be legally appointed. Justice Van Devanter still is subject to duty on lower courts.

In addition, Levitt argued that Justice Black was constitutionally ineligible because he was a member of the Senate which increased the emoluments of Justices by permitting them to retire at full pay after becoming 70 and serving 10 years.

Before the Supreme Court are 300 petitions, some of which affect six Roosevelt administration laws.

Action on the petitions Monday—aside from the Black challenges—will consist of only one word—"denied" or "granted." If they are denied, the decisions of the lower courts remain in effect. If granted, there will be arguments followed by formal opinions.

INFANTILE PARALYSIS DECLINE CONTINUES IN ILLINOIS

Health Department Now Sure Peak of Epidemic Has Definitely Passed.

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Oct. 9.—Another sharp decline in case reports of infantile paralysis was interpreted by the State Health Department today as added evidence that the peak of the epidemic has been definitely passed.

Thirty-five new cases were reported this week, compared with 47 for the preceding week. For the year, 702 cases have been reported, compared with 469 a year ago.

"A continued rather sharp decline in case reports may be expected," the department said.

Washington U. Makes Movies of Ear Tests

Study Shows Waltzing Mice Go Around in Circles for Lack of Balance, Just as People Do When Dizzy.

A study is being conducted at the Washington University School of Medicine of the organs of balance in pigeons, cats, rabbits and Japanese waltzing mice, in an effort to learn more about disease of the inner ear in humans.

Movies of the study, conducted by Dr. Dorothy Wolff, will be shown at the forty-second convention of the American Academy of Ophthalmology and Otolaryngology, which opens today in Chicago. Dr. Lee Wallace Dean of Washington University heads the academy.

Dr. Wolff, assistant professor of applied anatomy in the ear, nose and throat department, began the study a year ago, working chiefly with pigeons in the Oscar Johnson Institute. First she took movies of normal pigeons. Operations were performed on the birds to destroy small areas of the organs of equilibrium in the inner ear.

Pigeons Bob Like Humans.

More movies were then taken of the unsteady pigeons to show how they had been affected. Their bobbing heads, as shown in the movies, resemble the unsteady movement of a human suffering a disease of the inner ear. Later the pigeons were killed for microscopic observations of their organs of balance.

By correlating movies and microscopic studies, it is hoped that more information may be obtained on the function of these organs. The principles involved may then be applied to the study of persons with inner ear diseases, especially those who complain of dizziness and who exhibit abrupt movements of the eyes.

The movies are valuable chiefly because they make it possible for every observer to see for himself the effect of the operations on birds and animals, Dr. Wolff said. They clearly show reactions, whereas a mere listing of conclusions in a paper on the study would represent only the personal observations of the individual research worker.

Waltzing Mice Are Puzzling.

In human beings, as in animals, skull fractures can produce disease of the inner ear, or labyrinthitis, as it is technically called, Dr. Wolff explained. Moreover, diseases of the middle ear, made evident by a discharge, are regarded as serious by physicians because they may affect the inner ear if neglected.

During the course of the Washington University study, a robin unable to stand and apparently suffering from a skull fracture, which had destroyed an area in the semicircular canals, was studied. The bird kept falling on its side like a drunken man.

The Japanese waltzing mice, also included in the study, are named for their circular movements. Apparently they have continuous irritation of the inner ear. When examined, their semi-circular canals were found to contain lesions, but what caused the lesions could not be determined.

The study is financed by the American Association for the Advancement of Science and by the Ball Research Fund of Muncie, Ind.

PROF. E. L. MORGAN OF MISSOURI U. DIES

State Social Security Official Was Visiting Friend of Daughters in St. Louis.

Prof. E. L. Morgan, head of the rural sociology department of the University of Missouri and vice-chairman of the State Social Security Commission, collapsed and died, apparently of natural causes, while visiting Miss Jeanne Wilkerson, a friend of his daughters, at 4953 Washington boulevard yesterday.

He was 58 years old. He came to St. Louis Friday afternoon with a former university associate, Arthur Nebel, director of public assistance for the Social Security Commission, and they intended to return yesterday in time to see the football game at Columbia. Dr. Morgan collapsed shortly after 11 a. m., while thumbing through a book.

He had been on the Missouri University faculty for 15 years. He received his Ph. D. degree from Massachusetts Agricultural College. In 1922, he was elected president of the Missouri Council of State-Wide Agencies, formed to serve as a clearing house for the State public welfare organizations.

Gov. Park in 1934 named him chairman of a State sociological planning committee, composed of outstanding workers in various fields of social work. He also headed the Missouri Conference for Social Welfare. His appointment as vice-chairman of the Social Security Commission of Missouri was made by Gov. Stark June 24.

Dr. Morgan was pronounced dead at City Hospital. Funeral services will be held in Columbia. Besides his wife, Mrs. Mary Morgan, he is survived by four daughters.

MINERS' NEGOTIATORS TRY SIT-DOWN, TOO

Act After Deadlock Over Pay Scale for 38 Men Who Refuse to Come Up.

By the Associated Press.

LANSFORD, Pa., Oct. 9.—A committee of mine workers trying to negotiate settlement of a sit-down strike of 38 coal miners who have been in a shaft 1300 feet underground since Tuesday, went on a sit-down strike of its own late today in the office of the mine superintendent.

John Gaydos, a member of the committee of 15, said the committee would remain in the office of Harold Early, superintendent of the Coaldale Colliery of the Lehigh Navigation Coal Co., until a settlement was reached.

Nearly a thousand miners, their wives and children who watched at the entrance of the mine shaft today to see whether the miners would come up with the committee, which made several trips down to them in an effort to effect a settlement, encircled the superintendent's office and settled down to spend the night.

Evan Stevens, chairman of the committee, announced at a mass meeting of miners who went on a sympathy strike yesterday that the company would sign an agreement giving them pay equal to miners on other levels if they would come up. Nearly 7500 of the company's miners are idle in the strike.

The eighth level has just been opened. The men complained that they were being paid the hourly labor wage of $6.76 a day instead of the yardage rate for loading coal, which would give them $14.77 a day for eight cars.

The proposal was taken to the miners. The committee returned soon after and went to the office of Superintendent Early. They went back to the mine with a note signed by T. D. Lewis, general superintendent for the company, stating the company's plan for settlement, and confirming that the agreement would be signed when the miners abandoned their sit-down.

The committee returned to the superintendent's office, and when they reached an impasse with the management over the rate of pay for driving chutes through which the coal is fed to the mine cars from the vein, began their sit-down.

WHY IRON FIREMAN COAL HEATING OFFERS THE GREATEST VALUE IN AMERICA

Abundant Heat...Cleanliness...Convenience

Low Cost...

Matching the best of other automatic heating at every point, Iron Fireman is the outstanding leader in two important ways.

FIRST—coal heating is more uniform. Coal gives off its heat in a steady, continuous flow. You get away from the "pop-on, pop-off" features of the more volatile automatic fuels.

SECOND—Iron Fireman fuel cost is far lower. Coal is America's permanent fuel supply. It is sold competitively. There are several kinds of good coal in every locality which make satisfactory Iron Fireman fuel. They represent far more heat units per dollar than you can buy in any other fuel. So you save money on fuel —a lot of money—costs are 15 to 50 per cent lower!

There is an Iron Fireman adapted to your present heating plant. It is not necessary to buy a new furnace or boiler unless you need one anyway.

Ask the authorized Iron Fireman dealer nearest you to inspect your present plant and make you a proposition.

CENTRAL JURY SYSTEM RESULTS IN A SAVING

Factor in Reduction From $121,000 to $90,000 for Last Fiscal Year.

The cost of providing jurors in the civil and criminal divisions of Circuit Court, the Courts of Criminal Correction and Probate Court during the fiscal year ending March 31 was $90,052, as compared to a cost of $121,170 during the preceding year, it was stated in the annual report of Jury Commissioner Patrick J. McNamara, issued yesterday.

In the 10 courts of the civil division, where the central assignment system of selecting jurors has been in effect since Dec. 7, 1936, the cost of juror service was reduced from $80,239 for the 1935-1936 fiscal year to $56,313 for the last fiscal year, a decrease of 30 per cent. In the three courts of the criminal division, the cost of providing jurors was reduced from $38,026 to $31,506.

Under orders of the Circuit Judges, the central assignment system was extended to both divisions last Monday, and hereafter all persons summoned for jury service will gather in an assembly room on the eighth floor of the Civil Courts Building, and as jurors are needed they will be selected and assigned to the various courtrooms.

Because the system has been extended, a substantial saving in the cost of selecting jurors, should be effected during the 1937-1938 fiscal year, McNamara stated in the report. The new system will require only about 400 men weekly instead of 950 previously required. Jurors are paid $3 a day.

Horticultural Society's Annual Show to Close at Sunset.

A basket of 10 dahlias of different varieties, grown by Raymond C. Grass, 4 Bellerive Acres, St. Louis County, was awarded the prize for the most meritorious exhibit for amateur gardeners at the annual Dahlia and Fall Flower Show, which opened yesterday in the Floral Display House at Shaw's Garden, sponsored by the St. Louis Horticultural Society. The show will remain open until sunset today.

Grass' exhibit included various physical forms of the dahlia, such as the informal decorative, which has long petals irregular in arrangement and somewhat twisted; the cactus form, with funnel-shaped petals that give the flower a chrysanthemum-like appearance; and the formal-decorative, with regular arrangement of petals.

They are in yellow, red, lavender, red-purple and orange-red colors. Of good size and form, they were unmarred by beetles, grasshoppers or other insects, which have been the bane of amateur dahlia-growers in this section of the country. No matter how much care is used in selection and development of the plant, the chewing insects often ruin the flower after it blooms.

Grass kept the hungry foragers off his dahlias this year and got unmarred blossoms by protecting the plants with a cheese-cloth screen, under which they grew unmolested.

539 Exhibits in Show.

In spite of the September dry weather, there are 539 exhibits in the show, including roses, annuals, biennials, flowering shrubs, and plants suitable for winter house decoration, besides the dahlias.

The best exhibit for gardeners with less than 100 plants was awarded to Perry Wilson, 727 North Thirty-eighth street, East St. Louis, for a basket of 13 dahlias of different varieties.

Largest flower in the show is a dark red dahlia, grown by H. R. Delahoyde. Its thickly-petaled head was 10½ inches in diameter, informal decorative in style and supported on a long, stout stem.

Grass also exhibited the most perfect dahlia in the show, judged for form, development and perfection of bloom. It is a white dahlia with lavender shading.

There are baskets of the bronze and old gold ever-popular "Jane Cowl" dahlia and "Kathleen Norris," a large light pink; single dahlias, and bell-shaped; and the tiny, stiff-petaled pompons, which keep so well when cut and are favorites for the bouquet, table decorations or the coat lapel.

Largest class in the show is the section of annuals and biennials, having 143 exhibits. Plumes of the blood-red celosia, and heads of coxcomb a foot wide, which look like crumpled masses of red velvet, were admired among the exhibits.

Gaillardias, boldly marked in dark brown and gold, sky-blue streamers of blue salvia, and heads of tritoma, which look like strings of fire-crackers, are in the display. French marigolds, and other larger varieties of the plant, make a mass of gold and yellow, which spreads over an entire section on the exhibit benches.

Among the many excellent roses which took prizes were the red Texas Centennial; Betty Uprichard, a pink; Eclipse, a yellow; and Francis Scott Key, another red.

Winter bouquets, made of seed pods, dried foliage, or dried fruits of plants, included clumps of the lunaria, or "dollar plant," so-called because the pod lining is round and silver; and fluffy plumes of pampas and other grasses.

Decorative Shrubs.

Among the decorative shrubs were the chaste bush, whose crushed leaves and spikes of blue flowers have the fragrance of lavender; barberry, heavy with clusters of red berries; and blue-berried, glossy-leafed mahonia.

A miniature fountain in a silver tray for the table splashed water over a floating garden. It is operated by power from an electric cord, and was exhibited by Mrs. Edgar Littman.

Among the miniature floating gardens for table decoration was an oval design by Mrs. Vane Deal, 6029 Potomac street, arranged on a silver tray. In the center are three marigolds, surrounded by a compact border of hundreds of individual pink blossoms of the verbena. These are edged with the two-toned violet and lavender wish-bone flower, all set close together, like brush strokes of a painting.

Wins Most Ribbons.

Mrs. August Eves, 2515 Ashby road, Overland, was awarded the largest number of ribbons of any exhibitor in the show. She took the most prizes in the following sections: annuals and biennials; roses; shrubs and house plants; and shared honors with Miss Marion Chandler in the perennial section.

Other high point winners were: Dahlias, C. R. Leick and H. R. Fleshman; commercial dahlia grower, J. W. Bibb; annuals and biennials, Ida Ruffer; decorative arrangements, Mrs. Deal.

TWO BURN TO DEATH IN HOME

Father of Children at Rockford (Ill.) Used Kerosene in Stove.

By the Associated Press.

ROCKFORD, Ill., Oct. 9.—Two children were burned to death and their parents were badly injured tonight in a fire which destroyed their home at the southeast edge of the city.

The dead were Richard Clankie, 3 years old, and his sister, Loraine, 4 months. Their father, Henry Clankie, was seriously burned and their mother, Hazel, 39, was cut and burned in futile attempts to rescue the children. The fire started when Clankie used kerosene to start a fire in a coal stove.

GOVERNMENT'S REPLY TO FOOD PRICE CRITICS

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—Administration officials, in answer to demands that the Government do something about the high cost of food, said today the larger crops harvested this year already had pushed down the prices of several important items, and eventually would reduce meat prices, about which the complaints center.

Their charts showed also that the farmer was getting a larger share of the dollar spent for food than he has been getting.

Advisers of Secretary of Agriculture Wallace said retail foods recently had been about 30 per cent above the depression low point, but were still about 20 per cent under the 1929 peak.

They said the average family now pays $8.60 for food that cost $8.40 a year ago. During the depression the same amount of food cost only $6.67, but in 1929 it cost $10.90.

Rise in Meat Prices.

Government figures on recent retail meat prices indicated they were from 30 to 40 per cent higher than last year and from 50 to 75 per cent above the depression low.

Fresh vegetables and fruits were cheaper most of this year than last. Large crops of potatoes and apples have contributed to these price declines.

Officials estimated that at recent prices the average laboring man's family needed $359 to purchase a year's supply of 58 principal foods. This compared with $342 last year and $415 in 1929.

Food costs have risen steadily since the low of $264 in 1933. In 1934 the average family spent $295 and in 1935 $331 for the same amount of food.

The farmer's share of the average dollar spent for food had increased from 35 cents in 1933 to 44 cents last month, the Government figures showed.

The farmer's share of the amount spent by the average laboring man has increased from $92 in 1933 to $152 last year. At present prices it will be near $158 this year.

Middle Men's Share.

The middle men also have received a larger share from the average family. They got $170 in 1933 and will receive about $200 this year.

The cost of good grades of beef has caused most of the protests recently. Charts showed the cuts from 100 pounds of beef, at recent prices, brought the butcher $20.24, compared with $15.11 last year and $12.44 in 1933.

Sirloin steaks averaged 48 cents a pound recently for the entire country, compared with 28 cents during the depression. Beef roasts were 25 per cent higher this year than last.

This was attributed to short supplies of corn-fed cattle and the larger demand for good beef because of general business improvement.

The officials said a large corn crop this year would soon increase the supplies of well-finished cattle and hogs, with a probable resulting reduction in retail meat costs.

CHAMPAIGN (ILL.) WOMAN LEAPS TO DEATH IN CHICAGO

Coroner's Jury Returns Verdict of Suicide While Insane From Overwork.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Oct. 9.—A coroner's jury decided Miss Flossie Castor of Champaign, Ill., hurled herself to death from the 12th floor of a Michigan boulevard hotel today during a period of insanity induced by overwork.

Her body, clad in blue silk pajamas and wrapped in a blanket, was found on the roof of a courtway at the fourth floor level.

A handkerchief was stuffed in her mouth. Pinned to her pajamas was a note which said:

"My name is Miss Flossie A. Casto, 509 South Fourth street, Champaign, Ill. Please notify Mrs. Fred B. Campbell of same address, telephone 8788."

Two uncles, Fred B. Campbell, and Edgar B. Williams of Urbana, attended the inquest.

Campbell testified she was in good spirits when she left for work at 7:30 a. m. yesterday but the family reported her disappearance after they ascertained she failed to appear at the place where she was employed as a bookkeeper. She registered at the hotel yesterday.

Water Supply of Buenos Aires, Argentina, Threatened When Gale Drives River Away from Intake Pipes.

By the Associated Press.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Oct. 9.—Sixteen persons were killed and more than 100 were injured in windstorms on the Southeastern Brazilian coast. Reports from Porto Alegre said that hamlets near Santa Maria were damaged and many homes destroyed. Wire communications with the damaged area were disrupted.

Winds created such disturbance in the waters of Rio de la Plata at Buenos Aires, Argentine capital, as to halt navigation. The wind was so violent as to drive the water away from the south shore of the river leaving the intake pipes high and dry above it, threatening the city's water supply for a time.

KOSHER BUTCHERS' STRIKE IN NEW YORK IS OVER

Price of Meat Declines and Officers of Union Are Satisfied With Demonstration.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—A one-week shop-closing "strike" of most of the 5000 members of the Federation of Kosher Butchers in protest against high meat prices ended at sunset tonight, the close of the Jewish Sabbath.

Shops throughout the city were jammed with customers. Prices were two to five cents a pound lower than a week ago, David H. Greenwald, attorney for the federation, said he thought they would continue to go down and that the federation was well satisfied with the outcome of its demonstration.

The reopening of the shops resulted from conferences between butchers' representatives and city officials during the week, at which cognizance was taken of butchers' protests that the large packing houses were selling inferior meat at high-grade prices and an investigation promised.

Separate conferences of consumers' organizations and butchers' organizations are scheduled for next week, to be followed by a meeting with city officials to plan meat ordinances.

BODY IN MISSING MAN'S CLOTHING FOUND IN WOODS

Scoutmaster Sought at Rochester, N. Y., Since July; His Coat On Another Body in Missouri.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Oct. 9.—The body of a man whose clothing was identified as that of Morris B. Close, missing Rochester scoutmaster, was found today by two hunters in a wooded area in Suburban Henrietta.

Authorities expressed the opinion the man had been killed with a hammer or had been shot. The body could be identified only by the clothing.

Close had been sought since July 19, when he disappeared on his way home after visiting his sweetheart, Miss Dorothy Cole, of Albany, in an automobile he had borrowed from a friend.

The body of a man was found in Kingdom City, Mo., covered by a coat later identified as belonging to Close. Later the machine Close had been driving was found abandoned in Memphis, Tenn.

Opinion was expressed tonight that Close had given a ride to a man who killed him when the car approached Rochester, threw the body in a field and fled westward.

Yeiser Yacht Skipper Says Several Others Were Made Ill by Fumes.

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI, Fla., Oct. 9.—Fred Roberts, former master of the yacht owned by the late Henry C. Yeiser Jr., Cincinati capitalist, testified in the United States District Court today that other persons besides Miss Ann Gruner and Mrs. Charlotte Cross Just of St. Louis were made ill by inhaling carbon monoxide fumes on the yacht.

He was testifying in the suit of the two St. Louis women, who are seeking $214,000 in damages, alleging they suffered permanent injuries in March, 1936, by inhaling fumes aboard the yacht, off the Florida coast. On the day the women were overcome, Roberts testified, Yeiser ordered him to get estimates from marine engineers on the cost of changing th exhaust outlet from the stern of they acht to the smokestack. He said portholes in stern staterooms were kept closed so that fumes from the exhaust would not blow into the boat.

The suit is against the Yeiser estate. A retired furniture manufacturer and former son-in-law of the late Julius Fleischman, Yeiser died of a heart attack two days after the date on which the two women say they inhaled the fumes.

Mrs. Just, the divorced wife of Quentin Just, is the granddaughter of Mrs. Gustav Bischoff Sr., with whom she lives at 760 Kent road, St. Louis County. Miss Gruner is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Gruner, 3 Aberdeen place.

EPISCOPALIANS REJECT DECENTRALIZING MOVE

House of Bishops Votes Down Proposal to Curtail Its Authority.

By the Associated Press.

CINCINNATI, Oct. 9. — A proposed step toward decentralization in the Protestant Episcopal Church met defeat today when the House of Bishops of the triennial General Convention rejected a proposal to curtail its authority.

A constitutional amendment, which would have permitted the House of Bishops of a province (a district composed of dioceses) to accept the resignation of a Bishop, was voted down, 53 to 29, without debate. The change was recommended by the committees on canons and amendments.

Logan H. Roots, missionary bishop of Hankow since 1904; Frederick R. Graves, missionary bishop of Shanghai; John M. McCormick, bishop of Western Michigan, Nov. 1; Paul Matthews, bishop of New Jersey, effective Nov. 1; E. W. Saphore, bishop of Arkansas, Jan. 1, 1938; Robert C. Jett, bishop of Southwestern Virginia, May 17, 1938; Samuel Babcock, suffragan bishop of Massachusetts, Jan. 1, 1938, and A. C. Thomson, bishop of Southern Virginia.

Eight Bishops Resign.

The house then accepted the resignations of eight Bishops because of age or impairment of health. They were:

The house also disapproved an amendment which would have permitted lay readers to administer the chalice, or communion cup. The amendment was designed to shorten the communion service in small parishes where the clergyman does not have assistant priests.

The house will vote, probably next week, on another constitutional amendment which would allow Suffragan Bishops a vote in the house. The Suffragans already are permitted seats in the house.

The controversy over the Church League for Industrial Democracy, which is conducting forums in connection with the convention, cropped out again in the House of Deputies.

Resolution on Independents.

Samuel F. Houston of Philadelphia, in behalf of the Pennsylvania delegation, asked that the meetings of independent church groups expounding "special theories" be listed separately from the official convention program. His resolution was referred to a committee and a motion to bring it up for a vote immediately was defeated. A similar proposition was defeated in the House of Bishops a few days ago.

Meanwhile, the league heard Lawrence A. Oxley, Negro field representative of the United States Employment Service, describe what he termed the "abject plight of thousands of Negro workers."

"It is rather paradoxical," he asserted, "to see the church in America emphasizing missionary work in China, Japan, Africa and other far countries when at our very door the plight of the Negro is comparable to and in many cases far worse than the abject condition of so-called heathens in the foreign mission field."

Signs asking visiting Episcopalians to aid their strike, were taken from downtown drug store pickets by police on request of John J. Rowe, Chairman of the Committee on Arrangements of the Convention.

The signs read: "Welcome Episcopalians. Help us get a living wage."

Rowe said he asked that the signs be removed because no authority had been given to use the word "Episcopalian." Stanley Ruttenberg, Committee for Industrial Organization research director, said he planned a suit to determine the authority for the action.

Vilhjalmur Stefansson to Speak.

Vilhjalmur Stefansson, polar explorer, will open the 1937-38 lecture program of the University Club with a talk at a dinner the evening of Oct. 21.

16-YEAR SENTENCE FOR KILLING HUSBAND

Paducah, Ky., Woman Brought Into Court on Cot to Hear Verdict.

By the Associated Press.

PADUCAH, Ky., Oct. 9. — Mrs. Gladys Stembridge Adams, 38 years old, was convicted tonight of voluntary manslaughter and sentenced to 16 years in prison for shooting her husband, Ben S. Adams, 51, a lawyer, to death in his office here July 15, 1936.

Brought into court on the cot from which she testified Thursday and Friday, Mrs. Adams was motionless as the jury's verdict, reached after two hours' deliberation, was read. Her attorneys said a motion for a new trial would be filed Monday.

Mrs. Adams, a former Sunday School teacher and choir singer, admitted shooting her husband during an argument over a divorce suit he had filed, but said she did it in self defense when both were grappling for a pistol in an open desk drawer.

"I knew he was going to kill me," she said. Mrs. Adams is frail, weighing only 70 pounds.

Sobbing intermittently, Mrs. Adams said she and her husband had argued over his demands that she give him certain evidence she planned to use in defense against the divorce suit. Then, she said, he began beating her. She said she fired at him "while he was still beating me."

Mrs. Adams named Mrs. Alta Nanney, her husband's secretary, as the "other woman" and said Adams had acted as attorney for Mrs. Nanney in obtaining a divorce. She related she once had peeked through a letter slit in the door of her husband's private office and had seen him and his secretary embracing.

Another time when she found them together, she said, they beat her unconscious. Chest injuries suffered at the time, she said, still bother her. She said the injuries had caused her to lose 50 pounds during the time she has been in jail.

Defendants in the suit are the Rev. Arthur C. Dr. Nitz said the estate comprised about $2000 in cash, and the contractor's home at 4347 Washington boulevard. The daughters are principal beneficiaries under the will, with the church receiving a small share of the estate.

LYER DAHL'S WIFE TO VISIT HIM IN SPAIN

Franco Authorizes Trip by Plane—Pilot Taken From Jail to Hospital.

By the Associated Press.

SALAMANCA, Spain, Oct. 9. — Harold F. Dahl, American flyer for the Spanish Government who was captured, sentenced to death and granted clemency by insurgents, tonight awaited the arrival of his wife, a former American stage singer.

Insurgent General Francisco Franco made the visit possible by granting James A. Mollison, noted British flyer, permission to bring Mrs. Dahl here from Cannes by plane.

Dahl was moved from prison to a hospital where he will be treated for a slight infection following an abdominal operation performed several months ago in France.

Word was communicated of Mollison's offer, and it was decided immediately to permit him to cross the border with an escort of insurgent planes on whatever date he may decide.

The insurgent air ministry specified that Mollison and Mrs. Dahl need not bother about passports, and Mrs. Dahl will be given permission to use the passport with which she visited Madrid.

Dahl's removal to the hospital by officers amounted to a parole, inasmuch as he will have full freedom of the hospital grounds. Complete freedom now is considered only a matter of a short time in the normal course of prisoner exchange.

The Air Ministry said: "Gen. Franco, in view of the wishes of Mrs. Dahl, wife of the American pilot Dahl, who expressed the desire to come to nationalist Spain to visit her husband, whose death sentence imposed by a court martial had been commuted along with those of three Russians, has granted leave to Mrs. Dahl to come to Spain for such reasons."

Clemency for Dahl was obtained through a written appeal made to Franco by Mrs. Dahl.

MAN GETS 20 YEARS TO LIFE FOR KILLING TWO AGED AUNTS

He Lays Ax Murder at Amsterdam, N. Y., to Liquor and Drugs in Plea to Judge.

By the Associated Press.

FONDA, N. Y., Oct. 9.—William G. Serviss, 45 years old, pleaded guilty today of second degree murder in the killing of two aged aunts whose property was bequeathed him. He was sentenced to from 20 years to life imprisonment.

"It would never have happened if it had not been for liquor and dope," Serviss told Supreme Court Justice Ellsworth C. Lawrence. "It seemed like a horrible nightmare."

Serviss was indicted for first degree murder after Mrs. Mary C. Enders, 81, and her sister, Mrs. Jennie V. Enders, 84, were found murdered with an ax in their home at Amsterdam, N. Y., last June 28. He pleaded guilty of killing Mrs. Mary Enders.

District Attorney William J. Grangle, who consented to the plea, said he would press the indictment charging first degree murder of the other sister should Serviss ever be paroled from prison.

SOVIET WAR GAMES HELD AT VLADIVOSTOK

(Copyright, 1937, New York Tribune, Inc.)

MOSCOW, Oct. 9.—A mock naval attack on the Soviet port of Vladivostok, in Eastern Siberia, with a majority of the city's civilian population wearing gas masks, was completed recently with a decisive victory for the forces defending the city, according to the latest issues of Far Eastern Siberian papers arriving in Moscow today.

While Japanese battleships actually were bombarding Shanghai on Sept. 27, the Soviet Union's naval, land and aerial forces combined in the largest single performance of the annual fall maneuvers to repel a sham attempt to seize Vladivostok. The papers described the maneuvers as a smashing defeat of the "enemy."

The "Blues," who attacked the port for formidable naval and aerial forces, were compelled by the "Reds" to abandon the attempt after suffering heavy losses. The attacking "Blues" sent 10 ships to destroy the "Reds" naval base in the harbor after midnight during a heavy storm on the Pacific, and without a declaration of war. The Russians have not forgot that the Japanese began operations at Port Arthur in 1905, at Mukden in 1931, and at Shanghai in 1937 without once waiting to declare war.

In less than an hour the city was prepared to defend itself. Most of the civilians wore gas masks, trolley cars and automobiles moved without lights and the fire department and other municipal services organized defense against gas and chemical bombs.

It was admitted that the "Blues" succeeeded in dropping a considerable quantity of bombs around the city, but without direct hits. The counter-attack of the "Reds" chased the "Blue" airplane carriers temporarily from the vicinity, but the battleships returned a few hours later to engage in an artillery duel with the shore batteries. At long range, it was reported that the results of this phase of the maneuvers were inconclusive.

Both sides engaged in intensive espionage activities, hoping to learn the other's plans, according to report.

Officers of both "Blues" and "Reds" had signed an agreement for "socialist competition" before the battle.

ROPER URGES FARM WOMEN TO FIND ECONOMIC BALANCE

Says "We Need to Look More" to Foreign Market Gains Than to "Aid From Federal Treasury."

By the Associated Press.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Oct. 9.—Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper asserted today that "the most pressing problem of our time" is that of "keeping in balance the economic and social segments of civilization."

In a prepared address he told the Pee Dee District meeting of the South Carolina Council of Farm Women that "women should study to find a way to keep a balance."

Turning to the farm situation, Roper said "fundamental to national safety is the economic security of the American farmer."

He said the farmer must have a value for his products on a parity with things he has to buy and, to this end, "we need to look more to the reduction of trade barriers that affect his foreign markets than to financial aid from the Federal treasury.

"The need is for the farmers of the United States to use less land for a few big crops and more good land for a greater variety of crops. It is not entirely a matter of government policy. It is also a matter of intelligent initiative by the farmers in making side use of their land and better safeguarding against land deterioration and erosion."

DRIVE FOR SYMPHONY SEASON SUBSCRIBERS

Campaign to Add 600 Will Begin Oct. 18—First Concert Nov. 5.

A campaign to obtain 600 additional season subscribers for the approaching season of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra will be opened Oct. 18 and continue through Oct. 26. The Women's Association and the Junior Division of the St. Louis Symphony Society will conduct the drive.

More than 400 workers will take part. Offices have been opened on the first floor of the Municipal Auditorium. Mrs. Frank M. Mayfield has been named general chairman and Mrs. Charles M. Rice, vice-chairman.

Not only are season subscribers assured of regular seats, but they save 20 to 30 per cent, Mrs. Mayfield pointed out. For example, $2.50 and $2 seats average $1.94 and $1.66 on a seasonal basis. The subscription prices, which will be discontinued after the first pair of concerts, are: lower floor, $35 and $30; mezzanine, $35; lower balcony, $25 and $18; upper balcony, $14 and $10.

The orchestra will begin its fifty-eighth annual season, and its seventh under the leadership of Vladimir Golschmann, Friday afternoon, Nov. 5, and Saturday evening, Nov. 6. Soloists during the season will be Yehudi Menuhin, Efrem Zimbalist, Samuel Dushkin and Scipione Guidi, violinists; Josef Hofmann, Robert Casadesus, Artur Schnabel, Artur Rubinstein and Jose Echaniz, pianists; Gaspar Cassado and Max Steindel, violoncellists; George Rasely, Winifred Cecil, Lilian Knowles, Chase Baromeo, Charles Kullman, Frederick Baer, Helen Traubel, Marion Telva and Herbert Gould, vocalists.

NECESSITY

"With two small children in the house, a cough remedy like REM is a necessity. Both of them take it without coaxing."

Mr. Cliff C. Drier
5124 A Riverview Blvd., St. Louis, Mo.

The Reason:

Like other parents, Mr. Drier has found that "pleasant taste" is an important thing in getting children to take a medicine when they need it. But that's only one of the reasons why REM is so effective:

(1) REM is made specifically for coughs resulting from colds.

(2) REM is a real cough medicine, not just a "tickle stopper."

(3) REM is thorough because it works two ways . . . not only in the throat, but also systemically. That's what makes it so very much more effective.

So if you have a cough resulting from a cold, don't fool around with it! Go after it with a real cough medicine like REM.

ICKES ACCUSES UTILITY OF BUYING INFLUENCE

Electric Rate Cut After Iowa City, Ia., Drops Plan for Municipal Plant.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—Secretary of the Interior Ickes asserted today the Iowa City Light & Power Co. had offered "a monetary consideration to obtain political influence" by reducing rates following a vote on a municipal utility proposal.

A PWA grant of $143,000 for a new electric generating plant and distribution system in Iowa City was authorized. After the grant had been made, PWA officials said, new city officials were elected who "refused to go ahead with the project."

Ickes' aids made public a letter sent to an Iowa City consumer, under signature of R. E. Taylor, vice-president of the utility, when a retroactive rate reduction was ordered.

The letter said the refund was in line with "the pledge made by this company in its proposal of June 20, 1935; namely, to put into effect a new schedule of electric rates and, through refunds to consumers, to make that schedule retroactive to the rate of the first meter readings in July, 1935."

"The passage by the City Council on Aug. 6, 1937, of ordinance No. 1782, repealing the ordinance establishing a municipally-owned electric light and power plant and distribution system and the passage on the same date of a resolution withdrawing an application to the Public Works Administration for a loan and grant to finance the project, make possible this refund and reduction in the cost of electric energy," the letter added.

"In our letter of June 20, 1935, it was stated that the reduced rates therein proposed would be effective and the impounded funds would be released (to consumers) upon abandonment by the city of its intention to establish a municipal electric light and power plant and distribution system. Interpreting the ordinance and resolution of Aug. 6, 1937, as a pledge in good faith by the City of Iowa City that the threat of destruction of the company's property has been removed, the impounded funds have been released and the new schedule of rates made effective from the dates impounding ended."

PAPAL DELEGATE

SEVEN ARCHBISHOPS IN PONTIFICAL MASS

Two public meetings in Municipal Auditorium and a pontifical mass at St. Louis Cathedral will be held today as part of the Third National Catechetical Congress of the Confraternity of Christian Doctrines, Catholic organization for promotion of religious education.

Attendance at the meetings, which began yesterday and will last through Tuesday evening, exceeded all expectations. Registration had reached 4000 at 5 p. m. yesterday, of which it was estimated 2000 were nuns, 1500 lay people, and 500 clergymen. The Coronado Hotel, headquarters for the event, was unable to take care of all the visitors and many went to downtown and West End hotels. The supply of programs and badges was exhausted. With special busses bringing visitors here from Missouri and Illinois towns today, the registration is expected to increase considerably.

Papal Delegate Here.

At pontifical mass in the Cathedral at 10:30 a. m.. today, the seven archbishops and 29 bishops who are attending the congress will enter the Cathedral in a body, dressed in their episcopal robes. Archbishop Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, Papal Delegate to the United States, will preside at the mass, and will make a 20-minute speech following it. Archbishop John J. Glennon will give the sermon, and the celebrant will be Auxiliary Bishop Christian H. Winkelmann of St. Louis, who is convention chairman.

Archbishop Cicognani arrived in St. Louis last night and is the guest of Archbishop Glennon.

It is expected that Convention Hall, Municipal Auditorium, will be filled for the mass meetings there at 2 and 8 p. m. Archbishop John G. Murray of St. Paul, Bishop Emmet M. Walsh of Charleston and Bishop Edwin V. O'Hara of Great Halls, Minn., will speak at the afternoon meeting. "The Parent-Educator" will be the topic tonight. St. Louis parents of children from pre-school to high school ages will take part in demonstrations of home-religious training on the stage. They will sit around tables, as if they were at home, and conduct informal conversations, which will be amplified through microphones. Dr. Thomas E. Purcell of St. Louis, former president of the National Council of Catholic Men, will deliver the chief address.

Demonstration by Pupils.

Five hundred public school pupils took part in demonstration classes on religious instruction at Rosati-Kain High School, 4389 Lindell bulevard. Forty classes were conducted by clergymen and laymen. Nearly 2000 nuns were spectators.

At the parent-educator session of the congress at the Coronado yesterday afternoon, the Rev. J. M. McSorley, C. S. P., of New York, contributing editor of the Catholic World, pointed out that a great many parents have little opportunity to read or study sufficiently to make them proficient in giving religious training to their children. To remedy this, special books and pamphlets, in simple language, are being published, he said. At a dinner last night, attended by diocesan directors, the Rev. Father Henry F. Graebenstein of Washington declared that uniformity of sermons at Sunday masses, in both subject and manner of treatment and illustration, aids in impressing Catholic doctrine on school children.

MRS. ROOSEVELT 53 TOMORROW

First Lady Plans to Ignore Anniversary and Stay Young.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9. — Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt was back in the White House today after an "off the record" vacation.

She planned to ignore her fifty-third birthday tomorrow in the belief that "the more you forget your birthdays as you grow older, the younger you stay." Instead of a celebration, she arranged for a press conference, the first with Washington reporters since early in July.

BUREAU OF AIR COMMERCE WILL ASK FOR $31,000,000

Director Says Increase Is Necessitated by Strides in Civil Aviation.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9. — Director Fred D. Fagg Jr., said today the Bureau of Air Commerce would ask for about $31,000,000 for the next fiscal year. Hearings will start Tuesday before the Budget Bureau to work out a recommendation to Congress.

Fagg said this amount—nearly double the appropriation for the current fiscal year ending next June 30—"will be needed because of the tremendous strides in civil aviation which it is this bureau's responsibility to foster."

"If we get the $31,000,000 we think will be needed for the next fiscal year," he continued, "at least $25,000,000 of it will be used in promoting aviation, that is, expanding existing facilities to aid flying; widening weather report activities; enlarging radio directional guidance of planes; controlling airway traffic and providing landing fields."

Automatic Transmission Available for Both of New Oldsmobile Cars

Six and Eight Restyled and Improved Mechanically—Refinements in Their Interiors.

The forty-first series of cars made by Oldsmobile—the Oldsmobile Six and Eight for 1938—which were introduced the past week, are materially changed in styling, have been improved mechanically and can be had with the automatic safety transmission.

The front end designs of the two models are smartly contrasted. The radiator of the Six has heavy, die-cast horizontal louvres, deeply recessed and plated in bright chrome. The grille of the Eight is a single die-casting with two narrow horizontal bars alternating with a single bar of somewhat greater width. The grilles of both cars taper in a "V" to meet the fender aprons, which sweep in an unbroken line which is relieved only by slotted louvres across the base of the apron.

A different hood louvre, to give invisible outlets for engine heat, is made possible by carrying the body moulding forward along the hood and extending it slightly from the side. The louvre opening is in the bottom of this moulding extension.

Some of the Changes.

The front and rear bumpers both carry double guards in chrome. The running boards are independently mounted and made of moulded rubber which conceals a built-in aerial. Rear fender and body contours have been further refined to reduce wind drag. Fenders are deeply valanced and of heavier steel, with bullet-type headlights mounted low on the fender crowns. They look like parts of the fenders, but can be taken out. Safety glass is standard throughout each model.

New interior design with choice of upholstery fabrics includes a safety instrument panel free of projecting knobs. Headlights are larger and have new reflectors, driving and passing beam and toe button control.

The battery now is of the long, narrow type, with cells end to end, and is placed alongside the engine. This makes it more accessible and, because of short battery leads, gives faster cranking.

The Oldsmobile Six has a 117-inch wheelbase and 95 h. p. engine, the Eight, a 124-inch wheelbase and 110 h. p. motor. Each car comes in seven Fisher body types with "turret tops" and unisteel construction—two-door sedan, two-door touring sedan with trunk, four-door sedan, four-door touring sedan with trunk, business coupe, convertible coupe and club coupe.

How Transmission Works.

The automatic safety transmission is said to give gasoline economy up to 18 to 20 per cent and to make driving much simpler and easier.

Control is by a short lever on the steering column. There are four positions for the control lever: neutral; first forward (first and second gears); second forward (first, third and fourth gears), and reverse, which can be entered only by pressing a safety button on the end of the control arm.

The foot clutch is used only to start and stop. With the clutch disengaged, the control arm is moved to first forward position. When the clutch is released, the car starts forward in first gear, automatically changing to second at a road speed of about 10 miles per hour. Without declutching or releasing the accelerator, the driver then may flick the control lever to second forward position which permits a shift to third, an extremely fast acceleration gear. At about 23 miles per hour, the transmission automatically shifts on to fourth gear or direct drive, which is the economy or cruising gear.

If a driver wishes to remain in the third or pickup gear, he keeps the accelerator all the way down. The car then will continue to pick up in that gear to 65 m. p. h., when there will be an automatic change to fourth. If it is desired to move back from fourth to the third gear for hill climbing or quick pickup, a driver, at any road speed below 55 m. p. h., may go into that gear instantly by fully depressing the accelerator pedal. On down grades, one may flick the control from second to first forward position, thus employing second gear as a decelerating force.

Buick's Maximum Price Rise 4 Per Cent

Harlow H. Curtice, president of the Buick division of General Motors, announces that increases in prices of all Buick closed cars have been kept to a maximum of 4.1 per cent.

The executive said that the new prices represent increases from $7 to $97 over 1937 prices, and are from less than 1 per cent to 4.1 per cent over last year. The larger increases, he said, are in the higher-priced lines of cars. He added that the 1938 prices were lower than were generally anticipated.

Cadillac-La Salle Spends $6,000,000 on New Car Preparations

More than $6,000,000 has been spent on factory research and retooling by the Cadillac division of General Motors in preparing for introduction of the 1938 Cadillac and La Salle cars later this month, D. E. Ahrens, general sales manager, told a meeting of distributers and dealers here Tuesday. Ahrens said also that the factory's 1938 program was based on expectation of a considerable increase of retail business.

"We accept the current recovery in major industries as sound indication that economic conditions will continue to improve," he said.

"Since my trip here a year ago, steel has increased production by 32 per cent. Construction is up 20 per cent. Payrolls have been advanced 30 per cent. Dividend payments show a 28 per cent gain over 1937.

"Further, taking a composite of all lines of business, we find 33 out of 38 have scored substantial increases.

This year, in 11 months through September, the industry sold 4,176,000 cars. In a similar period the year before, sales volume was 3,819,000."

"Our leadership in sales gains over 1936 was chiefly responsible for the best Cadillac-La Salle volume in our 35-year history, despite a midwinter car shortage that was never entirely overcome."

C. V. Crockett of the engineering department described the mechanical and appearance changes in the 1938 cars. F. J. Denny, advertising manager for Cadillac-La Salle, sketched plans behind an enlarged advertising budget, and R. L. Rickenbaugh, sales promotion manager, told the program of his department.

Mohawk Tire Factory Has 25th Anniversary

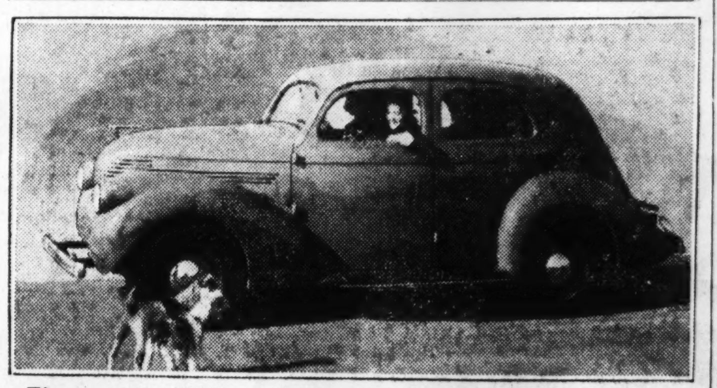
The New Willys Sedan



The new 1938 Willys sedan, which comes in standard, de luxe and custom types. While the original styling of the Willys has been retained, certain refinements have been made. The car's overall length is 178 inches. Mechanical improvements include faster first and second speeds, better body sealing against heat, dust and rain, and finer upholstery tailoring.

Hudson and Terraplane Improvements Explained At Meeting of Dealers

C. G. Beeching, sales manager in charge of zones for the Hudson Motor Car Co., and his assistant, C. B. Molster, attended a meeting of 347 Hudson and Terraplane dealers held Friday at the Coronado Hotel. Beeching said that the new 1938 line would include a Hudson Eight, a Hudson Six and a Hudson Terraplane with the roomiest bodies yet built by the Hudson factory. The front seats will be 55 inches wide and there will be more leg room in the rear compartment.

The front end styling includes a new treatment of the grille and longer hoods. There are also refinements in the interiors and a number of engineering improvements.

"In the 1938 cars, Hudson's selective automatic shift transmission, which has led the industry in the growing trend toward controlled automatic gearshifting, has important new features," Beeching said. Proved by over a billion miles of owner driving, the transmission clears the front compartment of all levers and enables a driver to select gears handily up under the steering wheel with a flick of the finger and shift at any and all speeds by a touch of the toe without ever touching the clutch pedal. So far reaching has been this exclusive Hudson contribution to easier and safer driving, that other manufacturers are announcing a similar development for the coming year.

Hudson will enter the 1938 selling season with the largest sales organization in the past seven years, 1446 new distributors and dealers having joined the company in the past year. The most aggressive sales and advertising program ever launched by the Hudson factory will start soon.

Swift Changing of Tires.

Alaska-New York Car Truck Run With Load Will Start on Oct. 18

Potatoes From Matanuska Colony to Be Carried on 4700-Mile Experimental Trip.

What is said to be the first truck run from Alaska to New York City with a pay load will start Oct. 18 at Ketchikan. The truck will be a standard Dodge 1½-ton model, which will carry 3½ tons of potatoes from the Matanuska farm colony. It is planned to make the run of about 4700 miles in 13 days, down the Alaska coast, through British Columbia, and then via Seattle, Walla Walla., Ore., Salt Lake City, Denver, Chicago and Philadelphia.

"This test trip should give an impetus to highway building plans for the Alaskan country, Joseph D. Burke, director of truck sales for Dodge, said. "Several months ago we demonstrated the feasibility of long-distance hauling by motor truck from the southern part of Mexico to Ottawa, Can. That venture has since proved that the efforts expended upon it were appreciated by all types of business men and city and government officials."

By J. Roy Stockton.
Of the Post-Dispatch Sports Staff.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—Carl Hubbell's butterfly curve, fluttering through the shadowy mists of the Polo Grounds this afternoon, blurred the sights of the Yankee gunners and kept the forlorn-hope Giants in the struggle for the championship of the baseball world.

National Leaguers were right about Hubbell. They said he never had pitched two bad games in succession and that he never would. And the southpaw, knocked out of the first game of this struggle for the National game's highest honors, lived up to his reputation. He turned in a quietly-brilliant performance. He held the devastating sluggers of Joe McCarthy to six hits and one clearly earned run and was returned victor, 7 to 3, when his comrades shook off the shackles of a three-day batting slump and pounded Irving Hadley and Ivy Paul Andrews, two lesser members of the American League staff, for a dozen hits and more than twice as many runs as they had scored in all of the previous games.

Despite Hubbell's brilliance and the fact that the Giants finally looked like major leaguers as they swung their war clubs, the National League's chances of regaining the world championship tonight were still considered remote, mathematical, rather than actual. For there is no other Hubbell and without another Hubbell the hill that confronts the Giants seems all too steep. To block the path of the Yankees to the American League's second successive world title, the Giants would have to add three successive victories to their triumph of today. And that is a herculean task.

Gomez to Hurl Today.

Tomorrow, when the battle is joined at the Polo Grounds in the fifth phase of the championship competition, Vernon "Lefty" Gomez will be on the firing line for the Yankees, and if the Giants could clear that hurdle, they still would have to cope with the curves, the fast ball and the slugging ability of Charles "Red" Ruffing.

While Joe McCarthy can present his pitching ace in the fifth game, Manager Bill Terry of the National Leaguers finds himself with an acute problem on his hands. It is considered most likely that he will turn again to Cliff Melton, the angular left-hander with the huge sugar-bowl ears. And remember that Gomez will go to the hill with three days' rest, while Melton, if he is Terry's choice, will be laboring under the handicap of having worked Thursday and Friday.

It seems to be Terry's wisest choice, however, and he indicated today, before Hubbell scored his brilliant victory, that Melton would be his choice. Somebody asked Bill if he would have Melton in the

MUSTANGS SCORE ON PASS FROM 1-YARD LINE

Other Touchdown Results From 70-Yard Run After S. M. U. Player Recovers Mate's Fumble.

By James M. Gould.

Had the Washington U. Bears had an offense to match their defense at Francis Field yesterday, there might have been another startling upset. For three of the four periods, they held the highly-touted Southern Methodist Mustangs scoreless, but, in the second quarter, the Texans scored two touchdowns, one deserved and the other very flukish and win over the Bears by a score of 14 to 0.

The attendance was about 7500.

The Bears played without their coach, Jimmy Conzelman whose wife was operated upon yesterday. Jimmy didn't see the game as he was with her. The Bears were under the direction of Assistant Coach Frank Kopczak, former Notre Dame star, and a fine job he did. His generalship was superb at all times and he is entitled to a great share of the credit going to the Bears for their best game of the season.

The First Touchdown.

A 45-yard completed pass, Stidger to Crouch, early in the second quarter, put the ball on the Bears' five-yard line. Three plays failed but, on the fourth, Morrison threw into the end-zone where Acker caught it for a touchdown. That was the deserved touchdown and Stidger converted the extra point.

Then, with a minute and a half to play, came the undeserved one. With the ball on their own 20-yard line, the Methodists started a run with Belville carrying the ball. When tackled, he fumbled and the ball not touching the ground, went in the air to Dewell, left end, who ran the 68 yards after Belville was tackled. Belville place-kicked the extra point.

The Bears made nine first downs to 11 for the Mustangs though they were outgained both in running and passing by a wide margin. They simply didn't have the offense to score. They did have a defense which, with even breaks, would have held the Mustangs to a 7-0 victory.

Few Penalties.

Both teams substituted freely and the game was one of the cleanest ever played here. Penalties were few and far between. It was a hard fight every minute and there was every indication that, with the game under their belts, the Bears would be pretty tough from now on.

Every man on the Washington team played a great defensive game with, perhaps, Gene Brew standing out. For Southern Methodist, Stidger on offense and Sanders, a guard, on defense, were in the spotlight.

After the game, Coach Matty Bell of the Mustangs, spoke very highly of the Bears. "We had to play the best game of our season to win and then we didn't win by very much," he said.

There was little question as to

M'KECHNIE TO BE MANAGER AT CINCINNATI

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—The Cincinnati Reds tonight announced the appointment of Bill McKechnie, pilot of the Boston Bees since 1929, as manager of the club for a two-year term.

McKechnie, whose contract with Boston expired Oct. 3, takes the place vacated three weeks ago by Chuck Dressen, who was replaced after he had insisted upon learning whether the club intended to renew his contract for 1938. Bobby Wallace, former scout, served as temporary manager of the Reds in the last few weeks of the season.

The Bees, under McKechnie, finished fifth in the National League during the 1937 season.

Before going to Boston, McKechnie managed the St. Louis Cardinals and Pittsburgh Pirates, winning National League pennants with both clubs. He guided the Pirates to the top in 1925 and the Cards in 1928.

The appointment of McKechnie came after Warren Giles, general manager of the Reds, had surveyed a long list of applicants for the position, who began filing their names as soon as it became certain Dressen would not be retained. Among these were Rogers Hornsby, ousted manager of the St. Louis Browns; Jim Bottomley, who succeeded Hornsby at St. Louis this season, and Casey Stengel, former Brooklyn pilot, as well as "around 100" lesser known applicants.

Regarded as one of the most astute judges of baseball material in the business, McKechnie never was able to lift Boston above fourth place. At Pittsburgh, from 1922 to 1926, his clubs never finished below third. He went to St. Louis as coach in 1927 and the next year was appointed manager to succeed Bob O'Farrell.

After winning the league title in his first season with the Cards, McKechnie figured in the precedent-setting "firing" of a pennant-winning manager. Dissatisfied because

Mississippi U. Hands Billikens First Loss Of Season, 21 to 0

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

OXFORD, Miss., Oct. 9. —Led by Ray Hapes, a southern gentleman with few ideas about hospitality for visiting football teams, the University of Mississippi eleven scored in three of the four quarters to hand the St. Louis University Billikens their first defeat of the 1937 season, 21 to 0, here today.

Hapes opened the scoring for "Ole Miss" with a 78-yard run for a touchdown after taking a Billiken punt early in the first quarter and galloped 22 yards off tackle for the second score in the second period.

A fumble led to the third Rebel score when, late in the third period, Bob Shea, Billiken quarterback, dropped a punt and Bill Williams, Mississippi tackle, recovered on the St. Louis U. 12-yard line.

Lenhart Goes Over.

The quarter ended before the Rebels could score but Johnny Lenhardt, "Ole Miss" fullback cracked through guard and tackle on the fifth play of the fourth period for the day's last touchdown.

Bruiser Kinard, Mississippi tackle, who received mention for an All-American berth by three selectors last season, kicked perfect placements for the extra point after each of his team's touchdowns.

Denny Cochran, sophomore halfback from E. St. Louis and Beno Best, co-captain, tackle, were the two Billikens who seemed to stand in no awe of the confident Southerners.

Denny passed and punted the Billikens to the 10-yard line toward the close of the first period when St. Louis U. made its only serious threat to score while Best, playing a great defensive game, accounted for nearly half of his team's tackles.

Bill Cochran Injured.

Bill Cochran, Denny's brother and another Billiken half back suffered two broken ribs during the game while Frank Hagan, an end, suffered cuts about his face and neck which necessitated eight stitches.

The Billikens suffered numerous other injuries of a minor nature during the contest. Carl Totsch, half back, Len Gorman and Red Drabelle, centers, Carl Yates, a guard, and Mel McGonnigle, a half back, being forced out of play. The Billikens departed for St. Louis immediately after the game.

Playing opposite Les Cagle, senior Billiken tackle, Kinard was unable to display his all star tendencies during the first and second quarters but speeded up his play during the last half to crash through and stop most of the plays aimed at his side of the line.

STANFORD GAINS 12-7 VICTORY OVER U. C. L. A.

By the Associated Press.

PALO ALTO, Cal., Oct. 9.—Stanford's Indians, twice beaten in previous pigskin skirmishes and rank outsiders as they lined up today, scored one of the big upsets of the season with a 12-to-7 victory over the University of California at Los Angeles Bruins.

Some 15,000 fans sweltering in heat of mid-summer intensity, saw the re-built Stanford eleven crash over touchdowns in the first and second periods, stave off Bruin rallies time and again by pass interception, and finally yield a score in the final quarter of a loosely-played game.

Illinois Holds Notre Dame To Scoreless Tie in Their First Game in 39 Years

By the Associated Press.

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Oct. 9.—The "Fighting Illini" lived up to the glorious tradition of their name with the gridiron upset of the day by holding the vaunted Notre Dame eleven to a scoreless tie today in the first game between these teams in 39 years.

There was everything of a surprising nature about the outcome of the battle before a crowd of 45,000. On form, the highly-rated invaders from South Bend, Ind., were favored to win, and the result was a personal triumph for the 56-year-old Robert Zuppke, celebrating his twenty-fifth anniversary as coach at Illinois.

No finer tribute could be offered Zuppke than the performance of his untried sophomores, who not only fought back the "Fighting Irish," but actually took the play away from them on offense, although the statistics disagreed.

Each Threaten to Score.

Each team made one serious threat to score in the first half and Illinois made another halfhearted one in the final quarter. In the first period Illinois marched 46 yards to Notre Dame's 14, where the Irish held, and Melvin Brewer was called into the game to attempt to place kick from the 21-yard line. The boot was short and low and dropped harmlessly in front of the goal posts.

In the second period, Notre Dame drove 38 yards to Illinois' 12, where the alert Illinois secondary defense broke up three pass attempts.

In the fourth period, Brewer attempted unsuccessfully another goal from the field for Illinois, this time from the 44-yard stripe. The ball landed in Capt. Andy Puplis' arms on the 10-yard line.

Time and again the Irish, frequently substituting teams, started drives, but each time the green Illinois line held. Klemp and Capt. Lowell Spurgeon of Illinois played a brilliant game with Klemp charging in to break up interference or to knock down passes.

Spurgeon Stars.

Spurgeon played an outstanding game for Illinois. After spending a week limping around on crutches because of an injured leg, he turned in an amazing performance to lead Illinois in its moral victory. Fullback Howie Carson, however, outgained him, reeling off 20 yards in six attempts, while second-stringer Louis Zontini topped the Notre Dame ball carriers by gaining 40 yards in eight attempts. Spurgeon threw all of Illinois' passes and his alert defensive play kept the Irish aerial attack from clicking.

The Irish outrushed the Illini, gaining a net yardage from scrimmage of 118 to 40 and compiling 10 first downs to Illinois' five.

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Oct. 9.—The gallant attempt of an under-rated team of Kansas State football players to continue the ties that characterized their last two meetings with Missouri was wrecked by a heartbreaking break in the fourth period today, and Missouri walked off the field with a 14 to 7 victory in the opening Big Six contest.

As approximately 8000 fans reconciled themselves to another deadlock, a long, low punt from the toe of Heinie Mahley, Missouri halfback, bounded crazily and struck Howard Cleveland, Kansas State safety, as he attempted to avoid it.

The ball continued over the goal, where Houston Betty, Missouri center, leaped on it for a touchdown that wrecked the hopes of a Kansas State team which had played the Missourians, favored only below Nebraska in the Big Six, to a standstill.

Kansas Stars.

Glowing brightly in defeat were the names of two Kansas Staters—Howard Cleveland and Elmer Hackney.

Cleveland was a continual threat and Hackney turned in an astonishing performance in the Wildcats touchdown march.

A punt by Mahley which went outside on the Kansas State one-yard line paved the way for Missouri's first scoring chance. Cleveland's punt was returned by Mahley to the Kansas State 34, from where Mahley, Mason and Ewing, behind fine blocking, advanced steadily until Mason plunged over his left guard for a yard and a touchdown. Mahley's place-kick was good and Missouri was on top as the first quarter ended, 7 to 0.

Drives Wilt.

Kansas State, with Cleveland's long legs covering most of the ground, started two promising marches in the second period, but in each case the drive wilted before reaching the scoring zone.

The start of the third period saw Hackney's amazing performance and the Wildcats' lone score.

Bunt Speer had returned the short Missouri kickoff to the Kansas State 38, and it was there the "one-man gang" went into action.

Hackney Formula.

It was Hackney, Hackney, Hackney. The formula never varied.

The Wildcats marched 62 yards and Hackney carried the ball 11 out of 13 times, sending his one man offensive with a drive over the goal from the two yard line. Jim Brock's placekick was good, and it was 7 all.

After that the Kansas Staters grew tougher by the minute, setting Missouri ball carriers back on their heels with regularity.

Early in the fourth quarter Missouri came out of its offensive slump with a flashy attack which carried to the Kansas State 29 before bogging down.

A tie then seemed inevitable until that amazing misplay in which Cleveland was the goat and the alert Betty the hero.

In the fading moments Mahley got away for the longest run of the day and would have scored again except for the headwork and sharp tackling of Cleveland.

The game marked the first victory for Missouri over Kansas State since 1928, and put the Tigers out in front with Nebraska in the Big Six campaign.

Mancuso Has Broken Finger

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—It was revealed today that Gus Mancuso definitely was out of the series. The first joint on the little finger of his catching hand was split and broken, X-rays showed. The finger was so swollen that he couldn't even dress it with a splint.

Mancuso was hit by a foul tip in the eighth inning of the second game of the series.

—Associated Press Wirephoto.

Gomez to Try to End Series Today

"Who would I have left, then?" Terry countered tersely, and so Melton is considered his certain choice for duty in the fifth contest.

With better support, Hubbell might have gone through the game without yielding a Yankee run, for had it not been for fumbles that prolonged the contest, Gehrig never would have gone to bat in the ninth with the opportunity of getting his first four-bagger of the series.

On the other hand, because of his wobbly support, Hubbell would have been forced to accept his second defeat of the series, had the Yankees had another pitcher to match the skill of Gomez, Ruffing and Pearson.

Rolfe Gets Three-Bagger.

In the very first inning Red Rolfe hit a soft fly to center field. It was out of reach of the infield and Hank Leiber, back in center field because of his slugging reputation and the serious plight of the Giants, made a desperate try for the ball. He finally took a desperate dive for the looping fly, but it fell inches out of his reach, hit him on the wishbone and bounded back toward the infield.

The Yankees have more than slugging ability. They have defensive skill and they have fleetness of foot and the latter asset has been important in this series. As Leiber made his dive for the ball, Rolfe was heading for second and before Hank could retrieve it, Rolfe used his full speed to race to third and turn the pop fly into a triple. DiMaggio followed with a long drive to right-center and while Ripple caught it, he was all of 450 feet from home plate and had no chance to prevent Rolfe from scoring, leisurely.

Hadley retired the Giants with only one hit off his delivery in the first round, but in the second the Giants gave their exhibition of major league batting ability and that fluke run off King Carl soon was made unimportant.

Leiber emphasized his presence in the game by lining a single to center to start the big push, and McCarthy cracked one to right. Leiber cautiously stopped at second, but when Danning pushed a single to right, Hank scored the tying run and McCarthy raced to third. Whitehead's hot grounder, which might have been a single or a double play grounder to Lazzeri, hit Danning as he ran for second, and Danning was out automatically, Whitehead was credited with a single and McCarthy, who would have scored, had to go back to third.

The Giants soon broke the tie, however. Hubbell hit to Lazzeri, who had the alternative of trying for a double play or making a bid for a play at the plate. He should have tried for the double play, but he foolishly threw home, much too late to get McCarthy. Whitehead took second on the play and scored when Moore punched a single to center.

In Comes Andrews.

This knocked Hadley out of the box and brought Andrews from the bullpen. Bartell greeted the new pitcher with a single to center, scoring Hubbell, despite a Yankee squawk that Carl had run out of the base line to avoid being tagged by Dickey. Andrews interrupted the rally momenetarily when he struck out Ott, but couldn't find the plate for Ripple, and Jimmy walked, filling the bases. Big Hank Leiber had another hit in his bat, his second of the inning, and his single to left scored Moore and Bartell. McCarthy grounded to Lazzeri to end the inning, but the Giants already had more runs than the crafty Hubbell needed to make it the National League's first victorious day.

During the third inning it seemed that the Giants were startled by their own prosperity, as three errors produced the Yankees' second run. Andrews led off with a grounder to Bartell and was safe when that usually reliable craftsman made a high and wide throw to first. Crosetti hit a double-play grounder to Whitehead, but after taking the force-play throw at second, Bartell turned loose another wild heave and as the ball rattled against the grandstand wall, Crosetti reached second. Rolfe flied to left for the second out and Hubbell seemed to be out of the ragged inning when DiMaggio grounded to Ott. But Melvin threw low and wide of his mark and Crosetti scored and DiMaggio reached second.

The Giants shook off the jitters then, however, and through the rest of the afternoon they and their master pitcher had the situation well in hand. Rolfe's pop triple in the first, Hoag's single in the second, nullified by a double play. Lazzeri's single in the fifth, also wiped off the slate of importance by a double play, and Rolfe's single in the sixth, were the only safeties off King Carl in eight innings.

Gehrig Poles Homer.

One was out in the ninth when Gehrig pumped his home run into the lower right field deck of the stands and after two were out Hoag singled to right for the sixth and final Yankee hit.

Terry's men scored their seventh run off Andrews in the seventh inning, using a pass to Leiber, McCarthy's single and a double to right by Harry "The Horse" Danning.

The game, which attracted 44,293 persons, was the final one in which the players will participate in the receipts.

Because of the fact that the club owners will now get a more substantial share of the profits, persons who always are suspicions, were wagging their heads and saying "I told you so" tonight. They meant to imply that the Yankees eased up for the sake of the box office department.

They pointed to the fact that the Yankees, had they pitched Gomez today, might have made it four straight victories. But Manager McCarthy's use of Hadley was sound strategy. Had he lost with Gomez, it would have been a much more inspiring victory for the Giants. Now McCarthy has two aces in reserve—Gomez and the hard-hitting Ruffing.

And besides, if you know your ball players, you know they're not interested in the owners' pocketbooks. The Yankees tried with all their might to make it four straight. It was King Carl Hubbell and that fluttering butterfly curve that kept the modest spark of National League hope still burning.

McKECHNIE IS TO BE CINCINNATI MANAGER

of four straight defeats by the New York Yankees in the world series, the Cardinals' management decided to send McKechnie to Rochester. He was back in St. Louis at mid-season. The following year he signed as Boston manager.

Twice McKechnie built up the Braves or Bees to contenders for a first-division berth and in 1933 and 1934 landed them in fourth place. During the past season he took what looked like a hopeless club and landed it in fifth place largely through the development of a fine pitching staff and the discovery in the minor leagues of two 31-year-old rookie moundsmen, Lou Fette and Jim Turner, each of whom won 20 games.

Dressen Will Pilot Nashville Again.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9. — Charles (Chuck) Dressen, recently ousted as manager of the Cincinnati Reds, returned today to his old berth as manager of the Nashville Vols of the Southern Association. Dressen said he had signed a one-year contract as Nashville manager at a salary of $10,000. Dressen managed Nashville before he moved up to Cincinnati at the beginning of the 1935 season.

WHITE SOX BEAT CUBS, 14-2, EVEN CHICAGO SERIES

CHICAGO, Oct. 9.—A combination of steady, seven-hit pitching by big Johnny Whitehead and a 16-hit attack gave the White Sox a 14 to 2 victory over the Cubs at Wrigley Field today, pulling the American Leaguers up even with their rivals at two victories each in the twenty-second Chicago championship series.

The fifth game will be played in the same park tomorrow, with Monty Stratton slated to hurl for the Sox and Tex Carleton, who won the opening game for the Cubs, the mound choice of the National Leaguers.

The Sox, in capturing the fourth game of the series, scored two runs in the second to take a lead and then added three more in the third, four more in the fifth, scored twice in the sixth and finished up with three markers in the final stanza. Four Cub pitchers were victims of the Sox power.

Phil Cavarretta, young Cub first sacker, was the only batsman to give Whitehead trouble. He had four hits in as many trips. The other safeties off Whitehead were by Herman, Bryant and Hack.

Passes Give S. M. U. 14-0 Victory Over the Bears

the superior team in the opening quarter. The Bears did everything the Mustangs did and quite a bit better. They intercepted two passes and generally handled themselves like a veteran combination.

However, neither team was able to gain consistently. For the first five minutes, the Mustangs were in Washington territory—not far in but well over the midfield mark. But, twice the Mustangs were forced to kick and, after 10 minutes of action, the ball was at midfield.

Warner Injured.

Washington then staged an assault after running back a kick and, with Shakofsky and Warner running, brought the ball to the 14-yard line. Warner had to leave the game in mid-quarter and his running was missed as the Mustangs held and, in the first minute of the second period, forced Washington to kick.

In the second period, the Southern Methodist defense tightened considerably. Taking possession after three minutes of the period, the Mustangs opened their passing game wide and completed two passes for their first two first downs. A pass, Stidger to Acker, was good for 12 yards and Morrison's accurate heave to Crouch gained 45 yards to the Bears' five-yard mark. Bearden, on two plays, gained four yards.

Then, on fourth down, with a yard to go, Morrison heaved to Acker who caught the ball in the end-zone for a touchdown. Stidger place-kicked the extra point. It had taken the Mustangs 21 minutes to score.

Bears' Pass Intercepted.

Washington, after receiving the ensuing kickoff, couldn't gain and had to punt. The Bears began to solve the Texas passes and, after smearing a Texas attempt to pass for a 20-yard toss, took over on their own 30-yard mark. Bukant passed but Stidger intercepted. Morrison put the Mustangs in Bear territory again with a nice run to Washington's 28-yard line.

Three minutes left to play, on the fourth down, Belville tried a place-kick from the Bears' 28-yard line. It was wide.

Then, the Mustangs got the finest kind of a break with only a minute and a half to play. The Bears had kicked over the Methodists' goal line. This gave the Mustangs the ball on their own 20-yard line.

Belville started an end run, carried the ball 12 yards and fumbled. The ball went into the air and was caught by Dewell, the Texas left-end who ran through the Bears' defense to the goal-line which, after the starting run, was 68 yards away. He went over and Belville converted to make the Mustangs' advantage 14 points.

In the last minute, the Bears passed for 40 yards but couldn't score.

Bears' Strong Defense.

Held on running plays, early in the third period, the Mustangs soon took to the air and penetrated Washington territory in the first five minutes. Two first downs in succession brought them to the Bears' 16-yard line. Here, the Bears held beautifully and Tracy and Cunningham collaborated in a tackle of a passer which took the ball away. But, they had to yield it soon on a punt to midfield.

On the first play after this kick, Ewing passed to Jackson who ran to the Bears' one-yard line. Two plays lost four yards for the Mustangs and a third was stopped two feet from the goal line. On the fourth down, a razzle-dazzle run-and-pass was stopped and Klein kicked from behind his own goal line.

The Mustang attack again failed. Klein and Minkey ripped off two first downs on successive plays but Klein fumbled and the Mustangs recovered at midfield. The Bears took it away promptly and when the scoreless period ended, it was the Mustangs' ball on their own 44-yard line when Yore first caught and then fumbled a forward pass.

Starting teams took the field for the final period and the Mustangs began to run and pass almost alternately. Some surprise stuff went wrong for the Bears for Bukant, on his own 10-yard line, threw a pass which was intercepted by Patterson. But, the lapse was nullified when the Mustangs fumbled and Bukant recovered. Again, in the danger-spot the Bears began to pass but, finally kicked out of bounds in midfield.

Bukant's Successful Pass.

Stidger ripped off a 20-yard gain at end to put the Bears in jeopardy. A complete pass, Harlow to Dewell added seven yards. The Bears decided that was far enough and took the ball after a Mustang lateral failed.

This time, the Bears' passing helped and Bukant's heave to Minkey took the ball well out of danger with seven minutes remaining. But the Washington offense quickly bogged down.

Taking the ball, the Mustangs started plowing down the field in the last five minutes. They advanced into Bear territory and there were stopped at the 10-yard line by a stubborn defense. Washington passed on the first play and it was intercepted near midfield.

Two plays were smeared for a total loss of nine yards. With two minutes remaining, Guynes punted to Washington's 23-yard line. The Bears started passing in a desperate attempt to score but Patterson intercepted one on the 33-yard line. Less than a minute of play saw the Mustangs stopped cold by the Bears who had played a great defensive game all afternoon.

Bear Notes.

THE field of play was in excellent condition despite the rain of the night before. It was firm and gave real footing. The weather was altogether ideal for football. The sun was out and there was a nice nip in the air.

Neither Washington nor Southern Methodist has a regular captain. Each team chooses a leader for each game. Yesterday, Dick Yore captained the Bears and Keith Ranspot, right end, led the Methodists.

Vanderbilt believes that forewarned is forearmed. At any rate, Vandy had a scout looking over the Bears as the two teams opened the season in 1938.

Stidger isn't very big but he was mighty fast and, on several punt-returns out-distanced his would-be tacklers.

Warner's kicking was excellently-placed and long. He was in his best form of the season until hurt in the first period.

Jack Morrison, Methodist back, is a son of Ray Morrison, former coach of the Mustangs. His father now is coach at Vanderbilt.

George Sanders, Texas guard, was a whale of a defensive man, in the first half, he seemed to be making 50 per cent of the Mustang tackles.

Each Player of Winning Team In Series Will Collect $5836

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.

VICTORY or defeat to the Yankees and Giants will be worth the difference of $1945.61 apiece when they share the third largest players' pool in world series history. The total pool of $417,305.97 has been exceeded only by those of 1928 and 1936.

Based on splitting both the winning and losing money into 29 shares, each share for the world series winner will amount to $5,836.84 and each share for the series loser to $3891.23. The Yankees voted 26 individual full shares and the Giants 27. The balance on each club is made up by part shares and assorted cash awards.

The world series clubs collect 70 per cent of one total player pool. The winning club's total cut will amount to $169,268.51; the loser's end of the money totals $112,845.67.

Although the players will miss a cut on the $100,000 Henry Ford did not pay for exclusive radio privileges as in some previous years, all of them, down to the fourth-place clubs in both leagues, will get a good chunk of money for winter groceries.

The Chicago Cubs and Detroit Tigers, runners-up in the flag races, will receive a total pool of $33,797.94 for split-ups. The Pittsburgh Pirates and Chicago White Sox each get $22,531.96 and the St. Louis Cardinals and Cleveland Indians $11,265.96 each.

Duke, Tennessee In Scoreless Tie

DURHAM, N. C., Oct. 9.—Tennessee's Volunteers and Duke's Blue Devils fought each other to a standstill here today in a scoreless game played before 36,000 spectators. After the first period, each team presented an impenetrable defense against its opponent's attack, and the contest developed into a punting duel.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PADUCAH, Ky., Oct. 9.—Tilghman High's football team unloosed a dazzling passing and running attack here tonight to defeat McKinley High School of St. Louis, by 18 to 14. It was a bitter victory for Tilghman, however, for it lost the services of David Brown, star halfback, who suffered a broken right arm near the end of the third quarter, after scoring one of the touchdowns and paving the way for two others with spectacular running and pass receiving.

Tilghman's passing attack clicked when most needed. A one-handed catch of a pass from Black by Davis in the end zone gave the Tornado its third touchdown. Tilghman completed six of 11 passes for a total gain of 153 yards, while McKinley completed five of 15 passes for only 30 yards.

Tilghman made 14 first downs to 13 for St. Louis. The latter outgained the Tornado by rushing, by 226 to 202.

Lange passed into the end zone to Turley for St. Louis' first touchdown in the first quarter, after leading a drive down the field. He added the extra point by kicking. Brown went over for Tilghman near the end of the first quarter after advancing the ball with a perfect catch of Black's pass. Reeder plunged over for Tilghman's second touchdown after another great catch of a pass by Brown. The last Tornado touchdown came in the third quarter, Davis catching a pass from Black a few minutes after he had thrown one to Black for a [illegible]-yard gain.

St. Louis scored in the fourth quarter following a slashing attack led by Lange and Newburger, who scored the touchdowns. Lange kicked goal. A final passing attack by McKinley failed to click.

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 9.—Cornell's Big Red football team drove onward toward fame and glory today by overpowering an inexperienced but stubborn Princeton eleven, 20 to 7, before a cheering crowd of about 45,000 in vast Palmer Stadium.

Conquerors of Penn State and Colgate, the stalwarts from high above Cayuga's waters put on a convincing show of their might on the ground and their finesse in the air. Combining both modes of attack effectively in the second half after trailing by a 7-6 margin at the intermission, they gained their first triumph over the Tigers since 1931, and thereby avenged the humiliating defeats of the past three years.

Three husky Cornell backs—Sophomores Whit Baker of North Cumberland, Pa., and Ken Brown of Millerton, N. Y., and Bob Rose, a junior of Tonawanda, N. Y.—shared the three touchdowns but it was the 185-pound Baker who vied with Princeton's Jack White for the honor of being the best ball carrier of the day.

Brown had scored a few minutes before at the end of 47-yard air movement but Rose had missed the try for extra point. Eddie Givens made good on his try after White's touchdown, and gave Princeton a one-point lead.

In the third quarter Cornell forged ahead and stayed there. Deep in its own territory, Cornell gave the ball to George Peck who cut through the line and ran 45 yards to his own 43-yard mark from where he flipped a lateral to Baker who outraced his rivals to the goal line.

Cornell scored its final touchdown in the fourth after Center Sam Stahl intercepted a Givens's pass on Princeton's 26-yard line. Baker and Rose took turns carrying the ball and Rose plunged over.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 9.—Paced by Capt. Wilson scored two touchdowns, one on a 60-yard run, in the second period of the game. Bob Schoenmann tallied Penn's only score of the battle in the final period.

CORNELL BEATS PRINCETON; THIRD VICTORY OVER MAJOR FOE

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PADUCAH, Ky., Oct. 9.—Tilghman High's football team unloosed a dazzling passing and running attack here tonight to defeat McKinley High School of St. Louis, by 18 to 14. It was a bitter victory for Tilghman, however, for it lost the services of David Brown, star halfback, who suffered a broken right arm near the end of the third quarter, after scoring one of the touchdowns and paving the way for two others with spectacular running and pass receiving.

Tilghman's passing attack clicked when most needed. A one-handed catch of a pass from Black by Davis in the end zone gave the Tornado its third touchdown. Tilghman completed six of 11 passes for a total gain of 153 yards, while McKinley completed five of 15 passes for only 30 yards.

Tilghman made 14 first downs to 13 for St. Louis. The latter outgained the Tornado by rushing, by 226 to 202.

Lange passed into the end zone to Turley for St. Louis' first touchdown in the first quarter, after leading a drive down the field. He added the extra point by kicking. Brown went over for Tilghman near the end of the first quarter after advancing the ball with a perfect catch of Black's pass. Reeder plunged over for Tilghman's second touchdown after another great catch of a pass by Brown. The last Tornado touchdown came in the third quarter, Davis catching a pass from Black a few minutes after he had thrown one to Black for a 38-yard gain.

St. Louis scored in the fourth quarter following a slashing attack led by Lange and Newburger, who scored the touchdowns. Lange kicked goal. A final passing attack by McKinley failed to click.

the Ole Miss 40-yard line and the Muellerleile coached eleven opened up an aerial attack, breaking prospective pass receivers into the open twice, only to have them juggle the pigskin like circus acrobats, but without success, both passes falling incomplete.

First Touchdown.

Finally forced to resort to a punt, the Billikens were pushed back into their own territory and when Denny Cochran punted a few minutes later Hapes cut over to a side line and ran through most of the Blue and White team for his first touchdown.

The first quarter ended before "Ole Miss" could kick off but the Rebels picked up where they left off in the previous period and on the third play of the second quarter, Hapes broke through his left tackle for 22 yards and his second score. A fumble by Charley Harris on the kick-off had placed the Southerners on the Billikens' 26-yard line.

The Billikens were hard pressed in the third quarter but managed to stave off the Mississippi threats until just before the end of the period Shea dropped Busby's punt and Williams recovered.

Busby gained six yards on the first play in the fourth period and was then thrown for a three-yard loss by Cagle and Best but Herrmany batted Lenhardt's pass into the arms of Astom who put the ball on the Billiken one-yard line and Lenhardt took the ball over on two plays for the score.

There was no further scoring but just before the final gun, Mississippi had the ball on the Billiken one-yard line and was knocking at the door for another touchdown.

Bradley Loses To Iowa, 14-7

By the Associated Press.

IOWA CITY, Ia., Oct. 9. — A tough Bradley Tech line extended the University of Iowa to the limit today before yielding a 14-7 victory to the Hawkeyes in the Big Ten team's first 1937 home appearance.

Iowa scored its winning touchdown in the last quarter when Busk dove through center from the one-foot line. With first down on the Bradley two-yard mark, the Hawk backs smacked the line in vain three times before Busk's effort produced the touchdown.

Both teams scored in the second quarter, Bradley counting when Molnar intercepted Balazs' pass on the Tech 30 and dashed 70 yards for a touchdown. Balazs carried the ball on line plays after Busk returned a punt from his own 45 to the Bradley 27-yard stripe.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Oct. 9.

DE PAUL UNIVERSITY, which a week ago played a scoreless tie with Illinois, was handed a stunning 7-to-6 upset defeat by Illinois Wesleyan today. De Paul went 70 yards in four plays for a touchdown in the opening period, Mattei's try for point being blocked.

Wesleyan came back in the second period to score on Kaska's run and went ahead on Dick Folk's placement. In the final two periods Wesleyan's pass defense repeatedly stopped the Demons.

GOPHERS HARD PRESSED TO BEAT INDIANA, 6 TO 0

By the Associated Press.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Oct. 9.—Minnesota's thoroughly deflated Golden Gophers squeezed out a 6 to 0 victory over University of Indiana today in a Big Ten game before 45,000 here today that found "Bo" McMillen's scrappy squad failing in two last period attempts to pull the game out of the fire.

The final gun barked as a Hoosier pass fell incomplete on the Minnesota goal line. Indiana in the last of two mighty thrusts passed cagily to the Minnesota nine for a first down. An end sweep lost four; there was a five yard penalty for too much time in the huddle and then the last desperate futile pitch.

Just a few minutes earlier, a four down Hoosier pass from the five yard line missed the intended receiver in the end zone by inches.

Minnesota got its winning margin in the second quarter principally through a flashy punt return by little Rudy Gmitro to the Indiana 20. Wilbur Moore took it over from the nine. Three other Minnesota scoring opportunities were bungled with a hard charging Hoosier line smearing the Gophers attack.

MRS. PAGE IS 7-6 VICTOR IN FINAL OF U. S. GOLF TOURNEY

By the Associated Press.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Oct. 9.—Mrs. Estelle Lawson Page, the 29-year-old siege gun of North Carolina, became America's new golfing queen today, overwhelming young Patty Berg, Minneapolis schoolgirl, 7 to 6, in the National Tourney final at Memphis Country Club.

Despite the slowness of the fairways caused by intermittent showers during the day, Mrs. Page, medalist of the qualifying round for two consecutive years, was one over regulation figures for the 30 holes, featured by a great three-under-par journey on the first nine of the afternoon round that left her seven up with nine holes to play.

Never once was the new titleholder down to the 19-year old Minneapolis girl, who as a "kid" of 17 was beaten in the finals on her home course of Interlachen, 3 to 2, by Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare of Philadelphia in 1935.

In four previous tournaments, Mrs. Page had never advanced farther than the third round. She was beaten at that stage a year ago at Canoe Brook, N. J., by Beatrice Barrett after winning the medal with a 78. She was medalist here with an even par 79.

With her long iron shots consistently finding their target and a faithful putter working with a magic touch, Mrs. Page collected nine birdies on her championship journey. She was over par on but seven holes, two of them caused by three-putting.

It was the first time the tall championship trophy had been won by a Southerner since Alexa Stirling of Atlanta triumphed in 1920. For a year now it will be on display at the Sedgefield Country Club at Greensboro, Mrs. Page's home course.

The forty first annual battle for the title saw Miss Berg outdriven most of the time and lacking consistency around the greens. She was seven over par for the duration of the match. For the entire tournament Mrs. Page was only seven strokes back of par for 129 holes, Miss Berg was 23 over for 126 holes.

Maplewood Beats Beaumont, 20-6

Starting late in the opening quarter, Maplewood began a march from its own 02-yard line, usinb both passes and running plays to advance to Beaumont's 20-yard mark. Shortly after the second period started Hennessey tossed a 10-yard pass to Flint, who ran for the first score. McInroy place-kicked for the extra point.

Beaumont took the kickoff on its own 20-yard line and then scampered down the field for a touchdown. A 40-yard pass, Roehlk to Marting, was the outstanding play, While Kuelter carried the ball over the line for Beaumont.

Late in the first half Flint of Maplewood intercepted a Beaumont pass on the opponent's 38-yard line. Hennessey then passed to Flint, who brought the ball down to the eight-yard line. A second pass, Hennessey to Wherry, gave Maplewood its second tally. McInroy again kicked for the extra point.

The scoring play in the third quarter was a typical Maplewood pass play. Flavin tossed to Wherry, who lateraled to Flint who sent it to Hennessey, who was then over the goal line. The place-kick for the extra point was blocked.

Coach Dick Frahm's St. Louis Gunners will make their season's debut here this afternoon when they oppose the Indianapolis Indians in a Midwest Professional Football League game at Walsh Memorial Stadium.

Indianapolis is here with an array of players who learned their football at various Indiana colleges, including Purdue, Butler and Indiana University. The Indians' ends, J. Soots and Herb Schoemeyer, are reputed to be sure catchers of passes as well as being alert on the defense.

In Roland Woodrum and A. Inman the visitors have two giant tackles who weigh in the neighborhood of 240 pounds each. Oscar White and Bill Robinson, guards, the smallest men on the squad, have had several years' experience in pro football. Ed Donnelly will be at center.

Harry Cherry, a product of Indiana U., is the Hoosier team's chief ball carrier. He will have Bob Glover, Everett Barnes and Leonard Campbell working with him in the backfield.

White, Woodrum and Barnes played for Butler when the little Indianapolis college turned out powerful grid machines.

The Indians will be playing their first game of the season while the Gunners lost their opener to the Armcos in Ashland, Ky., 14 to 0, last week.

The Gunners will place a much stronger team on the field today. They will call on such men as Cy Casper, former All-American star from Texas Christian University; Manuel "Fat" Rapp, John Breidenstein and Frahm.

On the line a newcomer, John Beger, of Missouri University's 1936 eleven, will hold down a guard berth, along with Red Blanton. Al Goss and John Murphy, ends; Tiny Bartenen and Tiger Flowers, tackles, and Tex Reynolds, center, are the other starters.

James (Bud) Yates, general-manager of the new Gunners, who has set the starting time at 2:30, announces that women fans will be admitted into today's game free. It is not necessary for them to be accompanied by a man to see the game.

77-YARD RUN BY GOLDBERG WINS FOR PITT OVER DUQUESNE

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 9. — Pitt's Golden Panthers shook loose Marshall (Biggie) Goldberg for one 77-yard touchdown tour in the first three minutes of play against Duquesne today and then rode out this margin for a 6-to-0 triumph over their crosstown rival.

Every seat in Pitt Stadium was sold, but a drizzling rain which continued all afternoon kept the crowd to 55,000.

These spectators held their seats to the final whistle as the evenly matched foes grappled back and forth with a slippery ball and a treacherous gridiron paving the way for breaks.

The scoring dash by the husky Goldberg, a junior from Elkins, W. Va., came on the second play after Pitt stopped Duquesne's driving backs on its own 23-yard line. Biggie ploughed through right guard, deserted his interference and reversed his field twice as he sped goalward. Frank Souchak missed a placement try for the extra point.

The conditions of the winning touchdown were parallel to last year's game when George Matsik dashed 72 yards in the second quarter to upset Pitt by a 7-to-0 count.

The Panthers switched on their power once again at the opening of the second half to parade 59 yards to the Dukes' one-yard line, but were held for downs.

By Dent McSkimming.

As a climax to one of the most successful meetings in the history of the Fairmount race track, favorites held true to form yesterday afternoon and gave a crowd of 12,000 persons lots to cheer about despite gloomy weather.

The combination of Mrs. R. J. Murphy, Trainer Otis Clelland and Jockey Willie Lee Johnson took the center of the stage in this closing day program as the consistent Bunny Martin took the Bridle Spur Hunt Club Handicap, most attractive race of the program from My Colin, Woodlander and seven other good sprinters. My Colin set the stage for one of the most spectacular finishes of the 31 days of racing when he shot out to a four-lengths lead before the field quit the back stretch. To catch him, Johnson, aboard Bunny Martin, had to put forth one of his finest efforts, keeping his mount close to the rail, saving ground, and giving everything he had in the last sixteenth of a mile.

Losing ground at every stride, My Colin was still on even terms at the finish and it took the camera eye to separate the two. Woodlander, which also came from far back, was only a head back of the beaten My Colin at the finish.

Long shots had a bad afternoon as Oxford Lad, Wax, The Break, Poop Deck and Bunny Martin finished in front as the public anticipated.

Grand Day Takes Opener.

Frank Slate, the man who rides steeple chasers when he is not training the horses of the St. Louis owned Trails' End stable, put a fit horse on the track when he sent Grand Day to the post in the opening race. Slate knew he had an exceptional horse and, apparently, had not kept the good news a secret. For Grand Day, coupled in the "field" with two of the poorer horses, had shown little in three previous starts and would under ordinary circumstances have gone to the post a 10 to 1 shot or longer. But the price against him was whittled down to 8 to 1. Jockey Bobby Mason couldn't shake Grand Day up at the start. He broke tenth, was ninth at the quarter, but then passed eight horses to catch William Palmer, the 11 to 10 favorite, in the very last stride.

On a fast track in two previous starts here, Grand Day had been beaten off by the same class of horses he whipped yesterday. Mud seems to be right in his line.

Formful Race.

In one of the most formful contests of the meeting, favorites finished first, second, third and fourth in the second race of the day with Oxford Lad best of the lot. Eight started in this mile-and-70-yard event, and World Traveller fought it out with Hildegard and Defier for the lead going to the first turn. Defier had his head in front as they reached the backstretch but George O'Bryan let Oxford Lad loose and the issue was settled right there. Oxford Lad had a two-length lead at the far turn and still had enough in reserve to withstand the rush of Hildegard in the last quarter.

Oxford Lad and Wax, winners of the second and third races, were so heavily played that the daily double refund amounted to only $15.

Only for the first quarter of the third race was there anything approaching competition for the standout, Wax. After he had collared the fast-breaking Zanny, Wax had things his own way and at the finish he was three lengths in advance of Bunty Ann and five lengths ahead of the third horse, Prince Pad. Gladess, which closed at 14 to 5 largely because Johnson was riding, approached Wax on the turn, but had nothing left in the run through the stretch and finished far back.

The Break Wins.

The Break and Chehalis combined to score something of a surprise victory in the fourth race as Baboo and Reverberate, equal choices in the betting, finished out of the money. Baboo, as expected, set the pace in this mile-and-a-quarter marathon, but The Break and Chehalis were closer to him than is usually the case. Perkins and O'Bryan both had snug holds on Chehalis and The Break and when they turned loose at the finish of the backstretch they shot to the top and ran one-two for the last quarter mile, The Break finishing first by a length and a half. Furled Flag also finished fast to beat High Man for third money. Footwork, never at his best in these "sprint" races under a mile and a half, was last almost all the way.

The crowd got a special thrill out of the victory of Poop Deck over Actdine and four others in the fifth race. It was an open race, every one of the six starters getting a good play in the mutuels with Poop Deck a slight favorite. The break from the mile-and-70-yard gate was good but the crowd's choice was second last as the field went around the first turn. Jockey Manuel Contino shook up his mount as they entered the backstretch and there he started to pass horses.

The crowd cheered as he overtook one after another until, on the far turn he was second to Actdine, which had been setting a fast pace. Forced to swing wide at the stretch turn as Actdine bore out, Poop Deck had just what it took to go the long route, and in the quarter-mile race up the stretch, he outlasted his rival. Jewelry, one of the most consistent horses of the meeting, moved up fast in the last quarter to beat High Flag for third money.

Surprise Box led add the way to take the seventh after the start had been long delayed by the uncontrollable Paplay. Almarine and Towson had a terrific battle for second money, Almarine getting the nod, three lengths back of the winner. Towson closed the favorite and Surprise Box was second choice.

Potterton was out to win the last race of the day, final race of the meeting. General Boy, heavily-played favorite was beaten in the last few strides as Kansascitian closing fast, finished third. Don Scurlock rode the winner. The refund was $19.40 and the quinella refund $33.60.

Bobby Mason and Willie Lee Johnson tied for the honor of drawing the most pay for jockeys for the past week, each earning $421. Herbie Simmons was next with $394, followed by Georgie O'Bryan, with $285, Cecil Perkins, $266, Don Scurlock, $254, Willie Gonzales, $208, and Eugene DePrang, $203.

Jockey Gonzales announced he has affiliated himself with the stable of E. Slavin and will ride for that owner during the coming New Orleans meeting.

Figures through Friday disclosed Hernandez, the leading owner of the meeting, with $4395, gained through eight victories, nine seconds and 11 thirds. Mrs. R. J. Murphy was in second place, with $3745, as a result of six victories, four seconds and three thirds, while J. Chesney, no longer on the scene, was third with $2865, through four victories, one second and three thirds.

Grand Day broke sluggishly, improved his position rapidly after going a quarter, was sent through an opening on the rail entering the stretch and assumed a slight lead, but had to be vigorously urged to outstay William Palmer. The latter lacked early speed, was forced to race wide while working his way up and closed with a rush. Techy, a strong factor for five-eighths, weakened in the final stages as if in need of a race.

SEOND RACE—$500, claiming, three-year-olds and up, mile and seventy yards. Star good. Won driving, place same. Went to post 2:36, at post ½ minute. Winner blk. g. 5, Nutcracker-Lady Oxford. Oxford Lad, displaying a liking for the footing and cleverly handled, disposed of Defier after three-eights, drew into a commanding lead but had to be hard urged to withstand Hildegard. The latter improved her position steadily under strong handling and was slowly wearing down the winner in the final furlong. Wispy saved considerable ground, made a strong bid approaching the stretch, but weakened in last sixteenth.

Wax, much the best, had little difficulty disposing of Zanny after three-eighths, took a commanding lead quickly and won well in hand. Bunty Ann broke slowly, improved her position gradually while saving ground and showed a good effort but was no match for the winner. Prince Pad, never far out of it, was subjected to severe urging and was gaining slowly in the final stages.

$2 mutuels paid: Wax, $5.00 win, $3.80 place, $3.00 show; Bunty Ann, $6.60 place, $5.00 show; Prince Pad, $6.20 show.

The Break, taken under light restrain early but always close to the pace, moved around the leaders when ready, bore out slightly in the stretch and, after being straightened out, drew clear to win with something in reserve. Chehalis forced the pace all of the way, responded to urging but was not good enough. Furled Flag was rated off the pace, came throug on the inside in final quarter but weakened under pressure.

$2 mutuels paid: The Break, $10.80 win; $5.60 place; $4.20 show. Chehalis, $11 place; $6.20 show. Furled Flag, $6 show.

Poop Deck, much the best, was taken back off the pace, improved his position rapidly approaching the stretch, was carried extremely wide by Actdine on the turn, continued gamely and was up in the last 20 yards. Actdine, rushed into the lead quickly, began bearing out on the back stretch and bore out badly at the stretch turn, continued gamely when straightened out but was not good enough. Jewelry improved her position gradually, came through on the inside and assumed a slight lead but could not retain her advantage.

Bunny Martin, going in her best form and vigorously ridden, lugged in badly during the last sixteenth, but continued in game fashion to get up in time to nip My Colin in the last stride The latter was rushed into a long lead after the first quarter, swerved badly in the last three-sixteenths when subjected to punishment and failed to last. Woodlander, badly outrun, for a half mile, made up ground rapidly thereafter and finished fastest.

ARMY'S THREE EXTRA POINTS BEAT COLUMBIA; SCORE IS 21-18

By the Associated Press.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Oct. 9. — Army's light cavalry backs, strong in the tradition of Cagle and Meyer, charged down field three times today to give the Cadets a 21-18 triumph over a dogged Columbia eleven.

More than 20,000 fans packed Michie Stadium beneath wintry skies to watch a thrilling game in which the lead changed hands five times.

Luckman Is Star.

Although Columbia lost, Sid Luckman, the great Lion triple threat halfback, salvaged plenty of honor from the defeat, the second in as many years for Columbia at the hands of the Corps. He bombed the Army secondary, bucked the line and slashed off tackles with magnificent abandon and capped the afternoon's running with an 80-yard return of a kick-off for the final Columbia touchdown.

The crowd was still cheering Army's second touchdown, scored by Woodrow Wilson, when Luckman grabbed Isbell's kickoff and dashed down the field through the Army team. His blockers shook him loose at midfield and he sprinted past the Cadets' backs with a tremendous burst of speed, and the score was Columbia 18, Army 14.

At that stage in the third period it looked like Columbia's game. The Lions were driving to the Cadet goal again when Luckman shot a long heave to Radvillas. The ball bounced off the Columbia man's hands and Frontczak picked it out of the air and started goalward from his own 2-yard line.

Intercepts Pass.

Whirling like a dervish, Frontczak went past midfield and was in the clear when Radvillas came storming up from behind and pulled him down on the Columbia four-yard line after a 94-yard dash.

In two plays Army had its third touchdown and the ball game, when Jim Schwenk scored on a smash at the weak side tackle.

Columbia tried vainly to score again through the aerial route which had netted the Lions two scores in the second period but Charles Long, Army back, caught the ball on the two-yard line and rushed it out of danger just before the end of the game.

AMES VICTIM OF NEBRASKA'S POWER, 20 TO 7

By the Associated Press.

AMES, Ia., Oct. 9.—Iowa State's battling Cyclones played mighty Nebraska on even terms for three periods today, but two sudden, dramatic Cornhusker thrusts turned the tide, and the conquerors of Minnesota scored a 20-to-7 victory in their first Big Six contest.

Slightly more than 10,000 persons saw the Cyclones carry the battle to their highly-touted foes and push over a touchdown in the first five minutes.

Iowa State offensive power faded a few minutes later, when Everett Kischer left the game with a bad shoulder injury. Kischer, a 152-pound yougster, shot two successful passes to Charles Heileman, halfback, and then charged through the big Nebraska line for the only Iowa State touchdown.

The Huskers struck late in the first period to tie the score. A deceptive end-around performance caught the Iowa State line by surprise as Paul Amen, Husker end, spurted into the open and dashed 80 yards for the first Nebraska touchdown. In the fourth period, Plock, substitute halfback, misjudged an Iowa State punt and the ball bounded back to the Nebraska 25-yard line. Plock scampered back and grabbed the ball. Husker interference formed quickly and Plock sped through the entire Iowa State team for a touchdown.

Andrews punched his way across for the final touchdown from the six-yard line in the fourth period after intercepting an Iowa pass.

Hockey Player Divorced.

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 9. — Joseph R. Matto, 27-year-old former Pittsburgh Yellow Jackets hockey star, was granted a divorce yesterday. Matto, charging desertion, testified that he and his wife, Alma, of Ottawa, Canada, were married in 1930 but lived together only one day.

TEDDY'S

By the Associated Press.

LAUREL, Md., Oct. 9. — The Valdina Farm's Teddy's Comet, knocked and blocked in the recent running of the Eastern Shore Handicap, came out of the pack today to win the twenty-sixth renewal of the $5000 added Richard Johnson stakes. Bounding forward at each thrust of Jockey Basil James' whip, the fleet son of Teddy arrived at the wire a length ahead of W. S. Kilmer's Nedayr, with Mrs. H. S. Horkheimer's Autumnquest third and A. G. Vanderbilt's Pit Bull fourth. Twelve others were strung out through the stretch.

In taking his sixth purse in 16 starts, Teddy's Comet added $7100 to bring his earnings for the year to $29,900. His time for the six furlongs was an ordinary 1:13 1-5 and he was well-played at a $9.20 mutuel. Nedayr and Autumnquest won their positions via the camera and both were members of the mutuel betting field.

The bulky field of 16 was started without the use of the stalls and the getaway was a poor one. Bluefield and Legal Light were virtually left, as a forward team consisting of Benjam, Pit Bull, Autumnquest and Bigey streaked along the backstretch. After a furlong, few in the crowd could find Teddy's Comet. The ultimate winner was hemmed in on all sides by horses and in seventh place.

Bigey was squeezed out of the front group approaching the stretch and Pit Bull supplanted Benjam as the leader. Teddy's Comet had shaken himself loose and was gaining rapidly on the outside. In the final drive, James went to the whip and Teddy's Comet bounded to the front. Nedayr had saved ground entering the stretch and swung out to close gamely. Both Autumnquest and Pit Bull were weakening fast.

The race was run over a fast track but through a drizzle. A crowd of 15,000 witnessed the action.

Mrs. Arthur White lost a horse and won a purse today. This morning her colt, Rise and Shine, suffered a paralytic stroke and had to be destroyed. This afternoon her Bay Dean won the steeplechase race and paid a $151.40 mutuel. Making the third start of his career and never close to the money, Bay Dean led his field from start to finish over the two-mile course. However, the gelded son of Judge Bay weakened nearing the final fence and just lasted under C. Brooks' riding to win by a half length from the Sandy Wood Stable's Little Hurd. The same distance away came Flying Feathers, owned by H. Bieber, to be third in the field of eleven. Bay Dean's time was 4:00 1-5.

Wotil's Pigeon Wins.

George Wotil's pigeon won the 150-mile young bird race from Lebanon, Mo. The winning bird averaged 1336.66 yards per minute. The race was the seventh in the series sponsored by the Mt. Pleasant Homing Pigeon Club. Other lofts finished in this order: Al Huegler, George Wotil, Al Huegler, L. B. Oeth and Puschner.

Texas Christian Eleven Beats Tulsa, 20-13

FORT WORTH, Tex., Oct. 9.—David O'Brien and Johnny Hall passed and rammed Texas Christian University to a 20-13 victory over Tulsa University here today, but a Texas boy on the Tulsa team almost stole the show.

Morris White, the Texan, led a 72-yard, two-play Tulsa drive after a kickoff in the fourth quarter, and appeared headed for a touchdown when Don Looney, T. C. U. right end, pulled him down.

On the next play Scholl passed to White and the fleet Tulsan raced to the Texas Christian eight-yard line. Scholl carried it across on the next play.

The fourth period produced another high point. O'Brien started Christian drive by returning a kick to his 35-yard line. Hall and O'Brien spun their way to the Hurricane 30-yard line. An exchange of kicks moved them back to the 40. Then O'Brien shot a 34-yard pass to Harrell who ran across the goal line standing up.

Muny Football Teams in Second Round Contests

The second round games of the Municipal Football Association will be played this afternoon at the drill grounds near the Jefferson Memorial tennis courts in Forest Park. The first game, at 1:30 o'clock, will be between the Sentinel Chapter DeMolay and the Weber-Deibels. The second contest, at 3:30 o'clock, will bring together the Food Centers and the Stockham American Legion Post No. 245. The Lennemanns drew the weekly bye.

The Food Centers, 1935 champions, will be seeking their second victory, having defeated the Sentinels last week 13-0. The Stockhams will be making their first appearance of the season. The Weber-Deibels, defending champions, were held to a scoreless tie a week ago by the Lennemanns.

TROJANS UPSET OHIO STATE BY ONE POINT, 13-12

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 9.—The University of Southern California Trojans rose to noble and unexpected heights today and sent the powerful Ohio State Buckeyes home bearing their first defeat of the season.

Southern California won by the margin of a lone point kicked after a touchdown, 13 to 12, but it was the biggest, nicest looking one Troy has seen in years.

The game was witnessed by some 55,000 fans, few of whom expected the Trojans, who flattened before Washington a week ago, to win—even by one point.

Using the famed Howard Jones power plays, and making them work, in front of Quarterback Ambrose Schindler, Southern California scored first in the second period. The try for extra point was missed.

Ohio State tied it up in the third without digging too deeply into Francis Schmidt's repertoire of fancy didoes, thanks to the running capers of Fullback Johnny Rabb.

The Bucks forged ahead in the last period, blocking Schindler's quick kick on the Trojan 28. Mike Kabealo fired a pass over the line to Dick Nardi, who scrambled over for the score. But Joe Aleska's try for conversion was wide.

Taking the kickoff, Southern California five plays later was on the Ohio 27. Schindler, the outstanding back on either team, hurled a pass to Sub-Halfback Mickey Anderson, who outskirted the safety man and went over.

BURROUGHS "B" TEAM BEATS PRINCIPIA, 12-0

The Burroughs "B" team opened its season yesterday with a 12 to 0 victory over the Principia "B" team on the Burroughs field. The first score was made when Burroughs recovered a blocked punt on the Principia 20-yard line and carried it across for the tally on the next play. The last touchdown came when Guidi hit off tackle from the two-yard line.

In their season opener the Burroughs "C" team was defeated by the Principia "C," 19 to 6, on the Burroughs field yesterday. The scoring for Principia was done by Brace and Brush while Biseman made the lone Burroughs score.

Clayton Trims Principia, 18-7

Clayton won its second game in three starts yesterday afternoon when it defeated the Principia Academy eleven, 18 to 7, on the Clayton field.

Late in the second quarter, Clayton intercepted a Principia pass on the Principia 45-yard line. Clayton worked the ball to the Principia nine yard mark where it lost the ball on a fumble. After taking a Principia punt on its 30-yard line, Clayton carried the ball to the 20-yard line from where a pass, McLane to Gorelock in the end zone, resulted in the score. The attempted place kick for the extra point was blocked.

Principia made its only score in the third quarter when it took the ball on the Clayton 45-yard line and worked it to the twenty. A pass to Laret from Simon netted the score.

In the fourth quarter Clayton counted two touchdowns. Both scores were made on line plunges from the ten-yard line.

Northwestern Beats Michigan On Third Quarter Pass, 7 to 0

By the Associated Press.

EVANSTON, Ill., Oct. 9.—Michigan's dead-game Wolverines stopped Northwestern's vaunted land attack today, but their aerial defense faltered for one all-important second and the Wildcats fashioned a thrilling 7 to 0 triumph, to open their defense of the Big Ten gridiron championship.

The Wolverines, battling to regain their lost place in the Big Ten football sunshine, gave 32,000 Northwestern supporters more than one breathless moment during the 60 minutes of savage battling. A 15-yard touchdown pass by Don Heap to lanky Cleo Diehl in the third period sent them down to defeat after the Wildcats had blown one scoring opportunity.

Northwestern's touchdown followed what a moment before, had appeared to be a break for Michigan. Don Siegel, husky Wolverine tackle, partly blocked a punt by Bernie Jefferson and Michigan took the ball on its own 37. Fred Trosko, Michigan's talented sophomore back, attempted a surprise forward pass—and Erwin Wegner, Wildcat center, reached up and snatched the ball on Michigan's 44.

Jefferson fired a 14-yard pass to Heap, and Jack Ryan Jr., the Wildcat's sophomore fullback, ran the ball to Michigan's 20. Heap picked up five yards in two tries, then as the Wolverine forwards dug in, drifted to his right, and drilled the finishing shot to Diehl who grabbed the ball in the corner of the end zone. Ryan place-kicked the extra point.

Northwestern had worked the ball to Michigan's four-yard line in the second quarter, but Ryan's place-kick attempt on fourth down with seconds of the half remaining, sailed wide of the posts.

The Wolverines otherwise played the Wildcats at least even. They outgained the 1936 champions on the ground, 125 yards to 106, and in first downs were only one shy of matching Northwestern's total of 10.

FOUKE TEAM IS FAVORITE OVER ST. AGATHA IN MUNY PLAYOFF

What promises to be the final game of the eliminations for the Municipal Baseball Association championship will be played this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, on grounds No. 1, Fairground Park, when the undefeated Fouke Fur team meets St. Agatha.

Under the system of payoffs this season—the double knockout method, it is possible another week will be required to clinch the championship if St. Agatha should defeat the Foukes. Then each club would have one loss in the eliminations and another game would be necessary.

Fouke already has scored a victory over St. Agatha, however, winning by a 10-6 score about three weeks ago and is favored by Muny followers to end the season.

Manager Ollie Klockenbrink of the Foukes will start his southpaw curveball ace, Martin Schlereth, with Bob Altmansberger, a better than ordinary righthander, ready to relieve. Behind either of these pitchers will be the hardest hitting team in the playoffs.

St. Agatha's hopes will be carried by Ed Kramer, who, with his brother, Pitcher John Kramer, has been the star of the playoffs.

Sumner Wins, Vashon Loses In Doubleheader

Vashon suffered its first defeat in 23 games when it lost to Central High of Louisville, Ky., 6 to 0, in the second game of a Negro High School football doubleheader at Public Schools Stadium yesterday afternoon. Sumner, St. Louis, defeated Sumner, Kansas City, Kans., 26 to 0, in the opener.

Vashon, which had won 22 consecutive contests and which had not tasted defeat since 1934, was the victim of Charles Brown's clever running in the third period of the battle. Brown smashed off tackle and reversed his field to score the deciding touchdown.

Led by Leon McFarland, St. Louis Sumner had an easy time. McFarland counted in the opening quarter and drop-kicked the extra point. James Emory scored twice for the winners, once in the second period and again in the final session, the last coming after a 25-yard run.

C. Harris scored a fourth quarter touchdown after a 35-yard canter. McFarland, who had been taken out with an injury, returned to the game to drop-kick the extra point.

SOCCER SHOTS by Dent McSkimming

Aftermath of the dolorous attempt of the United States Football Association team at Mexico City: "Did Mr. Schroeder bring the United States team here to try to beat Mexico or merely to study our style of soccer?"—comment by one of Mexico's leading sports editors. The United States team was defeated in all games, by scores of 7-3, 7-2 and 5-2. The United States team was 90 per cent a New York-Philadelphia team of second-rate players.

Two stars of the Barcelona (Spain) club which recently played a series at Mexico City and later a series at New York, have been signed by Club Asturias of Mexico, further strengthening an already powerful club.

The Shamrock club is scheduled to work out at Public Schools Stadium from 10 to 12 this morning.

FLYERS' SCHEDULE CALLS FOR 13 SUNDAY NIGHT GAMES

SEASON WILL OPEN NOV. 9 AT ARENA WITH MINNEAPOLIS

By W. J. McGoogan

Thirteen Sunday night games are on the Flyers' home schedule in the American Hockey Association this season which opens at the Arena Tuesday, Nov. 9 when Minneapolis, the team which defeated the Flyers in the playoffs last season, will furnish the opposition.

Eight games are to be played on Thursday nights, two on Tuesdays and one on a Wednesday night. A game with St. Paul is set for Armistice Day at the Arena.

After playing Minneapolis Nov. 9 and St. Paul Nov. 11 the Flyers will not appear at the Arena until Nov. 28, the lull being caused by the automobile show in the building.

Three games are scheduled here during November, six in December, seven in January, five in February and three in March.

The Flyers play St. Paul, Minneapolis, Kansas City and Tulsa five games each at home and oppose Wichita only four times. On the road they meet each team five times except St. Paul where they play but four times.

Because the league is made up of only six teams and each team plays 48 games, 24 at home and 24 on the road, each does not play the others an equal number of games. For instance, St. Paul and Minneapolis play each other six times in each of the two cities.

The Flyers are to play in Kansas City Christmas night and in Wichita New Year's night.

Bobby Burns, Flyer left wing, is already on the ground and the rest of the squad is expected to assemble here by Oct. 20 when practice is to get under way at the Arena.

Among the newcomers on this year's squad will be two players recently obtained from the Chicago Blackhawks of the National League. They are Wilder La Rochelle and Harold Jackson.

1:05—Scott Gardner, Triple A, Thomas Claubaugh, Normandie, and C. F. Stevens, Norwood.

25-MILE MOTORCYCLE TITLE RACE TODAY

The Missouri State 25-mile motorcycle championship race will be held this afternoon at the new track of the Cavalier Motorcycle Club starting at 2 o'clock with outstanding riders from Illinois, Iowa, Kansas and Michigan entered. The meet is sanctioned by the American Motorcycle Association.

Beagle Days.

THE sixteenth annual fall field and specialty show, sponsored by the St. Louis Beagle Club, Inc., will be held Nov. 4 to 9, inclusive, with the bench show set for Nov. 6. All activities will take place at the Von Hoffman Resort, near Bourbon, Mo. A. J. Lamprecht, secretary of the organization, has announced that the largest entry in years will be placed on display under rules prescribed by the American Kennel Club. The short-legged, long-eared rabbit dogs from Illinois, Mississippi, Tennessee, Louisiana and Iowa will compete against the choice of Missouri hunters.

Some of the most noted beagles in the country are Missouri bred and many come from the kennels of John Chrisman of Affton.

Judges include William Blakely, Shelbyville, Ind., who will judge the bench show and who will be assisted by Claude A. Manual of Pendleton, Ind., in the field trial. There will be classes for 13-inch and 15-inch females, dogs and derbys.

Championship Field Trials.

Coon dogs will have two days and nights of activity along Platte County creeks and timbered hills when the State field trials are held at Platte City, Oct. 16 and 17. Tree dogs will claim the highest cash prizes with first place being worth $100. Second and third places are worth $50 and $25 dollars respectively.

Beside the regular field trials theer will be special events including a night race along the Platte River; Tap Tree Race, for the "old timers that can't be fooled" and a series of speed races. In these events the awards will come from the entry fees.

Owners can get detailed information by writing Bruce Lewis, president of the State Coon Hunters' Association, care Conservation Commission, Jefferson City, Mo.

Prospects Appear Good.

Just a little over a half month remains before Nov. 1 when the lid is lifted on wildfowl shooting in Missouri. Already the long barrels have been poked through the blinds in Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska and Oklahoma as the season opened yesterday and will close Nov. 7.

Whether or not hunters in the above mentioned states will get an advantage over the Missouri and Arkansas gunmen is a matter of conjecture. Reports from the North indicate that the wildfowl began their southern trip early this year and would be out of range by the time the season got fairly under way. However, the first few days should be excellent, since the ducks should still be flying south in great numbers and, futhermore, according to the Department of Biological Survey, the flocks are so much larger than ever before.

The reasons for increase in the number of ducks are principally because of the tightening of restrictions in lessening bag limits, shortening the season and reducing the number of shells carried in a gun to three. Another very important reason is the establishment of frequent resting and feeding grounds in the northern part of the Mississippi Valley around the Great Lakes, Minnesota and North Dakota, and extending south to Louisiana and Texas.

Deer Come First.

Wildfowl hunters will have an opportunity to get warmed to the occasion when the deer season opens for three days, Oct. 28, 29 and 30. Some of the best deer country in the Ozarks is in Gasconade, Taney, Franklin and Osage counties. Although people generally think it a shame the way these "poor Missouri" deer are hunted. Statistics, however, show that it is the hunter to be pitied. After weeks of preparation and hours of stomping over cold, wet trails, about 90 per cent return without anything but a cold.

Record Catch.

Tom Cadwallader of Van Buren reports that a St. Louisan, William Waymeyer, took the largest channel catfish ever taken from that vicinity with a catch weighing 18 pounds. It took 18 minutes to land the fish, which was attracted to a Heddon river runt, a plug with a red head and a gray body.

LEWIS TO MEET HANKINSON AT ARENA, OCT. 22

Hank Hankinson, Los Angeles heavyweight of Danish extraction, who has a terrific right hand punch and a glassy jaw, has been signed by Larry Atkins to oppose John Henry Lewis, light-heavyweight champion of the world, in a 10-round bout at the Arena, Friday, Oct. 22.

Of interest to St. Louis fight followers is a knockout in two rounds which Hankinson gained over Isidro Gastanaga at Denver Aug. 27, 1936. Gastanaga was suspended by the Colorado commission for not trying in the contest.

Last November, Hankinson was knocked out by Andre Lenglet on the Pacific Coast, lost to King Levinsky, Hans Birkie and Jack Roper.

Among his knockout conquests have been those over Charley Retzlaff and Reds Barry. He owns victories over Maxie Rosenbloom, whom he has defeated twice; Charley Massera and Ford Smith.

Roller Skating Races.

The Lorelei Roller Rink's team of five will meet the Springfield, Mo., squad tonight at Springfield in a series of roller skating races. Hank Cochran, Robert Burke, Charles Hill, Harry Anderson and Wilson Bowers compose the St. Louis team.

RIGHTMIRE AND JACKIE WILSON FIGHT TUESDAY

Everett Rightmire, Sioux City, Ia., featherweight, who meets Jackie Wilson, Pittsburgh Negro in a 10-round bout at the Auditorium Tuesday night, and Young Simington, Poplar Bluff, Mo., who boxes Charley Burns, Johnstown, Pa., in another 10-rounder on the card, are working out daily at the West End Gymnasium.

Courtland Shepard, St. Louis middleweight, who won a knockout in his only professional appearance here, is to box one of the preliminaries but his opponent has not been selected as yet.

Jimmy Webb, North St. Lous light heavyweight, who laid off boxing most of the summer, is to meet Don Anderson of Chicago in another match, while Joey Silva, Los Angeles, and Henry Huerta, Peoria, both Mexicans, box in the opening event.

TRAFFIC CLUBS ANNUAL GOLF MEET TOMORROW

The semiannual Associated Traffic Clubs of America golf championship tournament will be held tomorrow and Wednesday at the Meadow Brook Country Club. The sixteenth annual meeting of the traffic clubs starts here tomorrow.

The qualifying round for the tourney will start in the morning and the match play in the afternoon, with semifinal and final matches scheduled for Wednesday. A general tournament, with blind bogey and "duffers' delight" prizes, will also be held Wednesday.

Trolley League Teams in Second Title Game Today

Edgemont and the Hufschmidts will resume their series for the Trolley League title this afternoon at State Street Park, beginning at 2:45 o'clock in the best two-out-of-three battle for the championship.

Last week, Edgemont won, 12 to 4, to gain the advantage after the teams battled to 13 innings to a 4-4 tie the previous week. The Athletics, by winning today, can clinch the championship.

BUYS APARTMENT ON LINDELL BLVD. FOR INVESTMENT

Sixty-Family Structure at 4362-72 Acquired by Group Headed by R. H. Pollak for $167,000.

By Berry Moore

A prize for which speculators have been angling, the Cathedral Court Apartment Building, a three-story fireproof structure at 4362-72 Lindell boulevard, has been acquired by a group composed of R. H. Pollak, H. N. Gores, E. C. Gores and V. E. Pollak. It occupies a lot 130 by 213 feet, extending to the east and west alley of the block.

The warranty deed bore $167 in Internal Revenue stamps, indicating a consideration of $167,000. The property was owned by the General American Life Insurance Co., which had acquired it a year or so ago under the provisions of a deed of trust for $200,000, reduced by pay-offs. The loan was made in the pre-depression era by the Missouri State Life Insurance Co. which was taken over by the General American.

Building Erected in 1924.

E. M. Worthington erected the building in 1924 at a reported cost of $300,000, anticipating the higher prices which subsequently prevailed for ground on this thoroughfare. The latter at one period ranged between $350 and $1000 a front foot for ground between Grand and Kingshighway boulevards.

The upper floors of the Cathedral Court structure contain 60 four and five room apartments with one and two baths. There are four stores on the first floor. All the units except one are leased.

Title to the property has been taken in the name of R. H. Pollak as trustee for the other members of the group. He is treasurer of the Ajax Corrugated Paper Co. The purchase was made as an investment. Lottie Hines, realtor, and Grover Godwin, engineered the deal, which was the largest involving property of this character since the advent of the fall season.

St. Regis, a Magnet.

The St. Regis, an 8-story apartment structure on the south side of Lindell boulevard, just east of Kingshighway, is another holding of the General American Life Insurance Co. which is attracting the attention of operators and investors with large capital available. It was formerly an asset of the Missouri

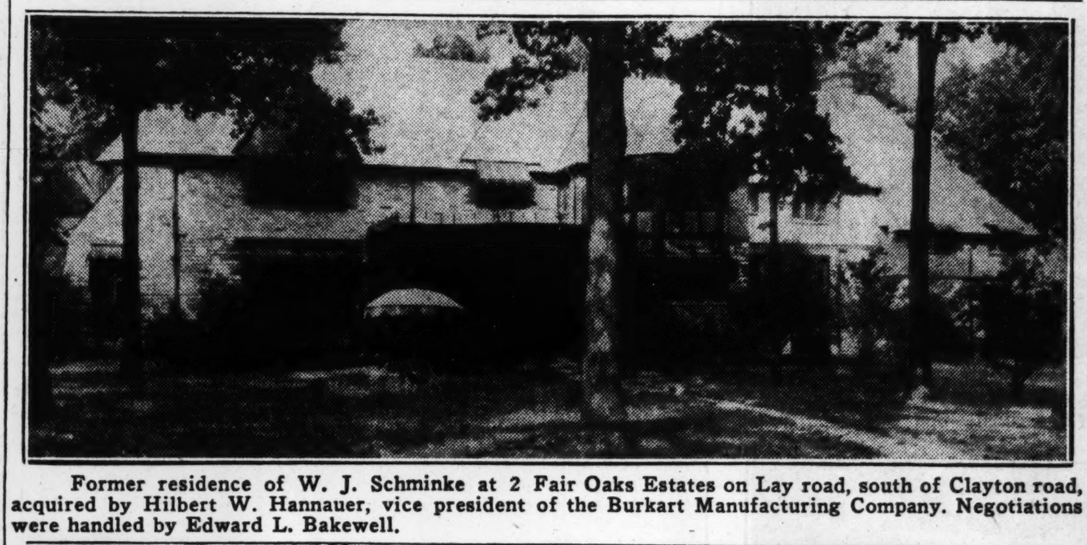
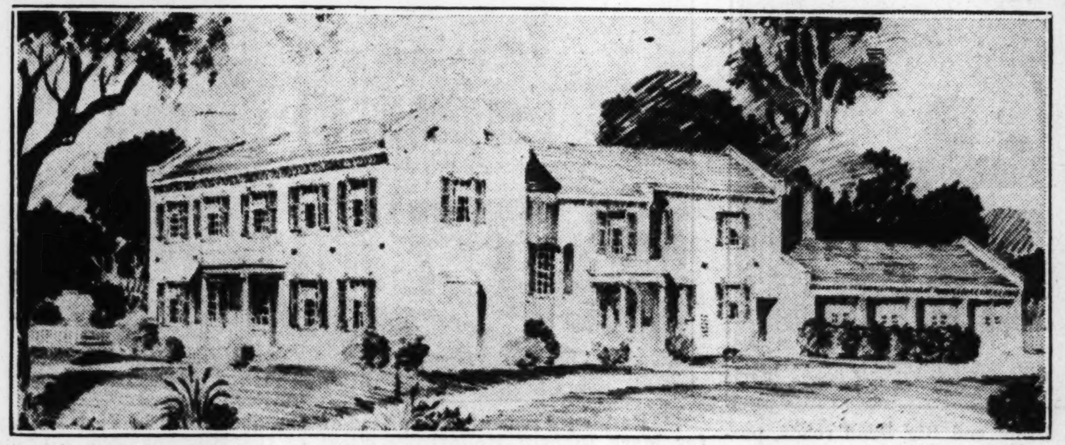
Residence Sold and Another Being Restored



Former residence of W. J. Schminke at 2 Fair Oaks Estates on Lay road, south of Clayton road, acquired by Hilbert W. Hannauer, vice president of the Burkart Manufacturing Company. Negotiations were handled by Edward L. Bakewell.



Old Brooks Homestead, country residence of Mrs. Louis Cella, at Clayton and Woods Mill roads, as it will look when alterations and additions are completed. Study and Farrar, architects.

CLAYTON-BIG BEND REALTY ACQUIRED

Marmon Realty Co. Buys 460 Feet on Ladue, West of North and South Road.

A one-story business building, with 150 by 140 feet of ground, on the north side of Clayton road, 100 feet east of Big Bend boulevard, has been acquired by W. L. McGinley, proprietor of Parkmoor, a restaurant with drive-in curb service, which has occupied it under a lease.

While not disclosed, the price paid, it was stated, reflected no recession in realty values on this stretch of Clayton road. The property was owned by the Marmon Realty Co., composed of clients of M. H. Rodemyer & Co.

The Phillips Petroleum Corporation owns and occupies the northeast corner of Clayton road and Big Bend boulevard with a super-service station. This site, 100 by 100 feet, was purchased by the oil company prior to the depression, at a price which established a record price for ground values on Clayton road.

Represented by M. H. Rodemyer & Co., the Marmon Realty Co. has acquired 460 feet of ground on the north side of Maryland avenue (Ladue road), in Clayton Gardens, Clayton, just west of the North and South road, available for business purposes.

A wedge-shaped block at the northeast corner of Brentwood (North and South road) and Maryland avenue (Ladue road), in Clayton Gardens was recently purchased by Vincent C. Sigillito, president of the Sigillito Tailoring Co. Designated as block "A" on the subdivision plat, the wedge has a frontage of 321 feet on Brentwood and 82½ feet on Maryland. Unrestricted, it is essentially a block for retail business enterprises, particularly stores, by virtue of its strategic advantages.

A. F. GODEFROY BUYS GROUND ON LINDELL FOR PARKING LOT

Alexander F. Godefroy has acquired 50 by 50 feet of vacant ground on the north side of Lindell boulevard, west of Theresa avenue. It will be occupied as a parking lot for the customers of the Godefroy Manufacturing Co., whose new building is situated on the west side of Theresa, extending from Olive to Lindell, with a frontage of approximately 45 feet on both thoroughfares.

The purchase is just west of the filling station adjoining the Godefroy building on the west. The depth of the lots on the north side of Lindell in this block was reduced 20 feet with the widening of Lindell, between Channing and North Grand boulevard. Property values at this point on Lindell were materially enhanced with the completion of the Lindell-Locust cut-off at Channing avenue.

C. OF C. TO STUDY SLUMP IN BUILDING

Attempt Will Be Made to Find Reason for Slowing Up in Home Construction.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9. — The Chamber of Commerce of the United States said today it would call a building industry conference soon to find out why residential construction is slowing down and to chart methods of stimulating this building.

In a statement, George H. Davis, the Chamber president, said an increase in private residential construction "must depend upon private enterprise."

"At the beginning of 1937," Davis said, "It was the general opinion that there would be an increase this year over the 1936 volume of between 50 and 60 per cent.

"In the past few months, however, the rate of increase was materially slackened so that it now appears that the increase will scarcely be more than half of that predicted."

Davis said the Government's slum clearance program "at most can provide only a small fraction of the total dwellings required." He set Government building at from 35,000 to 40,000 units annually for the next three years compared with total annual requirements of "several hundred thousand."

RESTORATION WORK BEGUN ON OLD BROOKS HOMESTEAD

Work has been started on the restoration of the old Brooks homestead at Clayton and Woods Mill road, the country residence of Mrs. Louis Cella.

Extensive changes and additions are being made under the direction of Study & Farrar, architects. Extending side wings are being added to the original building following the same lines of the old house, the architects faithfully preserving the original character of this early farmhouse.

There will be a large entrance hall with fine colonial stairs leading to second floor, spacious living room, paneled library, dining room, service quarters and maid's room on the first floor. The second floor will have four bedrooms with individual baths for the principal rooms, sewing room and storeroom. A four-car garage attached to the house will form one of the extended wings. The architectural details have been studied from our early American architecture and reflect a marked Greek influence.

An interesting feature of the old house which the architects are careful to preserve is a stone vaulted fruit and wine cellar, which extends under a portion of the original central pavilion. The walls of the house will be painted white and set off by green shutters and a dark green slate roof.

Greenman Theaters, Inc., has started construction on a studio store and theater building at 6220 Natural Bridge road.

Fireproof in construction, the new building will be modernistic in design, with the interior along the stadium type idea. It will contain 1200 cushioned seats and will be replete with innovations, including an air-conditioning system. There will be five stores fronting on Natural Bridge avenue and parking space for 350 automobiles.

Ground has also been acquired for additional parking space to provide for future requirements. The building will occupy a lot 175 by 140 feet.

The new theater will be under the management of Robert Lehr, manager of the Normandy Theater.

The John C. Greulich Realty & Investment Co. effected the sale. No mention of the price paid was made.

The land is situated about three miles east of the new Daniel Boone bridge over the Missouri River, carrying United States highway No. 40 and is near the Rock Island Railway. The highway and railroad afford shipping facilities for this section.

The purchasers will install modern packing facilities for vegetables, berries and melons for shipment to the northern and eastern markets. The tract is improved with a seven-room residence, barn and outbuildings.

Hellwig Bros. now operate a packing and shipping business on Hall's Ferry road near the city limits.

State Life Insurance Co., which had acquired it from the International Life Insurance Co., the latter having purchased it from Claude E. Vrooman, the real estate operator. This deal was handled by the late James N. Franciscus, president of the Franciscus Realty Co.

Virtually overlooking Forest Park and diagonally opposite the Chase Hotel at the northeast corner of Lindell and Kingshighway boulevards, the St. Regis is one of the most distinctive structures of its character in the city. It is under the management of M. H. Rodemyer & Co. Its tenants include some of the most socially prominent families of the city.

Another deal of the week in which Lottie Hines and Grover Godwin participated, involved a 24-unit apartment at 4417 Forest Park boulevard. John P. Flachmeier was the purchaser. The basement includes a garage and laundry facilities. The apartments are 100 per cent rented, according to the agents. The reported consideration was $75,000, which, however, was not verified by the writer.

Town Club Building.

An object of speculative interest is the seven-story Town Club Building, at 1120 Locust street, which has been placed on the market by the Mercantile-Commerce Bank & Trust Co., co-executor of the T. M. Sayman estate, through its real estate department. It was acquired by the late soap manufacturer in 1934 under a $280,000 mortgage.

The building, which is of baroque design, was erected by the defunct Town Club, an organization of business women, at a reported cost of $400,000, including that of the site, 46½ by 106 feet. It was dedicated with elaborate ceremony Jan. 4, 1925. The Club quarters include two dining rooms, a lounge and a swimming pool. Part of the space in the building, including the frist floor, has been occupied for several years by commercial establishments.

The Sayman estate also owns the old five-story building at 1124-1126 Locust street, occupying a lot 46 by 106 feet. Adjoining the Town Club Building on the east, it is situated at the southeast corner of the north and south alley of the block. It was purchased by the late Mr. Sayman, in July, 1934, from the Howard L. O'Fallon and Charles H. Turner Jr. estate, represented by the Mississippi Valley Trust Co.

It was Mr. Sayman's intention to replace this building with one to conform with the Town Club.

REALTORS TO DISCUSS SPECIAL BRANCHES

A striking development of the last few years in the field of real estate has been the increasing recognition of the importance of neighborhood factors as affecting the use and value of real estate. At the coming thirtieth annual convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards at Pittsburgh, Oct. 20-22, three of the great specialized branches of the business of real estate represented by the Association's Divisions and Institutes have selected as a central topic for their individual programs this important matter of relationship between the individual property and its neighborhood. Brokers will discuss neighborhood factors affecting present and future use as they should be studied both on behalf of the buyer and on behalf of the seller, to find the logical user. Appraisers will study analysis of a given property's neighborhood (and hence its own probable future) to judge advisability of a mortgage loan upon it. Property managers will discuss the need of constant reshaping of the administration plan for a property in line with neighborhood trends.

Wallace W. True, New York, Equitable Life Assurance Society's city mortgage department, will speak before the American Institute of Real Estate Appraisers on "Neighborhood Analysis in the Appraisal of Real Property." Robert H. Armstrong, New York, president of the New York chapter of the association, will speak before its Brokers Division on "Neighborhood Factors in Real Estate Brokerage." James C. Downs Jr., Chicago, president of Continental Management Company, will address the Institute of Real Estate Management on "Keeping Management Policies in Line with Neighborhood Forces."

Joseph J. Greenberg, Philadelphia, immediate past president of the Philadelphia Real Estate Board, will address the brokers division on "Selling America." His civic work includes service as a member of the executive committee of the City Planning Commission of Philadelphia, having charge of future planning of Philadelphia and surrounding territory.

Frank C. Owens, Atlanta, Ga., recently chosen vice-president of the association for the southeast region, will speak before the brokers division on the subject "Analysis of the Gross Income and Operating Costs of Real Estate Brokerage Firms." He is vice-chairman of the brokers division for the southeast region and a past president of the Atlanta Real Estate Board.

A national question-box on real estate management will be a feature of the convention program of the Institute of Real Estate Management, with six of the institute's leaders on the platform to answer the questions. J. W. Markeim, Camden, N. J. (Markeim-Chalmers-Ludington, Inc.), vice-president of the institute for the Central Atlantic region, will be discussion leader.

The States Council of the association, made up of representatives from each State, and formed to discuss matters involving state-wide action, will have before its Pittsburgh meeting the broad question of what its future program should be. Donald T. Pomeroy, Syracuse, N. Y., immediate past chairman of the association's States Council and 1935 president of the Real Estate Association of the State of New York, will lead discussion on this subject.

Mrs. Violet D. Dunham, Orlando, Fla., executive secretary of the Florida Association of Real Estate Boards, and junior vice-chairman of the States Council, will lead a council discussion on "Methods of Building Up State Association Membership."

A Carefully La

Importance of Proper Shrubbery Which Ties House Into Its Surroundings Stressed for Budgeting Home Builder.

FEW home builders plan in the budget that provides for the house a sum, however small, that will cover the cost of modest landscaping. They set aside money for every modern gadget that will make the house a thing of beauty and eternal joy to live in but fail to consider the exterior, the shrubs and plants that tie the house into its setting. Consequently, so many new houses are stranded in a barren wilderness, with a square of sodded lawn and two evergreens to mark the doorway.

If one is lucky and inclined to look for them, one finds a plot of ground with a few trees on it. But, as these architects say, the trees are usually in the wrong place and therefore of little benefit. Trees may be acquired. There is the fast growing Chinese elm and even the smaller ones will be flourishing and of good size by the time the mortgage is paid off!

Shrubbery is of greatest importance to the new house. It provides the frame, simple or ornate, for the house. Houses are inclined to be angular, a fact well illustrated by the perspective of the house that is shown without trees and bushes. Shrubs well chosen, tie the house into its surroundings. They cast pleasing shadows on the walls and often bring out the form of the house to best advantage. They set the tone that most home owners desire and few know how to achieve: they make a house look substantial.

A great many amateur landscape artists feel that evergreens are of prime importance. Evergreens are expensive and slow growing and where cost is an item they should be used as accents; to mark an entrance rather than a doorway.

There are many shrubs in the market which will stand the stress of city life. There are some that flower at certain seasons and retain a definite color in their twigs in the winter. Most of these shrubs require little care; they are grateful for a little cultivation two or three times a year and a little judicious pruning in the late winter. While flower gardens are grand to think about and plan, few of us are willing to give the time that is required for the best results; so shrubs are the natural answer.

IT is well to remember, in selecting shrubs for what is commonly known as foundation planting, to select those that will grow naturally tall for places in which they are needed. Corners of the house, wall space where there are no windows, call for taller shrubs. Slow growing shrubs and those that grow low should be kept for windows unless a screen is desired. And speaking of screens and screen planting, it is possible even for the amateur gardener to plant a wall of green and encourage its growth to hide an objectionable feature either in the neighborhood or on the lot. A service yard may be screened, or an ashpit or an incinerator and very often the objectionable feature becomes a distinct asset to the owner.

It is not necessary to landscape an entire plot the first year. Landscaping, like carefully planned homes, will admit of additions. Usually the most necessary planting is made and shrubs are filled in as the seasons roll around. A definite plan for planting is of greatest importance since it saves any future uprooting of shrubs and bushes which are growing nicely.

The house shown here, which has a definite planting plan, is of the cottage type. In fact it might be called a Cape Cod house since it has the central entrance and dormer windows. It is compact yet roomy. The natural circulation of the first floor, beside the staircase, is taken up by two closets and the circulation has been shifted through the living room and dining room. A Carefully Landscaped Cottage Type House

Courtesy KLINGENSMITH & GROVER MEMBERS ST. LOUIS CHAPT. AMER. INST. OF ARCHITECTS

FEW home builders plan in the budget that provides for the house a sum, however small, that will cover the cost of modest landscaping. They set aside money for every modern gadget that will make the house a thing of beauty and eternal joy to live in but fail to consider the exterior, the shrubs and plants that tie the house into its setting. Consequently, so many new houses are stranded in a barren wilderness, with a square of sodded lawn and two evergreens to mark the doorway.

There is the fast growing Chinese elm and even the smaller ones will be flourishing and of good size by the time the mortgage is paid off!

Shrubbery is of greatest importance to the new house. It provides the frame, simple or ornate, for the house. Houses are inclined to be angular, a fact well illustrated by the perspective of the house that is shown without trees and bushes. Shrubs well chosen, tie the house into its surroundings. They cast pleasing shadows on the walls and often bring out the form of the house to best advantage. They set the tone that most home owners desire and few know how to achieve: they make a house look substantial.

A great many amateur landscape artists feel that evergreens are of prime importance. Evergreens are expensive and slow growing and where cost is an item they should be used as accents; to mark an entrance rather than a doorway.

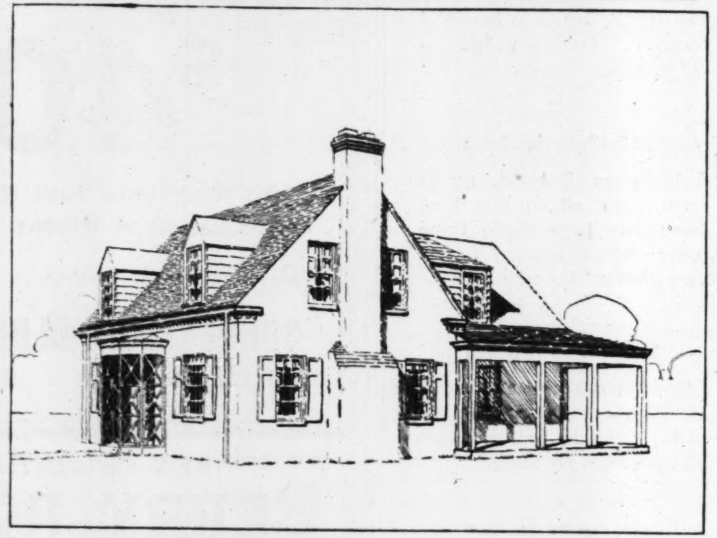
There are many shrubs in the market which will stand the stress of city life. There are some that flower at certain seasons and retain a definite color in their twigs in the winter. Most of these shrubs require little care; they are grateful for a little cultivation two or three times a year and a little judicious pruning in the late winter. While flower gardens are grand to think about and plan, few of us are willing to give the time that is required for the best results; so shrubs are the natural answer.

IT is well to remember, in selecting shrubs for what is commonly known as foundation planting, to select those that will grow naturally tall for places in which they are needed. Corners of the house, wall space where there are no windows, call for taller shrubs. Slow growing shrubs and those that grow low should be kept for windows unless a screen is desired. And speaking of screens and screen planting, it is possible even for the amateur gardener to plant a wall of green and encourage its growth to hide an objectionable feature either in the neighborhood or on the lot. A service yard may be screened, or an ashpit or an incinerator and very often the objectionable feature becomes a distinct asset to the owner.

It is not necessary to landscape an entire plot the first year. Landscaping, like carefully planned homes, will admit of additions. Usually the most necessary planting is made and shrubs are filled in as the seasons roll around. A definite plan for planting is of greatest importance since it saves any future uprooting of shrubs and bushes which are growing nicely.

The house shown here, which has a definite planting plan, is of the cottage type. In fact it might be called a Cape Cod house since it has the central entrance and dormer windows. It is compact yet roomy. The natural circulation of the first floor, beside the staircase, is taken up by two closets and the circulation has been shifted through the living room and dining room. A tiny passageway at the back gives access to the basement stairs, the kitchen, and a first floor lavatory.

The garage is attached and a hooded entrance makes it possible to garage the family conveyance without getting into the weather. Where the extra expense is no consideration, a fire door, placed in the rectangle made by the kitchen storage closet and rear entrance to the kitchen, would give direct access to the garage.



THE living room has three exposures, one of them being an opening on a covered living porch which may be screened. The amateur gardner may provide himself with innumerable hours of pleasure by installing a small white fence which would partially screen the drying yard beside the garage. Here he might plant a formal garden which would provide a delightful vista from the living room and porch. Or, where the drying yard may be dispensed with, he might plan an angle garden which might hold all manner of surprises from a dancing faun against some greenery to a lily pool.

The kitchen is a cleverly planned room which is also a breakfast nook, thanks to the bay window. There are built-in cabinets and cases under and over the sink. The stove has its share of cabinets and cases which have a way of simplifying the housekeeping and entertaining problem. Wall space near the stove has been set aside for the ventilating fan and there is no danger of cooking odors greeting the visitor at the front door.

Three bedrooms and a centrally located bath complete the second floor. As the plan is now, there are roomy closets and many exposures for each bedroom. The large closet in the hall was planned for a blanket and bedding closet. The linen closet is just outside the bathroom door. Where an extra bath is desired or a bath with the master bedroom, the existing bath may be thrown en suite with the master bedroom by the removal of one of the walls. An additional bath may be installed directly opposite the present one by using one of the dormers.

The house may be built of used brick or frame and painted white, whereas the wall which it encloses and the door might be painted a sky blue by way of contrast with the blue-gray roof and darker blue shutters. The porch ceiling, too, would be painted sky blue, since this color reflects a pleasant light. If sandmold brick, which carries a mellow color, is used, the exterior trim would be done in white or cream and the lattice would be done in the same color.

The architects have indicated the foundation planting. Shrubs rather than evergreens mark the doorway. Taller shrubs and a tree have been indicated for the corners of the house, while a Virginia creeper is trained up the chimney. Low shrubs and bushes are used for the porch and windows.

The house was planned by Klingensmith & Grover, members of the St. Louis Chapter, American Institute of Architects.

Brief Description of Architectural Styles

A brief history and description of the types of architecture prevalent throughout the United States follows:

Colonial—The early New England homes were built by craftsmen who learned their trade in England. The difficulty of obtaining many materials resulted in simple and restrained style. Modern Colonial homes follow this early tradition.

Georgian—Early Southern planters imported architects from abroad to design formal homes in the Georgian style known in Europe. Sophisticated homes of great refinement resulted.

English—The picturesque, rambling type of house first used in rural France and later in England during the time of Elizabeth is known as English Tudor. The English home has low, graceful lines and interesting surface textures.

Modern—The term "machines for living" is often applied to the flat-roofed, severely plain homes designated as "modern." Designed primarily for utility and convenience, they reflect the modern attitude in building. These homes are popular in France, Germany, and Holland as well as in the United States.

French—There is a touch of formality in our modern French houses, reflecting the high culture of the period from which they sprung.

Monterey—One of the most attractive of the current California types, warm and friendly in a spirit, a union of the Colonial with the early Californian architecture.

YOUR CHILD IS SAFE IN WEBSTER

The yards here are large enough to play in, even the delivery truck drivers are children-conscious. Webster schools are not surpassed by any in the State. Parents enjoy the pure atmosphere; homes stay clean longer, laundry, light and doctor bills are less. Start buying a home, the one thing you have to continually pay out money for, which is worth a greater percentage when you are through with it than anything else you use.

Fall Used Car Sale Starts Tomorrow!

Automobile dealers throughout Greater St. Louis MUST have more floor space to accomodate trade-in merchandise that will result from the influx of new cars into trade channels. Restricted space, crowded showrooms, overflowing lots make it imperative that they SACRIFICE existing PRICES, move their stocks and make room. Look over these selected bargains.

SALESMEN WANTED

ATTENTION—MEN WHO ARE UNEMPLOYED.

In and around St. Louis are men that are complaining about work being very hard to find. Some of these men actually want work, others are not looking for work, or want something that is easy to do for a mere existence. To the men looking for a chance to prove their ability with possibilities of earning a good consistent living for themselves and their families we can present a splendid opportunity.

In our previous announcements we have repeatedly made the statement that we are not interested in men who are merely concerned with the limitations of a small income. However, we will go a long way in helping a man to a lucrative and permanent future if that man is big enough and willing enough to realize that he must pay the price and prove his worth to us by actual and conscientious hard work.

In order to assure that no man will remain in a rut because of a stipulated income used as a harness over him, we pay our men on a profit-sharing basis, giving them a chance to receive in dollars and cents what they actually earn.

This business is both modern and mutual. No investment is required from any man qualifying. We finance everything.

Our requirements are: Good references and neat appearance. To you who are reading this ad, is your future worth two hours interview with our factory representative? Where he can outline what we consider a real opportunity to you?

This ad gives no honest, industrious man an excuse for being out of work. We are not interested in ad seekers or floaters. Apply in person, 512 Paul Brown Bldg., 9th and Olive sts., Monday morning, 9:15 to 1:15 only.

This is a special interview and may mean the turning point of your life regardless of your present occupation.

RECEIVING with her parents and five brothers at their home, Melody Farm, in Huntleigh Village, Miss Mildred Anderson Bakewell was presented to society last night at the first ball of the season. The guest of honor, who made her first formal appearance as a special maid of honor at the Veiled Prophet ball, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Lilburn Bakewell, and is a granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Bakewell and of the late Mr. and Mrs. Lorenzo E. Anderson.

The party was given in an all-white setting. The house itself is white, of Southern Colonial architecture, set back in a thick grove of trees which screens it from the road. Lights shone on a fountain playing on the front lawn, and on the inclosed rose garden at the side.

The effect of whiteness of the freshly decorated interior was enhanced by white chrysanthemums massed as a background for the receiving line before the fireplace at the north end of the living room, and again in tall book niches at either side of the wide door at the other. White carpeting was stretched over the entire lower floor, and lights from crystal chandeliers were augmented by candles in tall wrought iron candelabra at the mantel. The one contrasting color note was in crimson-seated chairs set in long French windows.

After descending the winding stairway with gift flowers sent to the debutante arranged along its edge, guests greeted Mr. and Mrs. Bakewell, their daughter and their sons, Anderson, Alexander, Edward L. Jr., Nicholas and Peter, and passed either on to the sunroom, where white again predominated, or to the terrace for dancing.

A hedge of English boxwood bordered the orchestra platform, and the entire terrace was inclosed in a marquee leading off from the colonial doorway. Alternate panels in the canvas were raised to permit a view of the garden.

Spruce boughs growing at each side of the door were arched overhead. Green bay trees garlanded together with smilax and banked at the base with baskets of blossoms bordered the canvas enclosure.

White chrysanthemums were used in the reception hall, and autumn shades in the dining room, where an elaborate buffet was spread. The table, extending almost the length of the room, was covered to the floor with white satin. In the center rose a tiered crystal epergne holding autumn flowers and tropical fruits, and about the edge were decorated whole turkeys, pheasants and wild ducks roasted in plumage, and lobsters on special stands. White candles in branched silver candelabra stood at each end. The supper, served at midnight, was followed early this morning by an informal breakfast.

Miss Bakewell wore the gown in which she served as a special maid of honor at the ball Wednesday night. The youthful frock of fragile white lace, in which the design is traced by a silver thread, is over mirrored silver cloth. The slim bodice is held in place by shoulder straps of glistening diamentes and the bustline is defined by a drapery of turquoise velvet. A bouffant skirt, with a slight train, falls from a girdle of crushed turquoise velvet, the silver-lined ends of which reaches to the end of the train. The same color of velvet used on the gown fashions a court train lined with mirrored silver cloth and is decorated with two inserted panels of silver embroidered lace. She carried an armful of crimson roses.

Guests included not only debutantes of the season, but a few young married friends, and contemporaries of the host and hostess.

The Fashion Influences in Coats and Suits

This season at the Paris openings much of the artistery usually reserved for gowns seemed to be lavished on coats and suits. The Lockhart Collection reflects this feeling. Never have coats and suits been so highly original. And the more fur, the more chic . . . bands of fur, sleeves of fur and exquisite collars. Suits are in both two and three piece models. WASHINGTON SCENE

By the POE SISTERS

MRS. FRANKLIN DELANO ROOSEVELT will celebrate her birthday in the White House tomorrow. While in her early fifties, Mrs. Roosevelt does not look her age by many years. Mrs. Roosevelt is the daughter of Elliott Roosevelt and his wife, who was Miss Anna Hall of New York. She was born in New York City Oct. 11, 1884, and was educated in private schools in New York City and abroad.

Her mother died when she was quite young and she was reared by her mother's sisters.

Mrs. Roosevelt always observes her birthdays quietly and there will be no special observance of the day save a family dinner and messages and gifts from members of her family and close personal friends.

Many of the same Washingtonians who have aided Book Week for the American Merchant Marine Library here for several seasons, joined in the Book Week of the same organization in Newport recently under the direction of Mrs. Henry Howard who comes here each year to direct the collecting of books for men on American vessels.

When Mrs. Gibson Fahnestock was chairman of one of these campaigns, enormous wooden books were set up at vantage points in the capital and every one who could dropped a book in them as they passed by. The donors even included members of foreign embassies and legations.

At the Newport function Mme. Maxim Karolik gave a tea and charged books as the price of admission.

Apropos of the expected visit of the Duke and Duchess of Windsor it is rather amusing to discover how many of the socially prominent, who attended the coronation returned bearing illuminated charts and scrolls acquired at huge prices from genealogists who took advantage aroused by the exhibition conducted by the Society of Genealogists. Queen Mary is a patroness of that society. Of course, the exhibitions included the records and genealogy of famous British families but the Americans were most interested in tracing their own ancestry.

Speaking of British royalty, one wonders if the Duke of Windsor remembers the mad rush to entertain him when he visited America before. He only paid two private calls in Washington, one on the late Mrs. George Dewey, widow of the Admiral of the Navy, and the other on Mrs. Clarence Crittenden Calhoun.

In his November, 1919 visit, the Duke, then the Prince of Wales, stayed at the Perry Belmont home which had been lent by Mr. and Mrs. Perry Belmont. The Belmont home is now the headquarters of the Eastern Star in Washington. It was one of the handsomest houses in the capital during that era. Mrs. Belmont who died several years ago had furnished her boudoir with furniture once owned by Marie Antoinette.

An amusing incident took place one night at the Perry Belmont residence. A new official and his wife who had been invited to dinner there arrived in ordinary evening dress. But Mrs. New Official would not go in until she had returned to her own home and donned fancy dress and her husband had borrowed a powdered wig from a friend. When they came in costume, the other guests, all in formal evening dress, just gasped, and Mr. and Mrs. Belmont made no comment at all.

Visitors at the American legation in Oslo, Norway, recently brought back words that the American Minister Mrs. J. Borden Harriman had placed the tapestry covers she embroidered with her own hands on her dining room chairs in the legation.

Banishes Blackheads

If blackheads are the bane of your existence . . . if your beauty is marred by large, unattractive pores . . . if your skin is excessively oily, you will praise Helena Rubinstein, celebrated beauty authority, for creating her new Special Pore Masque. This marvelous new cream masque cleanses and purifies "soiled skin." The moment it touches your face, you feel its deep-clearing, stimulating action. Feel the masque tightening . . . working over cheek bones and about the nose where the pores are most inclined to open. After 20 minutes, you remove the masque . . . look into your mirror and behold—instead of blackheads and large pores—a skin that is clear, radiant, exquisitely transparent, glowing with loveliness. And you take a new lease on life! Try the Special Pore Masque soon. 2.00. This marvelous new preparation is available at all smart stores.

Millions Thrilled By New Beauty Amazing Shampoo Gives To Hair

IMPROPER WAY
Hair dull, covered with cloudy film.

CORRECT NEW WAY

NOT A SOAP—NOT AN OIL

It's no wonder women everywhere are raving about this amazing, new liquid shampoo—no wonder one trial converts them for life! For it gives your hair a thrilling new gleam. Yes, actually transforms dull, average-looking hair into a brilliant, glistening crown of loveliness—with a single application.

Just how this unusual shampoo works these miracles is a new scientific secret. It is not an oil, it is not a soap—it isn't anything you've heard of before. Scientists have brought us something brand-new; a shampoo so different that they've patented the process by which it is made. You simply wet your hair, pour on a few drops and instantly you get a glorious, billowy lather. 5 times more lather than soap in hardest water. Lather so cleansing that it rids hair and scalp of dirt, grime and perspiration with a single sudsing. You cannot possibly find an easier way to clean your hair.

You rub this active lather briskly into the hair, rinse thoroughly—and you're through. "What?" you say, "no special rinses; no vinegar, lemon or after-rinses to 'cut' the film?" No—they are not necessary—just a thorough dousing in clear water! That's the marvelous part. Drene cannot leave sticky film on hair to cover up natural lustre as ordinary shampoos do. It is left brilliant and immaculately clean, which is highly important before a permanent. For the condition of your hair before you get a permanent usually determines how your wave will turn out, and Drene leaves every hair so clean; so free of film that the wave solution can take hold evenly. Naturally, then, your permanent is softer, more lustrous, more beautiful. Even dull, bleached or dyed hair becomes more brilliant, more natural looking after a Drene shampoo. More amazing, embarrassing flakes of dandruff disappear with a single washing, leaving the scalp scrupulously clean. Tested and approved by Good Housekeeping Bureau. Women who have used it for months rave about the thrilling new beauty, new life, new brilliance, their hair possesses.

Procter & Gamble make this marvel, and you can buy it in various sizes at all drug, department and ten cent stores. Only half a tablespoonful for a perfect shampoo. The most economical and beautifying shampoo you have ever used. Try Drene at once. Buy the large size and save money.

John Perona, for the start of Morocco's seventh season as the de luxe supper stop of the world, assembled every worth-while celebrity in Manhattan in their most spectacular broadcloth and emeralds, so that a table of the town's most celebrated reporters, including Nancy Randolph, Maury Paul and Gloria Braggiotti, wore out copy pencils by the bundle taking notes on their ermine and airgrettes.

All the same fine and fancy folk who decorated Morocco had, the night before, watched Prince Serge Obolensky and Count Vava Adlerberg reopen the Maisonette Russe with more ceremony, red-plush footmen, candelabra, fire-eating and swordsmanship than even Cecil de Mille dreams of, and in the end six very strong waiters picked up Gilbert Miller on their shoulders, not to toss him into the street but to carry him around the room, to the delight and amazement of all.

AN all-time high, we submit, in super-gaudy lux, ranking with imperial sable bed throws, the air-cooled cow carried on the younger James Gordon Bennett's yacht and the reported hunting expedition in Africa organized to bring back superlative alligator skins for Mrs. Ed Hutton's traveling luggage, is the mink-lined dinner jacket which Jock McLean has had built against week-ending in English country houses where central heating is still as much of a luxury as soap in Russia.

Evidently McLean felt put to it to keep up with his gusty and legendary mother, Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean, who wears the Hope diamond to bed with her and once hired two private detectives to guard her while swimming at Bailey's Beach, saying: "I must have someone to watch me!" McLean's mink-lined jacket was first worn the other evening at a coolish outdoor supper party given for Mimi Baker by Margaret Emerson at Sands Point and was reported to be equally proof against the early autumn chill and the frigid envy of various young exquisites present who doubtless have duplicates of it in the works by now.

THE MOST REMARKABLE and fluid of the town's invitation lists is that of Conde Nast, premiere party-giver of Park Avenue and a host whose summonses to cocktail levies or after-theater routs have about them the urgency of a royal command. On various occasions he can corral congresses of theater folk, literary luminaries, music aficionados, cafe celebrities, foreign dignitaries or old-time cave-dweller carriage trade, and sometimes he mixes them all together for Morris dancing on a monster scale in his celebrated Park avenue penthouse.

Last week he entertained for Lucien Lelong, the high-toned couturier from Paris, and, as Margaret Pemberton remarked, the event was the occasion of a boom in the dressmaking and tailoring shops, as nobody dared appear in clothes he had worn anywhere else before. Every smart shop in town was represented by executives, including Mrs. Hortense M. Odlum, Dorothy Shaver, Lilly Dache, Mary Lewis and Edward Goodman, sporting a new Legion ribbon in his buttonhole.

New York Explodes Into Winter Season; Citizens Live in Dinner Clothes

Reservations Are a Necessity at the Moment in Almost Every Smart Restaurant in Town.

By LUCIUS BEEBE

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.

LAST week fairly exploded Manhattan into the winter season and the citizenry awoke, after a series of a super-gala stupendous openings of theaters, restaurants, night clubs and dressmaking establishments, to the realization that for the next four months it would have to live in its dinner clothes. As though it weren't bad enough for Morocco and the St. Regis's Maisonette Russe to open on successive nights, Dorothy King threw away the key to her very posh dressmaking parlors: Gilbert Miller staged the season's first court-dress premiere with "French Without Tears," at Henry Miller's; Bugs Meredith and Dorothy Gish carried on in a new Maxwell Anderson show at the Empire, with all the brilliance implicit in the names of the place and the players, and Dwight Fiske blew a series of resounding and bawdy "birds" at the world in general from the piano at the Savoy Plaza. Headache remedy sales jumped as though with the hot foot, everybody got out their ruby sunbursts and stomachers and the Colony sold 30 brace of grouse in one evening.

John Perona, for the start of Morocco's seventh season as the de luxe supper stop of the world, assembled every worth-while celebrity in Manhattan in their most spectacular broadcloth and emeralds, so that a table of the town's most celebrated reporters, including Nancy Randolph, Maury Paul and Gloria Braggiotti, wore out copy pencils by the bundle taking notes on their ermine and airgrettes.

All the same fine and fancy folk who decorated Morocco had, the night before, watched Prince Serge Obolensky and Count Vava Adlerberg reopen the Maisonette Russe with more ceremony, red-plush footmen, candelabra, fire-eating and swordsmanship than even Cecil de Mille dreams of, and in the end six very strong waiters picked up Gilbert Miller on their shoulders, not to toss him into the street but to carry him around the room, to the delight and amazement of all.

AN all-time high, we submit, in super-gaudy lux, ranking with imperial sable bed throws, the air-cooled cow carried on the younger James Gordon Bennett's yacht and the reported hunting expedition in Africa organized to bring back superlative alligator skins for Mrs. Ed Hutton's traveling luggage, is the mink-lined dinner jacket which Jock McLean has had built against week-ending in English country houses where central heating is still as much of a luxury as soap in Russia.

On various occasions he can corral congresses of theater folk, literary luminaries, music aficionados, cafe celebrities, foreign dignitaries or old-time cave-dweller carriage trade, and sometimes he mixes them all together for Morris dancing on a monster scale in his celebrated Park avenue penthouse.

Last week he entertained for Lucien Lelong, the high-toned couturier from Paris, and, as Margaret Pemberton remarked, the event was the occasion of a boom in the dressmaking and tailoring shops, as nobody dared appear in clothes he had worn anywhere else before. Every smart shop in town was represented by executives, including Mrs. Hortense M. Odlum, Dorothy Shaver, Lilly Dache, Mary Lewis and Edward Goodman, sporting a new Legion ribbon in his buttonhole.

The fashion reporters formed a solid phalanx, with Edna Chase, Margaret Case Harriman and Alice Hughes, in that sailor hat that says "McMix" on the front of it, in the front rank, and Molly Thayer, looking vaguely like an Arab tent in a skirt made of awning stripes; Prunella Wood, Nancy Randolph and Kay Halle, splashing around in puddles of old-fashioneds like things demented. What the girls were wearing at Nast's will be everywhere, from Tyler, Tex., to Oregon, as soon as "Vogue" and "Harper's Bazaar" get on the stands next month.

THE following letter has been received by this department's boss and treacherously turned over for our admonishment:

"Dear Stanley Walker:

"In my best copperplate hand I wish to inform you that I have been coasting down rivers in the midst of the Rhineland grape harvest. The point is that I am in the McGeehan wine and beer country. At every possible tavern which displays a green bloom (to show the new wine is in) I stop and have a stirrup cup. Sometimes I even have the saddle. All in memory of Bill.

"Aglow with wine and sausage (and beer), I feel that your foul Mr. Beebe, in his passion for the French kitchen, has neglected our central European cuisine and cellars. Will you please fire him? I don't give a damn how well dressed he is.

"I met a Countess today who has a bulbous nose and a frayed dog named Susie. What fun! We drank, drew filthy pictures and listened to Susie's happy belches.

"Don't forget to fire Beebe!

"Regards,
"GENE FOWLER."

Fowler is a low ingrate. We were just preparing to tell you not to think of missing his new book, "Salute to the Past." Now we'll have to think it over, but in the meantime: it's a honey and in the master's best style. Epic is practically the word.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.

MOLLY (Mrs. Sigourny) Thayer will take over the women's and society pages of "The World-Telegram," lock, stock and barrel, starting this Monday . . . For urbanites living on package foods and delicatessen who still crave the vitality of corn-fed lads in parts rural, Saks Fifth avenue is stocking capsule concentrates called Vitamins Plus . . . They are being promoted by Henry Sell and are exploited on a cosmetic rather than a medicinal basis, as aids to vigor and beauty rather than from a tonic angle . . , Smart business . . . The mad piano - playing Johnny Payne is returning to the Monkey Bar at the Elysee Oct. 11, with what is promised as a more than ever lunatic repertory . . . "Time-Fortune" offices are trying to run down the original wag who coined the anecdote about the infant daughter of a "Time" magazine executive who every evening signed off from her prayers with "Time marches on!" . . . Whether they want to credit him with the witticism or crucify him, nobody knows . . . Young men of fashion had better hurry to Saks—Fifth avenue for a pair of their new giraffe skin gloves, tan on the palm side, fawn on the back and the stitching of leather. Cary Grant is reported already to have bought three pairs. L. B.

THEY'RE IN THE BIG MONEY

●Many Women in United States Have Salaries Ranging From $20,000 to $50,000 a Year; Others Have Disclosed Ability in Managing and Increasing Large Inheritances.

By LILLIAN VERGARA

STORMING the man-made barriers which for years kept women from the higher income brackets, the feminine contingent in the business world is hurling a genuine challenge today at the male monopoly of the top-drawer jobs.

Figures compiled by Uncle Sam indicate an amazing number of women whose salaries range from $20,000 to $50,000—an exalted financial position which once was reserved for smug gentlemen who insisted that "woman's place is in the home."

These high-salaried jobs, added to the fact that women have for some time controlled from 60 to 70 per cent of the inherited wealth of the nation, have greatly enhanced the prestige and power of American femininity.

In no other country in the world could astounding figures be produced such as those which prove that in the United States 70 per cent of the nation's total wealth of 300 billion dollars is in the hands of women. The fact that some of these billions have been dropped into the coffers of the fair sex by inheritance does not lessen the miracle of achievement by which American women have gained their enviable economic position.

For not only have business women, despite many obstacles and much prejudice, fought their way to the upper rungs of the economic ladder, but, having acquired their hard-earned dollars, they have proved themselves masters in the art of investing them. The fact that women own the major portion of the nation's outstanding stocks and bonds; that their savings accounts far surpass those held by men; that their real estate holdings are tremendous, give evidence of the foresight and economic wisdom of the "weaker sex."

Typical of the women who have hurdled the business and financial barriers are Sarah M. Sheridan who, as vice-president of the Detroit Edison Co., earns $27,762 a year; Valeria Bonham, president of Valeria Homes, Inc., whose salary is $40,000, and Blanche Green, president of the Spencer Corset Co., of Connecticut, who earns $57,629. Rose B. Heintz, treasurer of the John Eichler Brewing Co., cashes a yearly pay check of $26,666; Sophia R. Louttit, head of an important laundry company in Providence, R. I., has an annual salary of $36,000 and Lila Wallace, who works only half time as treasurer of the Readers' Digest Associate, in New York, is paid $24,000 a year for her services.

Other interesting women who, through sheer ability and industry have lifted themselves into the higher income brackets are Edna Newton, editor of the Conde Nast Publishing Co., who earns $28,865; Helene Neuschaefer, able secretary of A. Sartorious & Co., New York, with an annual salary of $30,000; Minna E. Flynn, first vice-president of the R. E. Sullivan Co., in New Hampshire, with $30,000; Mrs. A. W. Proetz, vice-president of the Gardner Advertising Co., in St. Louis, whose salary is $28,510 annually. A most interesting commercial art firm in Chicago is made up of three women, Helen Hing Mitchell, Isabel Carothers and Louise Starkey Mead, each of whom is paid $27,400 a year.

The roster of successful business women throughout the country is filled with the names of those whose salaries run into five figures—a list which, of course, completely excludes the names of the glamourous women who draw fabulous salaries from the screen and stage.

Miss Cathrine Curtis, national director, of Women Investors in America, Inc., whose finger is constantly on the pulse of feminine trends in finance and industry says:

"While the success of women in business is, of course, gratifying, I believe that their economic position today is also largely due to their strong desire for financial security plus the ability and willingness to save."

And as an indication of how our eager feminists are investing their dollars, Miss Curtis gives some interesting statistics which serve to emphasize Miss 1937's economic status.

Results of a recent survey disclose that women possess 65 per cent of the nation's saving accounts; 40 per cent of its real estate; 50 per cent of all outstanding corporate common stock and 54 per cent of outstanding preferred stock. Their preferences in investment are railroad and utility stocks, of which they own 48 per cent and 44 per cent respectively. Women through their stock ownership hold a big interest in such powerful corporations as American Telephone and Telegraph; Westinghouse Air Brake; United States Steel; Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railroad and the National Biscuit Co.

The great strides which women have made in mastering the complexities of finance and industry are further borne out by the fact that many women who have inherited vast estates today are in a position to direct their operation—instead of leaving actual management in male hands.

Noteworthy examples are Mrs. Jessie Woolworth Donahue and Mrs. John T. Dorrance. Mrs. Donahue, mother of those irrepressible Park avenue playboys, "Jimmy" and "Woolie" Donahue, derived her fortune from the vast Woolworth interests. Holding nearly 600,000 shares of the company's stock, the likable Mrs. Donahue keeps in constant touch with the affairs of the firm and her opinions in the company management are highly regarded by its male directors.

Mrs. Dorrance, who is the widow of the late Dr. John T. Dorrance, who amassed a fortune of $120,000,000 in canned soups, was left one-fourth of her husband's estate. Her husband's confidence in the former Ethel Mallinckrodt, was evidenced by the fact that he made her one of the executors in his will and today she also serves as a director, in her husband's place, on the board of the Campbell Soup Co. She is an excellent business woman, and plays a lively part in the administration of the firm's affairs. She makes regular visits to its plant, and in addition manages her own philanthropies with expert efficiency.

Other wealthy women who play active parts in the management of their own estates are Helen Clay Frick, daughter of the late Pittsburgh coke king; Mrs. Dodge Sloane, automobile heiress, whose management of her $1,000,000 racing stable and general executive ability bring salvos of applause from her male associates, and Mrs. Joseph E. Davies, daughter and heiress of the late Charles William Post, who built up a tremendous fortune in breakfast foods. Mrs. Davies who, before her recent marriage was the wife of Edward F. Hutton, is the chairman of the board of General Foods and in addition to owning 10 per cent of the corporation's stock is fully conversant with its management.

There is another group of women who play a vital part in the nation's economic structure—the women who have neither inherited money nor acquired it through a company payroll, but who, alone and unaided, have built up great businesses of their own. The saga of Alice Foote MacDougall is too well known to bear repetition. But there are many like her. Mrs. Ora H. Snyder, of Chicago, is an example.

Mrs. Snyder started in business 24 years ago—with a capital of 5 cents. Her husband had become ill and unable to support his family, so Mrs. Snyder decided to turn a childhood pastime of candy-making into profit. With a lone nickel she purchased a pound of sugar and made her first batch for sale. A neighborhood merchant sold it and promised to help her market future batches. It was the beginning of an enterprise which today centers around several shops which she owns and operates and for which she recently turned down an offer of over $1,000,000.

Mrs. Florence Rochester of Oklahoma is another self-made business woman. Admiration of a few handkerchiefs she made for church and charity bazaars inspired her to enlarge her field. Today Mrs. Rochester is known as the "Handkerchief Queen of America."

The former Nell Donnelly of Kansas City, now the wife of ex-Senator James A. Reed, in less affluent times started dressmaking in a little one-room establishment. Today the Donnelly Garment Co., which Mrs. Reed still operates, numbers nearly 1500 employes and has brought its enterprising founder millions of dollars.

In Uncle Sam's list of high-salaried women are many from the professional ranks — women who started from the bottom and today are recognized as experts in their field.

FANNY HOLTZMANN, one of the most famous women lawyers in the country—if not in the world—started from the most humble circumstances. Not yet 35 years old, she numbers among her clients today such illustrious personages as Noel Coward, Gertrude Lawrence, Lord Auckland and Fred Astaire. She has offices in New York, London and Paris and her average fees for handling cases run anywhere from $10,000 to $25,000.

One of the highest paid women in the executive end of radio broadcasting is Bertha Brainard—a little girl who had an idea and made good. Bertha, who found radio programs back in 1922 singularly dull, barged into Station WJZ one day to express her opinions. Asked by studio officials what she thought could be done about it, she suggested regular features such as those run by newspapers. A dramatic column for instance. They let her try out the idea—her first effort netting her $50. Today her salary as program director of all the NBC networks runs into five figures.

The list is interminable. There are successful women Judges, such as Florence E. Allen of Columbus, O., first woman ever to sit on a Federal bench; civil engineers, like beautiful Olive Dennis, who pores over blueprints in the offices of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad; banking executives like Emma E. Claus, secretary-treasurer of the Bankers' Trust Co., in Gary, Ind.; doctors, like Dr. Florence R. Sabin, who is on the staff of the Rockefeller Institute of Medical Research.

The record of achievement of women in industry is a remarkable one. There is no longer a "typically feminine field" in the business world. Where once women were limited to inferior office positions or destined to teach school to the end of their days—without any hope of financial reward or recognition, today all doors are open.

What Many Youngsters Are Thinking

The Changes They Would Make in Modern Life

By Elsie Robinson

RECENTLY this writer asked young Americans to tell what they would do if they were dictators. What laws would they pass concerning marriage, education, working women, charity, general government.

Over 20,000 answers were received—answers which revealed such amazing attitudes on the part of youth that they deserve consideration by every serious citizen.

For example, as regards marriage—do you still indorse the blind ignorance which "nice people" thought essential in lovers in Grandpa's day? Then listen to this:

Without a single exception, every one of these 20,000 young people demanded practical preparation for marriage . . . pre-marital instruction in all vital, physical facts . . . physical examination for the young woman as well as the young man, and a doctor's certificate of fitness before a license could be granted!

The young people making these demands ranged from agnostics to the most orthodox church goers. Yet in every case the demand was the same. Some specified that the physical instruction and examinations be given under the auspices of the church. Others said the state or school should assume this service.

But none felt that marriage was "sacred" or fit for man's consent or God's blessing—unless the applicants had conformed to these basic requirements.

ALSO, HERE IS a remarkable fact. Without exception, these young people felt that the average parent is unprepared to give adequate physical instruction concerning marriage. A few had professional parents whom they considered fit—but even these thought such instruction should be given by authorized experts.

Another surprise! Suggestions had been made that youth be given Federal aid for a year after graduating from high school or college in order to enable it to "find its place in life—determine what work it would or could follow." Was this suggestion welcome?

It was not!

A painstaking check showed that most of the young people were vehemently opposed to any such plan!

They readily conceded that youth was on a bad industrial spot . . . that it should be given wider and more intelligent help in finding work. But it furiously resented the idea that it needed Uncle Sam's aid in "finding itself."

—o-o—

"SHOULD WOMEN work after marriage?" Another trick question. Here was a generation born since women entered industry—reared in a world where feminine jobs are an accepted fact. Out of the 20,000 writers, many were young women workers, married or unmarried. Surely they would vote for the married woman worker.

But they didn't!

Only a scattered few clamored for female jobs. Ninety per cent were solidly against them, "except in cases of great domestic need, or where the husband is not working, or where the wife has some great, outstanding talent."

Last surprise. College courses with their campus fun—here at least we'd get unanimous agreement. But we were wrong again!

By a 97 per cent vote, youth turned down the present college curriculum . . . branded the usual college course as wasted? . . . Demanded "practical courses which will prepare us for real jobs as soon as we graduate"—or none at all!

Have you thought that Young America was a brainless brat — speed crazy and extravagant—incapable of serious thought? Good time, maybe, to revise that opinion.

MY OPINION

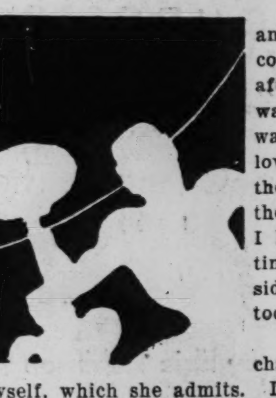
Martha Carr

Dear Mrs. Carr:

AFTER three attempts, I am actually getting a letter off to you. This being one of my terrifying moments, I want to unload my troubles in the proper place. My wife and I have been separated 11 months—and what miserable months!



We have a lovely daughter, youth and health; everything to enable and encourage us to strive forward. And yet, after repeated attempts (on my part) toward reconciliation, I run into a blank wall. My wife is a fine person, whom I love and respect; and yet I cannot fathom the reason why she will not come out into the open. She is the illusive type. But I have found her fair and square at all times. Surely, she should understand my side and realize that I am alive and "tick" too.

I want her to know that I have changed many disagreeable points about myself, which she admits. I do not earn too much, yet enough to fight with. She tells me to earn more, but makes no promises. I am sure if she knew what terrible moments I go through with and at what a price, she would be honest and tell me whether or not she still loves me, and we can make another try. The pressure is too intense for me to go on much longer. There isn't a thing under the sun that I will not try to do to make her happy. I wish she knew this; perhaps she does and doesn't care. The uncertainty is too much. I will appreciate a word from you, Mrs. Carr.

BEWILDERED.

I think your plea needs nothing added to it; especially from one who is wholly in the dark as to the cause of this estrangement and unhappiness. I trust your wife will see this plea and that it may mean your reunion and the happiness of both.

My dear Mrs. Carr:

● WITH REFERENCE to the article sent in by "Old Fashioned," I just wish to say to you, "Old Fashioned," that although I am a young man, I am in sympathy with your views and principles. May I urge you to continue to refuse to enter into the so-called "faster" types of entertainment, and thus remain true to your principles and convictions, even though it may mean the sacrifice of a few dates. Your teaching Sunday School is a thing to be commended and not ridiculed nor looked down upon. Undoubtedly you realize that by being a teacher you have accepted a great responsibility, that of helping to mould the characters of our future young men and women, and in so doing, you must set an example for good to them. And remember, there are a number of young men and young women who are in accordance with your ideas. P. W.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

THIS IS IN REPLY to "Old Fashioned." I want to say to her: I do not fully agree with the attitude you have taken. I believe young men and women should go out and have a good time while they are young. It is all right to be fairly conventional; but, after all, what does it get you? I believe in church and I attend once in a while. But I see nothing wrong in a girl and a young man smoking a cigarette or going to a dance. Also, what is wrong with taking a drink once in a while if you do not use it excessively? W. L.

Dear Martha Carr:

● WE HAVE a console victrola that we would gladly give to anyone who would call for it or pay the transportation charges. Any time on a Saturday would be the best time to call for it. My name, address and telephone number I am leaving with you.

MRS. L. D.

Thank you for the offer. We will send you any requests received. But these requests must be accompanied by good, dependable references and there must be real need for the instrument, either by an individual or some helpful organization.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

ABOUT A YEAR AGO I met a very nice young man and whom I have learned to love, but the greatest problem is that he is very jealous. I used to go out once in a while with other boys, but he found it out and it made him angry. Finally, I promised him I would go steady with him. He talks of marriage; but do you think, Mrs. Carr, that he would be jealous after we are married? JEANNE.

Some think that where there is no jealousy there is no love. The poets and romanticists would have us believe that this is an appealing quality. They call it by all sorts of names, such as "the worm in the bud"; but we know that, considered practically, it is not a pretty trait and oft-times makes for a very unhappy marriage. However, this young man's affliction (as we will call it) might grow less after marriage, with the thought of possession.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

● MORE THAN EIGHT YEARS AGO I ran away and married a man who turned out to be a drunkard. After living with him almost seven years I got a divorce and came home with my babies.

I now have met a man whom I love sincerely and he is the sweetest person I have ever known. The trouble is, he is Catholic, while I am Protestant. He told me that his mother's greatest wish is that when he marries he can have a large church wedding.

I am willing to change to his faith, for I love him more than anything in the world. Would my being a divorcee hinder my happiness and his mother's wish for a large wedding?

Could I wear cream satin and a short veil, or is it proper? I haven't met his family and, as yet, he has not told them that I am a divorced woman. I do hope you will put my mind at ease over these questions. Thanking you in advance, MRS. C. P.

I suggest that, before you make any wedding plans, you insist upon meeting the man's family and also that he tell them you are not a Catholic, but are willing to become one. The man owes this to you.

I do not think you will find a priest who will marry a divorced woman. It is against the tenets of the church and only in the rarest cases has a dispensation been granted.

Although it is against taste and custom for a woman married formerly to have a large wedding, you might do so in the event that religious differences are overcome. But you could not wear a veil of any kind, as this is the prerogative of the maiden. A satin with slight tint of cameo, pale blue or yellow would be better than white or cream.

THE WORLD AS WOMEN SEE IT

The Modern Hairdress as Beauty Aid

Present Coiffures Are More Becoming Than Those of Other Seasons.

By Helen Jameson

IF you don't believe that women are getting better looking every day and that clever hairdressers and dressmakers can turn almost any ugly duckling into a swan, gaze upon old portraits of Gloria Swanson, Greta Garbo, Joan Crawford. They tell the story of what beauticians and dress designers can do.

What's grander still is that a woman can step out of the ranks of the dowdy into the army of the fashionably dressed by merely using the head. She can do it if she has an open mind, uses her eyes, does a bit of research work concerning her appearance and how it can be improved. If she has fixed ideas she is done for. There can be no advancement.

There never has been a time within the memory of the oldest grannie when coiffures were so youthifying, so chic, as at present. Yet there are women who still get frizzes in their locks by means of the round curl, who tuck their tresses into ugly buns. It dates them. They look frumpy. And they all put up the same explanation. They want what is "becoming, not what is fashionable." Old styles are not becoming. When a style is outmoded, it is dowdy and disfiguring.

YOUNG PEOPLE will try any kind of a hairdress. They know it is no killing matter. If they don't like it they chuck it, try something else. Many a middle-aged woman is afraid to change any detail of her appearance. She doesn't go in for sartorial adventures. That's too bad. Because she may find that a change in coiffure or a getting away from the kind of hats she prefers, may knock off eight or 10 birthdays.

Hairdressers complain about the stubbornness of some of the older customers. Always the hair must be done in the same old way. They must have the same shade of complexion powder. Fingernails must follow the old contour. No fun in that. They go to the beauty shop to be improved, fight against every suggestion. If they look frumpy it is their own fault. Help is offered but they don't want it, or they are afraid to accept it.

THE OPEN MIND discerns the immediate needs, the things that must be done first. Many a woman is spending money for facials when a new corset would do her more good. Lots of women have four permanents a year when they might better limit them to two, and spend the money saved for gymnasium tuition to help them acquire decent posture.

Much money spent on hair dyeing is a total loss. The face is wrinkled, the body bent; silvered locks would ease the evidences of time. Hair dyeing is all right for some women. Others are made to look hard and brittle after contact with the coloring agent.

Small-Waisted Line In New Fur Coats

THE furriers are demonstrating their skill at following the wasp-waisted silhouette in the designing of winter coats. By using tiny skins and working them together dexterously, they are acquiring the wide-shouldered, small-waisted line which is so much in vogue at present.

Illustrative of their art is an elegant evening wrap of mink which has a skin worked vertically to achieve almost a darted effect through the waistline. A gently moulded hipline extends with gradual width until the coat is quite full at the hem. A rather small, upstanding collar and sleeves with exaggerated fullness at the shoulders serve to accentuate the slenderness of the waist.

Violent Color Schemes

Color schemes that are most aptly described as "violent" are exceedingly popular now. Most conspicuous is the alliance of purple and green which looks less startling for evening than it does during the daytime but is being used also for sports attire. Purple and red form another combination especially attractive when developed of wool. Purple dress, for example, is worn with red Ascot, red hat and matching shoes. Bright blue and violet offer a third combination that is novel and sufficiently bright to please the most daring color enthusiast.

Light-Weight Scarfs

Among the newest scarfs to arrive in St. Louis are striking squares of cobwebby wool that have shadowy designs woven in paisley patterns. These squares are so light-weight that they may be tucked into a pocket or bag and produced in a hurry when a head covering is needed to hold stray locks in place.

"NOTHING NEW Under THE SUN"

A Trite Statement, but Proved Once More in "So You Think It's New."

By Francis Oliver

AN AGE of marvels, isn't this? Mankind has progressed so far ahead of anything known before, has so many things to make life worth living. And modern ideas and methods—how amazed the ancients would be if they could visit the world today.

Or would they?

If one had the time and patience to check back through history a different opinion might be formed. One might even come to the conclusion that some of those ancients would feel that we are a bit behind the times. For at some time or another in the affairs of men they have known just about everything we know now, as Wilfred J. Funk points out in "So You Think It's New," published by Funk & Wagnalls. In short, to quote Funk, "It's all happened before." Even to the lamentation of "the good old days" when children were reared so much better. None other than the great historian Tacitus pulled that one.

Funk has gone to the trouble of getting the facts. He had the background for doing it, and, too, he had access to reliable sources, including old manuscripts and museum pieces by way of direct rather than circumstantial evidence.

Recently, for instance, there was a grand to-do about the fancy for brightly hued fingernails—and toenails—among women. Well, according to Funk, as far back as 3000 B. C. it was being done—and probably causing as many family arguments as in the modern day. Other cosmetics were as popular as now, and as irritating to reformers. Egypt 1800 years ago considered a law to banish make-up, and in the second century after Christ, Clement of Alexandrie tried to put across a law to keep women from using cosmetics to trick men into marriage.

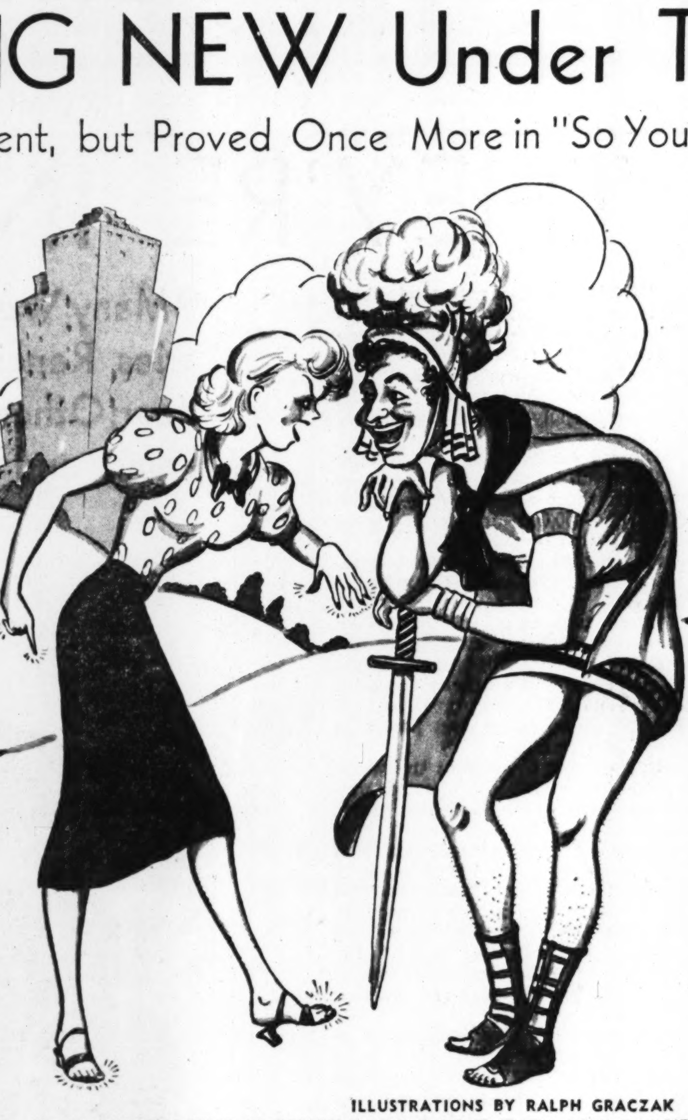
Cleopatra has come down through the centuries famed for her allure for men. She had it all right, but she bought it, like the girl of today, from beauty shops. She plucked her eyebrows, and darkened and lengthened them with antimony paste. Lashes and lids were stained to accentuate her eyes; perfumed paste of oxide, still the base for rouge, was on her cheeks. Lipsticks reddened her lips. All of those aids were as well-known then as now.

Toilet accessories, too, may seem like purely modern improvements, but they are chiefly new to the time. They have appeared and disappeared, as civilization grew and then decayed. Curling irons were used in Athens of old; scissors that have been scarely changed by the centuries were used in Nero's time for the nails; combs and brushes and hand-mirrors were on the toilet table when the Medicis ruled Florence, as were hairnets. Cold-cream was invented by a Greco-Roman physician 1700 years ago.

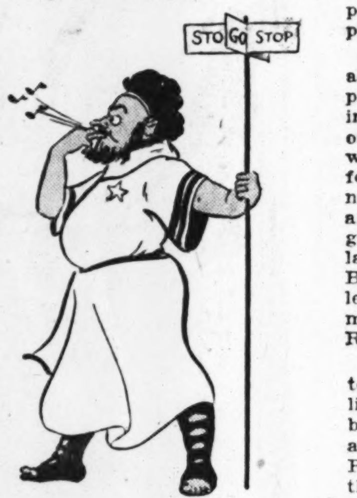


ILLUSTRATIONS BY RALPH GRACZAK

". . . HOW AMAZED THE ANCIENTS WOULD BE IF THEY COULD VISIT THE WORLD TODAY. OR WOULD THEY?"

The vogue of three or four years ago for platinum blonde hair may have been started at the time by the late Jean Harlow, but during the time of Queen Elizabeth in England there was a blonde fad far surpassing any the present-day public has known. Bleached hair was one method of attaining lighter locks, but many wore blonde wigs.

Working girls of today have their synthetic jewelry to help them get "that expensive look" for their ensembles, but imitation pearls were on the market back in 1200 B. C. Imitating the precious and semi-precious stones was an important part of the glass industry in ancient Babylon, and later. Funk quotes Pliny the Elder, who lived in the later days of Rome, as complaining that "every peasant's wife on the country beyond the Po wears amber trinkets, and every servant girl has a silver mirror."



YES, THE OLD-TIMERS HAD THEIR TRAFFIC PROBLEMS.

One of the causes for the complaint was the prevalence of traveling salesmen, even in that long distant past. For Rome, with its highly developed system of highways was also highly developed commercially; in fact, its merchants were about as important a factor in keeping the empire together as its legions. There were main factories at the sources of new materials, and branches in every important city. We have very little on them in that way today; probably even some of the stories now told in the smoker were told then over the wine glass.

Men and women both were able to get ready-made garments, which were shipped to every part of the known world. Traveling buyers went to Egypt for supplies of glass, Jerusalem for figs, Syria for preserved plums, Jericho for dates, and to Ascalon for onions. Housewives could get as varied a supply of tidbits for the table as now, and if a few of the New World things like tomatoes and cob corn and potatoes were missing, there were plenty of others to replace them.

Household articles were obtainable even to the equivalent of the present-day five-and-ten. Pottery, important in the kitchen, was one of the biggest wholesale businesses, with branches of the Naples foundries all the way to Scandanavia and Finland. Artistic vases and household utensils of clay and glass were produced on such a large scale anyone could buy them. Beautiful Aretine ware, now priceless museum pieces, were the commonest and cheapest tableware in Roman days.

As the afternoon bridge club of today gets tangled over leads while listening to an account of a member's recent operation, women of ancient Egypt, Babylon, Greece and Rome had the same trouble over their backgammon. Each could have a doctor who was a specialist, also, for, as Funk quotes the historian Herodotus with regard to Egypt:

"The practice of medicine is so divided among them that each physician is a healer of one disease and no more. All the country is full of physicians, some of the eye, some of the teeth, some of what pertains to the belly, and some of the hidden diseases."

So it goes through the whole gamut of things on which we think we have a monopoly. Back through history, whether of Egypt, Greece, Rome or the European countries of a few hundred years ago, can be found records of inflations; suffrage movements; prohibition and speak-easies; bathtubs; nerve disaffections; traffic problems; advice on taking care of babies; political parties, grafters, ballot buying and ward heelers; football, crap shooting and checkers; steam-heated houses; apartment houses "with all conveniences"; glass-covered framed pictures, and labor codes. And while we may have radios and automobiles, our ancestors had a few things we have still to find out about.

Those Ancient Days and Ways

IF anyone thinks the world today has such a tremendous edge on the ancients, here are a few things to consider:

By the time of Tiberius, really exquisite glass was produced in such quantities that the contemporary housewife could get a cup and saucer for the present equivalent of about one cent.

—o-o—

Furnaces roared night and day in the centers of the iron industry, turning out kitchen knives, agricultural instruments, horseshoes and the like. Carpets, furniture, overcoats and shoes were fabricated on much the same scale.

—o-o—

Specialization among workers was causing the same lament it is causing today; in one factory, for instance, one man was assigned to do nothing but put eyes in statues.

—o-o—

On the Via Lata, or literally Broadway of Rome, were drugstores with remedies for coughs and colds "all touted with nice bought and paid for testimonials printed on wrappers"; jars of cosmetics, razors de luxe, false teeth and depilatories.

—o-o—

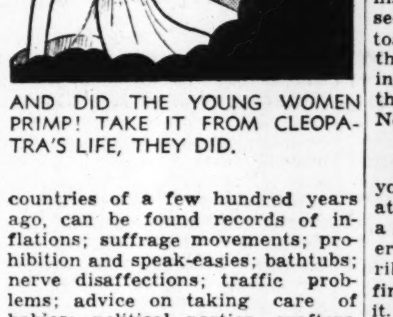
There was a nudist colony in Bohemia 500 years ago, and nudism as a cult is so old its origin is lost in the dimness of the past.

—o-o—

In the dim past of India, artificial ice was made by a precess of radiation and evaporation, from water in shallow vessels of porous clay. The Emperor Nero set the fashion of cooling champagne in a bucket.

—o-o—

Ancient Grecian and Hebrew girls bobbed their hair long before Irene Castle tried it. There were also mud packs, permanent waves, henna washes, high heels and milk baths.



AND DID THE YOUNG WOMEN PRIMP! TAKE IT FROM CLEOPATRA'S LIFE, THEY DID.

Veil May Add Color to Your Autumn Outfit

IF your costume hasn't sufficient color to meet the season's glamorous requirements, perhaps it needs a vivid veil. Hats with veils that are rather bright of tone are being worn extensively in the Eastern cities, according to the latest reports.

A Royal blue veil not only adds a touch of gaiety to a black hat and costume but it may prove flattering to a complexion. The brunette whose skin is very clear usually finds this shade becoming. Cyclamen is another shade that is liked for veils and there is a darker dahlia tone also to be considered. These latter two are worn with purple, wine and bright navy hats.

Bright Accessories

The Tyrolean theme in sports wear continues in the fashion limelight with bright accessories to appeal to those who dress with a youthful flair. Multi-colored hearts made of felt are among the most interesting costume accents that have the Tyrolean emphasis. These are placed side by side on a leather band and used primarily for belts although some girls like the idea for hat bands, hemline borders and other dress trimmings.

Novel Trimming

Encrustations of wool or suede on colored satin introduce a novel theme to dressy afternoon costumes. The popular tones of bright blue, plum and deep green are selected to display this new idea in trimming. Scroll effects are used repeatedly in the application of the fabrics and leathers, which repeat the shade of the dress, but bring out elaborate contrasts because of their different texture.

Bunkers on the Love Course -:- -:- By Helen Rowland

OUR literary landscape seems to be breaking out in a veritable rash of "How To" books and magazine articles. "How to Win a Husband," one of the latest, carries "coals to Newcastle" in a really big way, because the average, normal girl is naturally endowed with the gift of getting her man. What she would like to know is how not to lose him on the way to the altar.

So, here are a few "don't" for the debutante who, having won her man, wants to hold on to him until the invitations are mailed and the orange blossoms arrive:

—o-o—

Don't emote over him. One of the hardest things that a man has to bear with is a woman's inclinations to deluge him with her emotions. The woman a man loves best and longest is the woman who loves him just enough! Just enough to make him happy—and not enough to make him tired.

—o-o—

Don't shock his illusions. Every man loves a "lady." He loves, not a woman, but an ideal creature made in her image, and he will forgive a woman for almost anything except for shattering that image. He may "fall" for a high-powered petting, swearing, hoopla girl—but he catches his balance and detours before reaching the altar.

—o-o—

Don't try to keep tabs on him.

DON'T

Don't smother him with the idea that you're "mothering" him. Don't elect yourself his conscience, curfew, jailer and questionnaire. More love has been stifled to death with solicitude and cross-examinations, and strangled to death with coaxing and coddling, than was ever frozen to death with neglect.

—o-o—

Don't pursue him. Love is like a minuet, in which, someone takes a step forward, the other takes a step backward. A flock of unsolicited telephone calls have often been the fire-extinguisher which put out the freshly lighted flame of a man's love.

—o-o—

Don't talk him to death. The woman who can babble eloquently in seven languages doesn't stand a Chinaman's chance beside the woman who can listen eloquently in ONE language. Most men fall in love through their eyes—and out of it through their ears! A woman's illusions may be starved to death—but a man's are nearly always talked to death.

—o-o—

Don't be jealous. Jealousy and suspicion are the prize lemons in the Garden of Love; and will do more to sour love than the breaking of the Ten Commandments.

—o-o—

Don't ask him WHY he loves you, IF he loves you, how MUCH he loves you, or how LONG he will love you. By the time he has found the answer he may have lost the reason. The only way to take love, medicine or politics is to swallow them with your eyes shut—and no questions.

—o-o—

And one more "don't"—don't forget that the crowning achievement of a girl's life is no longer getting her man—it's holding on to him, after she's got him.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

By Dorothy Coleman

IF EVERYBODY will promise not to drag out that bewhiskered story about the Governor of Texas named Hogg, who christened his daughters something dreadful — a story for which, incidentally, we find no foundation—we'll tell one of our own. A young couple, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Spencer Worth, who live out on Wellington Way, are the parents of twins, a boy and a girl. They are calling them "Nickle" and "Penny" Worth. Kind of cute? The little boy is really Nicholas Richard, and the little girl, Penny Ann. "Richard" and "Ann" both have some sort of family justification. Since the youngsters celebrated their first-month birthday only this week, it is still too early to tell whether or not they will answer to their monikers.

SPEAKING OF NAMES, no one can beat the hamburger joints at fancy terminology. We dropped into one the other night, and ordered up the specialty of the house. The counter man rebuked us soundly, "You mean round steak ground three times?" Then forgetting himself for the moment, he lapsed into more familiar lingo, "with or without?" Well, all we can say is that the hamburger has come a long way since the burghers of old Hamburg first devised a way of using up left-overs.

"Round steak ground three times" —gosh! Variations on the 'burger theme are now unlimited—cheeseburgers, nutburgers, bean burgers, corn burgers, bacon burgers. Chicken is the latest of the respectable viands to go. It can now be had over many a counter or at the curb, in the form of a "chickburger."

—o-o—

GRANTING THAT weddings are the time for general sentimentality, we have heard about an especially tender touch at a recent affair. The bridegroom, a young Englishman, had not a single member of his family on this side of the Atlantic, let alone at the marriage ceremony. Well in advance he wrote them the exact hour of the nuptials—explaining what o'clock that would be on the island—and enclosed a bill with which they were to purchase a bottle of champagne. He wanted to feel it was his wedding present to them, you see. They uncorked and drank a toast to the bride and bridegroom at the very moment the pair were taking their final vows. Hands across the sea and all that sort of thing. No affectation, either.

BY ONE MEANS or another, the young things seem determined to attract attention to themselves. At a ringside table in a hotel the other evening sat a girl with a red ribbon tied around her left forefinger. She declined to account for it. Just a whim, just a bit of fancy, which served its purpose. Nor was any explanation forthcoming when another one-time debutante at the same table whipped out her dark glasses and clapped them on the bridge of her patrician nose, as the lights came up for the floor show. Those lights are never very bright, you know, out of kindness to performers and guests. Just another bit of fancy, we had to suppose, by one who had not heard of the distressing experience of Johnny Weissmuller and friends in a New York night club last winter.

AS IS OUR WONT, we were consulting about domestic affairs the other afternoon with a friend, a most conscientious housekeeper of long experience. The subject happened to be the proper storage of winter clothes in summer and summer clothes in winter. She digressed a moment to tell us about her hired man, Tom. Tom had been helping her pack things away, lift cedar bags, and do other heavy jobs on the third floor. They worked along in silence for some time, neither caring to distract the other. At length she sighed, "You know, Tom, if I should die you would know more about where things are in this house than any member of the family."

He straightened up like a jack-in-the-box and replied grandly, "I wants to change the subject of this conversation right away." Out of deference to his overwrought emotions, she dropped it right there.

WE HAVE REMARKED before that we are having constantly to adjust our feelings about public servants. At the moment we think they are all perfect darlings, for this unusual bit of volunteer service. An ageing gentleman of our acquaintance, inclined to absent-mindedness, was late getting out an important letter not so long ago. Anxious that it catch the first possible collection, he set out on foot for the Eighth Street Post-fice, holding the letter high before him.

A mail collector, driving his rounds, passed our friend, took in the situation at a glance, and pulled over the curb. "Pardon me, sir," said he, "but would you like me to take your letter to the postoffice?"

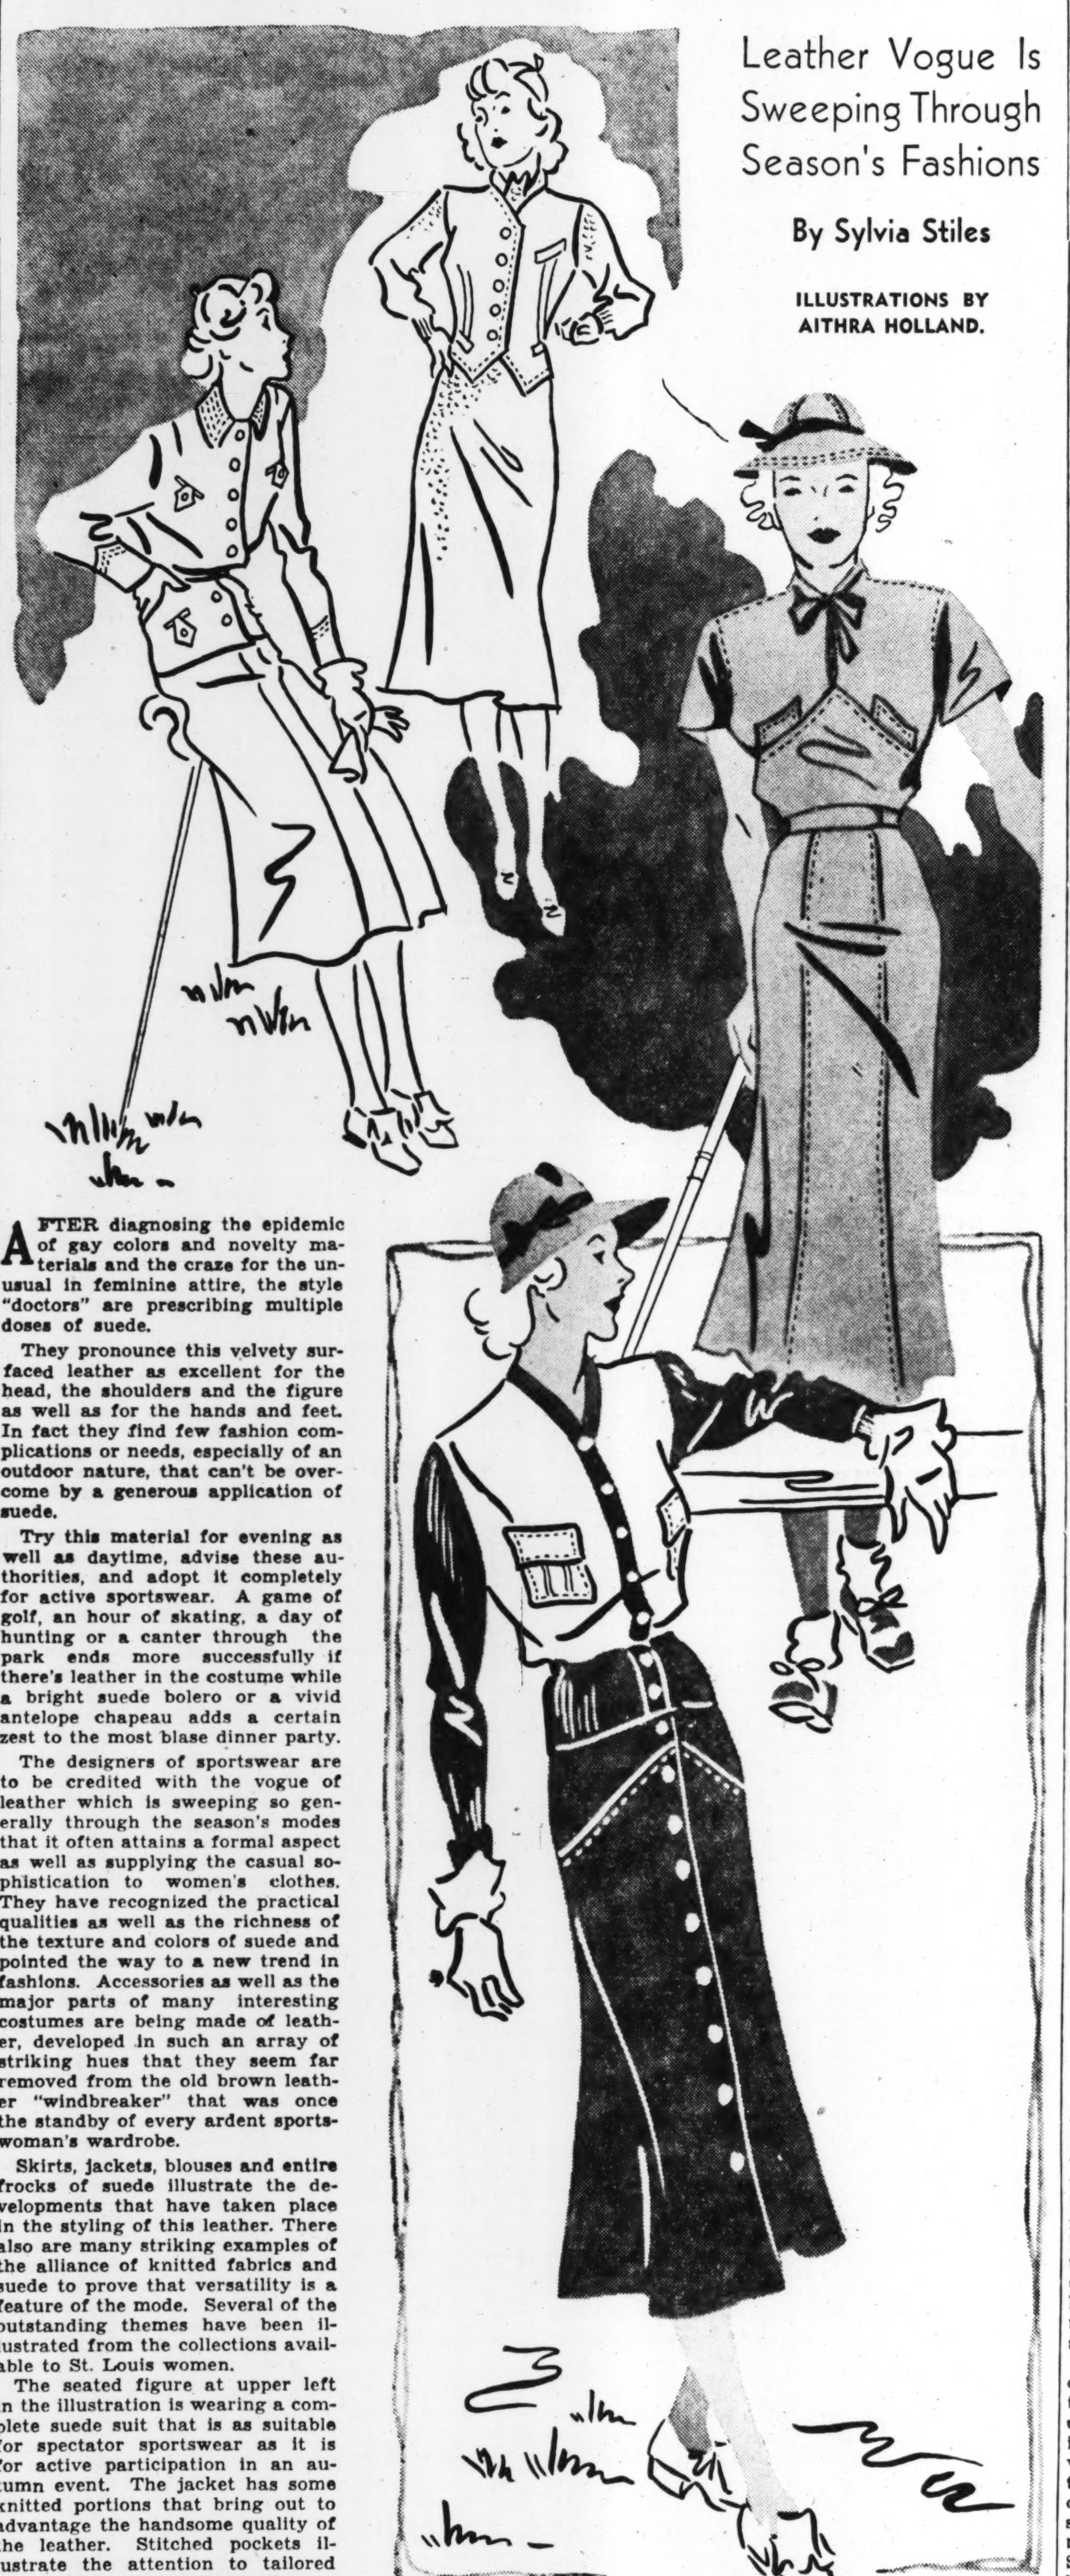
SUEDE IN LIMELIGHT

Leather Vogue Is Sweeping Through Season's Fashions

By Sylvia Stiles

ILLUSTRATIONS BY AITHRA HOLLAND.



AFTER diagnosing the epidemic of gay colors and novelty materials and the craze for the unusual in feminine attire, the style "doctors" are prescribing multiple doses of suede.

They pronounce this velvety surfaced leather as excellent for the head, the shoulders and the figure as well as for the hands and feet. In fact they find few fashion complications or needs, especially of an outdoor nature, that can't be overcome by a generous application of suede.

Try this material for evening as well as daytime, advise these authorities, and adopt it completely for active sportswear. A game of golf, an hour of skating, a day of hunting or a canter through the park ends more successfully if there's leather in the costume while a bright suede bolero or a vivid antelope chapeau adds a certain zest to the most blase dinner party.

The designers of sportswear are to be credited with the vogue of leather which is sweeping so generally through the season's modes that it often attains a formal aspect as well as supplying the casual sophistication to women's clothes. They have recognized the practical qualities as well as the richness of the texture and colors of suede and pointed the way to a new trend in fashions. Accessories as well as the major parts of many interesting costumes are being made of leather, developed in such an array of striking hues that they seem far removed from the old brown leather "windbreaker" that was once the standby of every ardent sportswoman's wardrobe.

Skirts, jackets, blouses and entire frocks of suede illustrate the developments that have taken place in the styling of this leather. There also are many striking examples of the alliance of knitted fabrics and suede to prove that versatility is a feature of the mode. Several of the outstanding themes have been illustrated from the collections available to St. Louis women.

The seated figure at upper left in the illustration is wearing a complete suede suit that is as suitable for spectator sportswear as it is for active participation in an autumn event. The jacket has some knitted portions that bring out to advantage the handsome quality of the leather. Stitched pockets illustrate the attention to tailored details. The skirt buttons the entire length of the front and has a slightly gored treatment to provide hemline fullness. A deep yoke is a striking feature. Natural chamois combined with brown knitted wool, bright green and blue are among the colors available in this costume. A little cap of matching suede is perched jauntily on the head although the wearer might have varied her leather theme to substitute a cap of natural pigskin.

A two-piece tailored dress that is made entirely of suede is shown below and to the right of this figure. This is a soft shade of cobalt blue although other shades may be chosen. The tuck-in blouse is slit at the front of the neckline and has a collar that ties with a little tailored bow. Pockets are inserted in the shallow, pointed yoke across the front. The short sleeves are straight and tailored. The skirt which matches the blouse is gored. A hat of suede is designed along classical lines with a medium brim that may be worn turned up or down.

The fourth figure wears a bright green suit that has many unusual details. Outstanding is the stitched collar of matching green calfskin that fits very trimly. Covered buttons fasten the front of the jacket and the pocket flaps. The skirt which has slightly flaring lines gains hemline width by means of a very narrow front panel that has stitched hemming. It also is distinguished by a yoke which provides a well fitting hipline. The suede hat worn with this suit has a manipulated crown with considerable height and medium brim.

Footwear, gloves, belts and costume jewelry that stress the vogue of suede leather are suitable additions to these new outfits.

Red Color Accent

Wear a vivid red carnation on your black wool frock and match it with a pair of red gloves, if you want to introduce a color accent that meets with the approval of the leading Paris designers. All of them are recommending certain vividness with black. A cluster of dark red acorns with bag or gloves the same hue, bracelet and large clip of turquoise blue enameled metal or flower and gloves of natural chamois suede are other accessory ensembles to consider.

What Women Are Wearing From Abroad

By Josephine Hughes

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.

AFTER asking every smart woman descending the gangplank of the Normandie at the unattractive hour of 7 the other morning which Paris couturier designed the particular outfit she was wearing, we decided that these women certainly play the fashion field.

Mrs. Vincent Astor readily admitted that her black wool ensemble was a Mainbocher creation. Smart, too, with a hip length, boxy swagger buttoning down the front in double file. She wore a black felt hat, turned off the face, and carried a luxurious silver fox. Mrs. Astor, who has had a delightful summer visiting seven or more European countries, returned just in time for the gala Iridium Room opening at the St. Regis.

Marcel Rochas was well represented by Mrs. George Pattullo, who looked stunning in a deep purple costume. The slim skirt, fashioned in a novelty rabbit's hair wool, was complemented with a jersey blouse in the same hue. Topping this was a hip length cape, matching the skirt in fabric and color, with wide revers of gaily checked lime green and yellow tweed. Her hat was a purple felt visor brim affair and she carried black alligator accessories.

Always garbed by her favorite Schiaparelli, Doris Castleross looked trim in a navy tweed coachman's coat detailed with huge gold buttons centered with chunks of glass. Around her neck she twisted one of "Schap's" amusing printed scarfs and chose a navy felt fedora flatteringly veiled.

The famed "Canard blue" of Patou was favored by Miss Elise Curtis in a slipper satin dress, intricately seamed and topped by a matching wool coat sleeved with moleskin. Miss Curtis was one of the "six smart girls" who descended the gangplank in Agnes' snap brim chin strap felt chapeau.

Another to wear this same hat was Miss Hilary Charles, of London, who chose it in a deep wine to match her smart broadcloth suit. This model, designed by La Rue of London, had a navy skirt, wine blouse and wine jacket with navy revers. Over her shoulders she casually threw a square shouldered neutria swagger.

Mrs. William Paley and Mrs. Deering Howe wore very trim tailleurs in gray. The former looked like a very small child with her tiny flat heel shoes, no hat and a black ribbon tied about her head with a bow on one side. She appeared later in the day at the Colony, still sans chapeau, but this we will wager: Come eventide she will appear in "deevine" headdresses, for she was most enthusiastic about the elaborate evening headgear shown in Paris.

Have You Tried To Mix Your New Outfits?

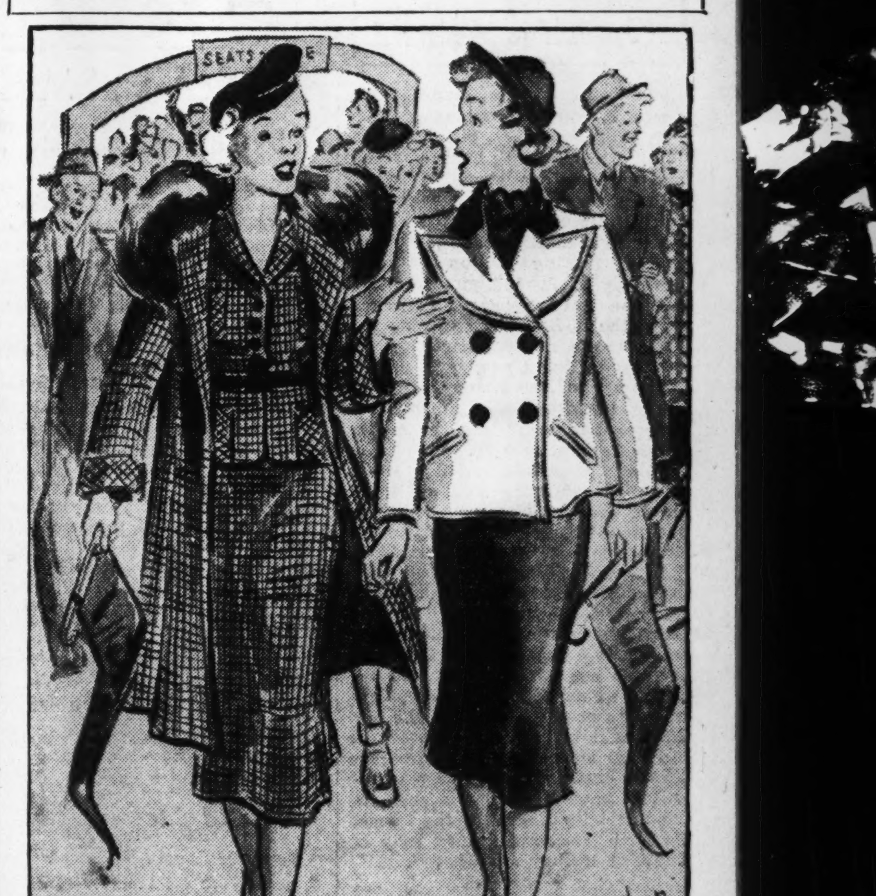
IT IS time for those who like to mix their own costumes to try their luck with the autumn's new fashion ingredients. Whether they choose a recipe for daytime or for evening is for them to decide because there are plenty of both to consider. The success of either depends largely upon a gift or a knack with clothes. Without it, most costumes prove to be a disappointment.

Jackets are as usual the basis of these mix-your-own costumes although blouses, sweaters and suits of many parts are called into service. Among sports types, novelty wool jackets of hip length offer the greatest value because they not only may be assembled with separate skirts and sweaters or blouses but may be worn over one-piece frocks. Striped nubby woolens are especially interesting this season and offer a variation from the usual checks and plaids. Often they have matching hats so that they seem more a part of a completed costume than merely an addition.

Suede jackets that have a dressmaker emphasis are employed with attractive results in assembled costumes. They look their best when very bright of tone in contrast to the dark hue of a skirt or dress. Some noteworthy examples on display include a mustard yellow jacket with a black dress, an American beauty coat with black skirt and pale blue sweater, and a lime yellow jacket with a brown skirt and sweater.

For evening and late afternoon wear, the preference thus far is for jackets of metallic fabrics which are allied with velvet skirts or are worn with sheer wool street length dresses. Upholstery brocade is another material being used extensively for these separate coats while moire, embroidered duvetyn and broadcloth and quilted taffeta are other good fabrics to consider.

STYLE-SMILES -:- -:- By Gretchen



"—OH, BUT I DIDN'T LIKE THE REFEREE EITHER . . . I WAS MERELY CHEERING THE BOOING!"

Showing dislike with enthusiasm may be a collegiate side-light—not as important a football subject, however, as clothes for the games. The above are well nigh perfect in a coed's eyes. A three-piece suit whose topcoat can be worn separately is just about the most desirable thing to have in one's college wardrobe, especially if last, but not least, we mention the raccoon collar. The royal blue "cabby" coat on the right proves that last spring's flare for "jiggers" met with no early death; rather it adjusts itself to a new season with a collar of brown millinery velvet (harmonizing nicely with a brown tweed skirt) and blusteringly big buttons of tortoise shell.

THE FULL-LENGTH WRAP IS STILL MOST POPULAR

CRISP autumn weather and the beginning of the social season combine to stimulate an interest in evening wraps and to bring out some important types that are characteristic of the luxurious element in fashions.

Regardless of how much is paid for a wrap, it has a certain air of assurance and flattery if it is representative of the new mode. It may be an inexpensive model of lapin-trimmed velvet or it may display swirls of silver fox from shoulders to hemline, but it covers an evening dress with distinction. The cut of the garment has much to do with this impression, although there never has been greater variety in the styles of formal wraps than there are at present.

The full-length wrap continues to be the accepted favorite, probably because it offers greater service. Regardless of the color or fabric of the dress, the coat or cape which extends to the floor gives the costume a completeness that is essential to this year's smart appearance. However, those who can afford several wraps often choose the shorter length because they are able to stress the individuality of each ensemble.

Fitted lines prevail, but skirt sections add a sweep at the hemline that is most satisfactory for bouffant frocks and graceful movement, and there is much diversity in the designing of blouse sections. The dolman style of wrap which has full sleeves and a bloused back is typical of the revivals seen in the most exclusive collections. The coat with a waist-length cape instead of sleeves also is interesting and novel.

SEVERAL straight-line coats which are extremely simple in their design are regarded as important this season. One of these, made of velvet in a tone of old ivory, adds complete sleeves of skunk. Another of vivid turquoise blue tweed has sleeves swirled with silver fox. A third, reminiscent of the old-fashioned "wrapper," has a quilted yoke extending almost to the waistline. Sleeves are fitted and the high neckline ties with fabric streamers. This coat is made of velvet, the lining being of one jewel tone and the outside of another.

Upholstery brocades continue their vogue for evening wraps and are being worn now by matrons as well as those of the debutante age. Incidentally the woman who has limited income and is clever with the needle will find that the brocade is not difficult to handle. One of the most attractive evening wraps worn in St. Louis recently was of old ivory brocade and made by the wearer. It was quite tailored of line except for the wide swing to the hemline. A little collar of kolinsky fur had been ripped from a daytime coat that had become outmoded.

Capes are regarded as even better style this season than they were last and also offer a suggestion to the woman who likes to make her own clothes. Velvet is the favored material and the stiff Lyons type of velvet usually proves more effective than the supple variety. When selected of a rich shade such as wine, plum or amythest, a cape is a successful accompaniment to a formal frock.

For those who can afford fur and feel especially dressed up when wrapped in furs, there are many different types of heavily fur-trimmed evening wraps as well as those made entirely of rich pelts. One of the most glamourous coats of dull velvet has serpentines of silver fox applied to the sweeping skirt section at close intervals so that the stripes of fabric between are the same width as the strips of fur. Complete sleeves of silver fox which are quite full at the top add more elaboration to this wrap.

Ostrich feathers are being used this season in the creation of some stunning wraps. The chunky coat of hip length covered entirely with ostrich is arresting, especially when developed in a striking color scheme. A coat which has ostrich sleeves is another evidence of the novelty used in the designing of evening fashions.

WE HAVE lately heard about an 8-year-old schoolboy, who, when younger, was considered a child prodigy, and who still is strangely wise for his age. He attends parochial school where the treatment he is getting from the sisters is a thorn in his side. "Why, Mother," he complained, "every time I come into the lunchroom, the sister says 'Make room for this little fellow, make room for this little fellow'—in the line, you know."

His mother tried to explain that the sister was only looking out for his interests. "I know that, Mother," he interrupted, "but, gee, wouldn't you think she could say, 'Let this guy through'?"

LET ME SUGGEST

by Josephine Walter

IF you have been reading this column (and I trust, dear reader, that you have), you are thoroughly familiar with such startling items as a Venetian blind whose slats are moved by the rays of the sun; a fountain that uses the same water over and over again; and even a feeding station designed especially to please humming birds. But you haven't heard, I'm sure, about the "I-Beam" streamline rail —and that's really something. It may sound like a new type of railroad track or the latest gadget for a bar, but it's really much more important than either of these—it's a new kind of curtain rod.

This new curtain rod is really a cause for shouting and rejoicing, for it does practically everything but make your curtains for you. Seriously, though, it will certainly be the answer to a lot of difficult draping problems. In the first place, this new rod has a modern streamlined appearance which keeps it from being objectionable when the curtains are drawn back and the rod is exposed. Secondly, the travelers or rings to which the curtain hooks are attached run on the track so smoothly that a traverse cord is entirely unnecessary as the curtain may be pulled across the window with a flip of the wrist. However, traverse strings may be attached if they are desired.

The biggest advantage, however, is that this new rod is constructed of a special white metal which, though extremely pliable, is also very sturdy. The advantage of this is that the rail can be bent in any desired way by hand so that anyone would be able to install it without special tools. This would be particularly helpful in the draping of a bay window, where a rounded rod or one that was bent at each end might be required. Finally, these rails come in a variety of styles so that they may be attached to the inside or outside of the window, to the top of the casing or even to the ceiling. A boon to all you women with "problem windows."

—o-o—

● WHILE WE'RE ON the subject of rods, however, I would like to make a suggestion of one way to make the good old-fashioned brass rod more decorative when exposed. Why not cover it with the material that is used for the draperies, provided of course, that it is a smooth material that will permit the rings to slide over it? Thus, a window that was draped with white quilted chintz curtains bound in plain pink chintz might have the curtain rod covered in the same pink chintz.

Incidentally, why not have your rods cut to fit your draperies rather than your window? By this I mean that if, for instance, you have draperies that merely hang at either side of the window, why have a rod that goes entirely across the window and is thus partly exposed? It is very simple to have your rods cut to the required length and then attach them to the frame of the window. Of course, this is more likely to be done with draperies that hang on the outside of the frame rather than with glass curtains which hang within the casing and which usually hang across the entire window.

● STILL ON THE SUBJECT of windows and their treatments, we saw a new type of fringe the other day that interested us no end. It was made out of a silver material that resembled tin-foil but was cut in much the same manner of a regular brush fringe. One, with fringe about half an inch long attached to a wide heading, struck us as being particularly suited as the trimming for a plain white curtain in a silver and white bathroom. Another, which had pendant balls of the silver hanging from a gray silk heading, struck us as something that might well be used in decorating the house for Christmas.

WITH THE COMING of the first chill evenings, everyone begins to check up on the log and kindling wood supply, for there is no doubt that one of the real joys of autumn is the return of the open fire season. But many people, I believe, have forgotten the beauty and charm of a coal fire. Especially now, with the great interest in eighteenth century English and Georgian colonial furnishings, there seems to be a revival in the use of coal grates which were so much a part of the fireplace equipment of those days. In addition to the quaintness of a coal fire, there is also the practical feature that it gives off less heat than a wood fire, which is frequently to be desired in our well-heated houses.

And while speaking of fireplace equipment it might be well to suggest you take a peek at your own. This is another of those little household items which is likely to be neglected from year to year in favor of more spectacular purchases. Did you, for instance, when you changed your room from early Mission to streamlined modern, remember to change the andirons too? If not, you will be surprised to discover that there are all sorts of new andirons and equipment designed to fit into a modern interior, most of them being very simply styled and made of such materials as chromium, crystal and glass.

Are You Allergic to Some Foods?

If So—and Many Are—You Will Want To Know How to Modify Your Diet

By Lulu G. Graves

FROM the tiniest infant who discovers the attention-value of refusing to eat a certain food, and basks in the sunshine of self-importance, to well-informed adults who just don't like one thing or another, we find numerous individuals catering to their whims under the all-inclusive and uncombatable statement "I can't eat that!"

Food allergy — sensitivity to a food that is harmless to the average person—is now recognized as one of the disorders that may be associated with eating. At present we have no definite statistics as to the prevalence of this condition. One authority says that not more than 1 per cent of the entire population has a real food allergy. Another authority, equally eminent, says that probably 30 per cent of all persons are unpleasantly affected in some way by one or more foods. This wide divergence of opinion is probably due to the fact that very often the patient has confused ideas of his symptoms.

He may think he is allergic to a certain food when in reality the difficulty is not with the food itself but rather with the method of cooking or the manner of eating it. A digestive disturbance may be induced by eating too rapidly and swallowing food before it is thoroughly chewed; by eating too much at one time, especially a concentrated food such as cheese or nuts; by faulty mastication due to an improper "bite." This is true of adults who need dental attention, but it is also true of children whose teeth need orthodontic work (straightening), particularly when the second teeth come in. Occasionally a person forms a dislike for a certain food, and imagines it disagrees with him because he associates it with an unpleasant experience, poor cooking, or unsanitary surroundings.

A great many people who are allergic to one or two foods voluntarily refrain from eating them and experience no hardship if the food omitted is not important to good nutrition and a well balanced diet.

Scientists have found that the foods which most frequently produce allergic manifestations, unfortunately, are among those occupying a significant place in the diet of both children and adults, and among the best sources of important minerals and vitamins—namely, wheat, milk and eggs. A person who is allergic to any one of these valuable foods should lose no time in consulting a physician and under his guidance build up a tolerance for it, or, if that is not possible, eliminate it.

The fact that wheat, milk and eggs have been found to be most frequent offenders may be because they are eaten in greater quantities than most other foods. A few additional foods that have been found to produce allergic symptoms in many people are pork, fish, onions, particularly raw onions, radishes, cucumbers, chocolate, cheese, and less frequently, lobster and strawberries. This by no means completes the list but these foods stand near the top in studies made by five investigators. The exclusion of foods on the supplementary list is not necessarily a sacrifice of nutritive quality because there are many foods of similar type to replace them.

One may be allergic to almost any common food, and to some foods when eaten in generous amounts, but still feel no discomfort after eating small quantities of it. The minute quantity of egg that is contained in serving of mayonnaise may cause distress to one person, while another may be able to eat custards, but suffers when he eats a whole egg.

As a rule, cooked foods are less likely to produce allergic symptoms than raw foods. In some instances heat renders a food harmless. Often boiled, dried or evaporated milk may be tolerated by those who are normally sensitive to milk. Eggs coddled in hot water for 20 minutes may produce no disagreeable reaction though a three-minute egg might upset him. One who is allergic to wheat may eat melba toast with no discomfort. Cabbage is an exception, in many cases raw cabbage may be eaten without bad after effects, while cooked cabbage cannot be eaten.

An individual may be allergic to only one food, or he may be affected by a number. Sensitivity to foods that biologically are related is not uncommon. For instance, if a person is allergic to cabbage he is disturbed by all members of the cabbage family—cauliflower, broccoli, brussels sprouts, and kale; if Brazil nuts are disturbing to him he may be sensitive to all nuts; the same is true of citrus fruits, fish and other family groups. Two persons seldom show a similar reaction to a certain food. The diet therefore must be planned for each individual case. Dieting may not eliminate the allergic symptoms but up to the present it is the only treatment known to give relief. In this connection, it must be cautioned that the advice of a physician is important in eliminating any basic food from the diet, and making substitutions.

Skin tests are significant in determining a food allergy, but the skin manifestations may not be due always to the allergy. A trial diet is used to supplement the skin tests. All foods found to be irritating or suspected of being irritating are excluded and a simple diet limited to food rarely found to cause annoyance is maintained until the symptoms have disappeared. Then small quantities of the suspected food, or extracts of it, are introduced gradually until it can be eaten with impunity. This treatment may require only a short period of time, or one may have to refrain from use of the specific food for a year or more.

While the patient is undergoing treatment, it is of advantage to him to know something about the ingredients that are contained in the commercially prepared foods he uses. A person who is allergic to milk or eggs is glad to know he can obtain several kinds of crackers and cookies that are milk and egg free. In the event that he can tolerate no milk it is well for him to know what bakery goods and commercially prepared products have no milk in them.

While wheat, milk and eggs play a prominent part in the everyday diet, there is a substitute or alternate food for each of them which makes it possible to plan a menu free from the irritating food. All meats and most fruits and vegetables may be served in a great variety of ways without including any that have an irritating effect. With a few exceptions and occasional slight alterations, the food for the allergic patient may be the same as that for other members of the family, and the special foods that are prepared for him are often enjoyed by all the family.

In a wheat-free diet breads and muffins may be made with cornmeal, oatmeal, rice, potato, barley and soy bean flour, or a combination of two or more of these. There need be no monotony. For thickening purposes, cornstarch, arrowroot, rice, tapioca, barley and the flours of each of them may be used. For cereals there is a large assortment in rolled oats, oatmeal, cornmeal, various kinds of cereal flakes, etc.

In a milk-free diet when even the superheated forms of milk cannot be taken, soy bean milk is a satisfactory substitute. In China, soy bean vegetable milk has been employed successfully with growing children for many years. Its value is now recognized by the medical profession in this and other countries. One of the substitutes for butter is a soy bean oil product. Oleomargarines made of animal fat are milk-free, nut margarines contain about 16 per cent milk. A mineral oil products is available that has a pleasing flavor and appearance but it contains no nutritive element except Vitamin A.

BREADS and rolls may be made with potato water or plain water. Southern spoonbread and other corn breads, prune bread, hot water gingerbread, and applesauce cake are some of the compensations for a lack of richer bakery foods. Cereals may be served with fresh, canned or dried fruits and their juices, or with one of the many bottled fruit juices prepared either commercially or in the home. For desserts, fruits of all kinds offer an unlimited variety when served plain, in gelatin, sherbets or ices.

In the egg-free diet an abundance of milk, cream, fruits, vegetables, meats and fish in correct proportion will furnish the necessary food elements. The markets contribute all these foods in quantities sufficient and varied, to insure an acceptable menu, limited only by the ingenuity of the planner.

Until the individual's idiosyncracy for specific foods has been accurately determined, a diet of lamb, barley with butter substitute, sugar, gelatin could be followed.

New Patterns In Chinaware This Autumn

By Dorothy Higgins

AMERICA is stepping to the forefront with the grace and beauty of china fired in its kilns, and the reserve of line and color of patterns adapted to this traditional medium.

The creamy, translucent body which is made here ranks with the best china in the world, and the delicacy of pattern is an everlasting delight to the eye. Some of the newer pieces of one famous kiln have been developed to be used as centerpieces. Functional in line, devoid of any color except the creamy body which is so lustrous, these are indeed a tribute to American craftsmanship.

The colors used on china tend to be more muted in tone—soft, cloudy blues; dusty pinks or pale coral; greens with the tender freshness of young, half-opened leaves. Charming dinner tables will be planned this fall in sequence with place plates on which a wide band of color is used, accented with a little gold, and the creamy center of the plate classic in motif. Then the following courses will be the same in color tone and pattern, but the tinted band narrower with less gold. The dessert course and the after-dinner coffee cups again pick up the color note in the wide band of color. This sequence plan of the same center motif for the plates makes for graceful service, and is very practical, because the pieces which are subject to the most use are not so expensive as the place plates and dessert services.

QUALITY IN CHINA is exemplified by the lustrous tone of the body, the evenness of the glaze which indicates careful firing, and the accuracy in which the pattern is applied. Color is difficult to hold when the china goes into the kiln, so where unusual tones are desired it is advisable to order all the pieces you wish at one time. Many people, who entertain frequently, buy 13 place plates, 14 dinner plates, and 14 cream soups, tea and after-dinner coffee cups. The pieces with handles are more fragile than the plates, so this is insurance that you will always have the required number of each piece for gracious service. Possibly because more formal entertaining is in store for this season, or perhaps just because people like change, rimmed soups are more popular this year. But the rimmed soup plate has made a slight bow to fashion, and is not so big as it used to be. Formerly these soup plates were nine or 10 inches wide and rather shallow. Now they are eight to eight and a half inches wide, but a little deeper. This smaller size is more graceful and is suitable for desserts traditionally American.

THE CHINA or earthenware on which you serve the happy informal meals when the family is together, or use when you are entertaining honored guests, should be a constant joy to you. It should be a frame for food, to make the food more appetizing, to lend a pleasant contrast and accent. In formality, it should be in keeping with the spirit of the decorations of your home, complementing or contrasting with the color scheme where it is to be used.

Well-chosen china makes entertaining a happy privilege. The time and thought you put into its first selection will be rewarded many times in minutes saved when important events take place. Entertaining is never a formidable task when you are prepared, and while china is not everything, it is an aid to graciousness.

When you purchase china make it a practice to inquire whether it is carried in open stock, so should replacement or additions become necessary, a telephone call will bring them to your door.

Be happy with your china; select it with care and due consideration for your own personality and your home; and enjoy it every day, so that you and your family may treasure memories of happy meals together.

Decorating a Bedroom

By Elizabeth Boykin

"I'D LIKE to know," writes Martha T., "how I can use pink as the predominant color in my bedroom and yet keep it smart and sophisticated looking. I have a pink rug, a large and very good one, that I have to use. It looks much too feminine and dainty to me to use in a room that my husband will share. But we inherited it from his mother's home and we can't afford another now. The furniture we must use it with includes a brown mahogany chest and separate hanging mirror, modern in style, and a double bed in brown mahogany, also modern, night tables and a modern vanity to match with a beige leather hassock. It sounds pretty awful with that pink rug, but I hope you can make something out of it. We can have the walls done over and can get new spread and draperies—also a new covering for a pair of small easy chairs."

It's a hard problem in a way, and yet pink can be quite a smart color in modern rooms, so take heart. Use beige with it with high lights of brown. Have off-white walls with a brown ceiling if you're a courageous soul, otherwise a pale beige ceiling. The two arm chairs slip-covered in pale beige with brown welting; the bedspread we'd have in a pale beige quilted fabric or else pale beige candlewick. If you have quilted beige for the spread, finish the edges with bands or braid of brown. For accent have your lamps in a very deep green pottery and repeat the green in beige containers to hold green huckleberry leaves, ivy or laurel. The pale beige we'd repeat in the draperies. Nothing sissy about that ensemble.

HOW long since you gave your furniture a washing? You really should wash your furniture every once in a while because dusting and polishing aren't going to keep it really clean. Yes indeed, even your good pieces but of course you have to be ever so careful to do it the right way.

For your best old pieces that have acquired an antique patine which you don't want to lose, take a very soft piece of cheese cloth, put it through several rinses, then wring every drop of water out of it. Use this to go over the wood, following its natural grain. Be as quick about it as possible. Then follow with a brisk rubbing with a dry soft cloth and when the wood is entirely dry, wax it.

For your other wood pieces in varnish or lacquer finish, use a mild soap suds, a light-weight wool cloth and a soft brush. Dip cloth in suds and wring out, then go over the smooth surface of the furniture lightly with it and dry with a clean soft rag. When completely dry, wax or oil as usual. Use a brush in the same way for the carved parts and the grooves and niches of the piece of furniture.

For your upholstered furniture, clean the pieces as well as you can with your vacuum before starting the washing process on it. If the covering is a heavy closely woven fabric, use a stiff brush dipped in a thick mild suds. Don't allow the suds to stand more than a minute or so, scraping it off first, then go over the surface until soap is gone with a brush that has been dipped in fresh water and shaken out well.

Everlastings That Brighten Late Borders

They May Also Be Cut and Dried to Make Winter Bouquets.

By Harriet W. Chandler

EVERLASTINGS are gay little annuals and perennials that do double duty for those wise enough to allot them space. They will do their bit to brighten the late border and may be cut and dried to make winter bouquets in the house.

The strawflower, Helichrysum, probably the best known of the annual sorts, is the largest and showiest of the everlastings. These grow readily from seed and can be started in the house or in the open after danger of frost in May. Any garden soil will satisfy them, but they respond to plenty of fertility. It is well to transplant the little seedlings a couple of times before they are set in the place they are to flower. The plants grow about two feet high and should be allowed plenty of room as they develop quite a spread. Twelve inches each way will not be a bit too much to allow them. The double flowers with yellow centers make quite a lavish display from midsummer on, with a range of color from white to light and deep yellow, crimson, rose, chestnut and deep purple.

THE ROSE Everlasting grows only 12 to 15 inches high and will grace any border with its dainty little rose-like flowers of pink or white with yellow centers and give lasting effect when used in miniature arrangements for winter.

The Swan River Everlasting is another dainty permanent flower with drooping bell-shaped blossoms on slender stems. These pink flowers are more graceful than showy. Catalogued as Rhodanthe, the plant will enjoy a hot, sunny place in the garden and the seed must not be planted until the soil is well warmed up in spring.

Unlike the Strawflower, this everlasting resents transplanting and must be sown where it is to flower. The seedlings should be thinned out to stand six or seven inches apart. These smaller everlastings also make pretty pot plants for the window garden. In Europe they are appreciated much more than with us and are raised by the acre for their decorative possibilities.

GLOBE-AMARANTH is a close second to the strawflower in popularity. Its clover-like heads of rose, purple or white are borne in great profusion on bushy plants over a foot tall. They are often seen in mass plantings in front of shrubbery. They should be combined with white flowers only, as their colors do not harmonize with shades of other flowers. The seeds can be planted in early spring as they germinate very slowly. It is best to soak them in hot water before sowing. Cover the soil with grass cuttings during germination to hold moisture, but remove this covering when seedlings appear.

Lunaria, or Honesty, is an old-fashioned everlasting with which most of us are familiar. Its seed pods resemble small silver moons and make it one of the most decorative of all the dried plants. These seed pods must be allowed to ripen fully before the stems are cut. The outer covering can then be easily rubbed off and leaves the shimmering transparent skin through which the seeds can be seen. Lunaria is a biennial and will not develop its seed pods until the second year. A weedy-looking plant, it should be grown only in the cutting garden, for it has no value except for winter decoration. The seeds are sown as early in spring as the ground can be worked, so that a large crop of seed pods may have time to mature.

Chinese lantern, Physalis Franchetti, is another weedy plant in spite of so much name, and deserves attention solely on account of its brilliant yellow-red lantern-like seed pods. It is a hardy perennial which must be relegated to an out-of-the-way corner, where it can spread to its heart's content and provide an abundance of its lovely lanterns to brighten our winters indoors.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.

SOMETIMES old age seems to be coming on the dead gallop. Never have I been so conscious of the Leap of Time as this fall, whenever I see the freshmen groups noted as the Class of '41! Ye unmerciful gods! Just imagine—41 years of this dizziest of centuries already well in sight! It's too much!

This was newly hammered into my head as I visited ye dear old campus up at Columbia University, in the heart of Manhattan, just to see the fresh-girls at Barnard College settle into the traces for their first year at the Fem Sem. I must have viewed 300 girls, and I must admit that they seem a gaier, snappier lot than my gang, way back there in the dawn of recorded time. Barnard, under the guidance of brilliant and active Dean Virginia Gildersleeve, who has ruled that pullet-roost almost since the Columbia Lion was a squealing cub, has an honored place in the scholastic sun. Socially, a metropolitan college presents interesting variants from many of the famous Young Ladies' Seminaries.

Vassar, for instance, rests in many wide acres above the lordly Hudson. Or should one say the melancholy waters of the Hudson? Most of the others have broad fields, green pastures and woodland paths. But dear old Barnard's campus consists of three blocks of New York City, which it shares with the men of Columbia College. From the Barnard Campus a strong sophomore can hit Broadway with a field-hockey ball. Thus the struggles of Barnard misses for freedom are faintly tinged with pathos. They adore and flee to a tiny green spot back of Barnard Hall, called "The Jungle," where there's no ban on smoking! Isn't that sort of sad? I think a college girl should get out of the city!

● FEW REALIZE, perhaps, that Mainbocher, the Parisian dressmaker who is now running up much of the winter wardrobe of Her Grace, the Duchess of Windsor, is an Iowa boy. Yes, sir—a product of the corn country, who worked in New York for some years in the fashion business before he went to Paris, fame and fortune. . .

I LEARN TODAY that this months our ambitious, pushing little hamlet will play host to no fewer than 79 conventions, showing that the secretary of our Chamber of Commerce is earning his kopecks, all rightie! And the funny part of it is that we citizens will never know they're in town at all!

WELL, everything is all right now. The incomparable Kirsten Flagstad arrived safely on the Europa the other day, fit and ready to open her mouth and bathe us once more in glorious Wagnerian sounds from that magic throat. The world, Heaven knows, is tough enough, but a Flagstead certainly helps out! . . .

Every year amid the myriad events of the town, we have an Indian convention here at which a small group of noble red-men gather to survey the mad island their ancestors frittered away centuries ago. This year's meeting was terribly dull, no scalpings at all. Chief Littlemoose, a Chippewa from Minnesota, ably presided. The few squaws present had nothing to say, in the fine old Indian tradition. . .

● NOPE — they can't stop us! We're inching — in everywhere! "Votes for Women!" For the first time in the history of New York University, one of its colleges has a girl for senior class president. Ethel Simon, 19 and voted "the most beautiful co-ed" in the university, now heads the seniors of the School of Commerce. Onward, sisters!

INTO THE WORLD of frozen fruits and vegetables now bounces that dainty, much prized by some, the heart of the artichoke. The frozen hearts are all done up in cellophane and so sealed as to hold flavor right doggedly. I'd rather wrestle a grizzly b'ar than an artichoke, so I happily hail this new onrush of science. Unfreeze me an artichoke heart, Mamie, and let's munch!

ONE OF THE BEST and easiest ways of telling footwear fortunes well before the event is to inspect the new leathers before the shoemakers get at 'em. I've recently inspected a lot of colored patent leathers—orange, blue, pink and even yellow! This is just to warn you that in a few months you will be asked to buy patent pumps that will make a rainbow look pretty dull!

QUITE A BIT of goings-on here in Murray Hill, these early fall days. Neighbor J. P. Morgan, over at Thirty-seventh and Madison avenue, is having a brave new coat of red paint applied to the iron fence surrounding his town house and his marble library, though I haven't noticed any of the gent out on the sidewalk bossing the job—which is fun. . .

Everlastings That Brighten Late Borders

They May Also Be Cut and Dried to Make Winter Bouquets.

By Harriet W. Chandler

EVERLASTINGS are gay little annuals and perennials that do double duty for those wise enough to allot them space. They will do their bit to brighten the late border and may be cut and dried to make winter bouquets in the house.

The strawflower, Helichrysum, probably the best known of the annual sorts, is the largest and showiest of the everlastings. These grow readily from seed and can be started in the house or in the open after danger of frost in May. Any garden soil will satisfy them, but they respond to plenty of fertility. It is well to transplant the little seedlings a couple of times before they are set in the place they are to flower. The plants grow about two feet high and should be allowed plenty of room as they develop quite a spread. Twelve inches each way will not be a bit too much to allow them. The double flowers with yellow centers make quite a lavish display from midsummer on, with a range of color from white to light and deep yellow, crimson, rose, chestnut and deep purple.

THE ROSE Everlasting grows only 12 to 15 inches high and will grace any border with its dainty little rose-like flowers of pink or white with yellow centers and give lasting effect when used in miniature arrangements for winter.

The Swan River Everlasting is another dainty permanent flower with drooping bell-shaped blossoms on slender stems. These pink flowers are more graceful than showy. Catalogued as Rhodanthe, the plant will enjoy a hot, sunny place in the garden and the seed must not be planted until the soil is well warmed up in spring.

Unlike the Strawflower, this everlasting resents transplanting and must be sown where it is to flower. The seedlings should be thinned out to stand six or seven inches apart. These smaller everlastings also make pretty pot plants for the window garden. In Europe they are appreciated much more than with us and are raised by the acre for their decorative possibilities.

GLOBE-AMARANTH is a close second to the strawflower in popularity. Its clover-like heads of rose, purple or white are borne in great profusion on bushy plants over a foot tall. They are often seen in mass plantings in front of shrubbery. They should be combined with white flowers only, as their colors do not harmonize with shades of other flowers. The seeds can be planted in early spring as they germinate very slowly. It is best to soak them in hot water before sowing. Cover the soil with grass cuttings during germination to hold moisture, but remove this covering when seedlings appear.

Lunaria, or Honesty, is an old-fashioned everlasting with which most of us are familiar. Its seed pods resemble small silver moons and make it one of the most decorative of all the dried plants. These seed pods must be allowed to ripen fully before the stems are cut. The outer covering can then be easily rubbed off and leaves the shimmering transparent skin through which the seeds can be seen. Lunaria is a biennial and will not develop its seed pods until the second year. A weedy-looking plant, it should be grown only in the cutting garden, for it has no value except for winter decoration. The seeds are sown as early in spring as the ground can be worked, so that a large crop of seed pods may have time to mature.

Chinese lantern, Physalis Francheti, is another weedy plant in spite of so much name, and deserves attention solely on account of its brilliant yellow-red lantern-like seed pods. It is a hardy perennial which must be relegated to an out-of-the-way corner, where it can spread to its heart's content and provide an abundance of its lovely lanterns to brighten our winters indoors.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.

SOMETIMES old age seems to be coming on the dead gallop. Never have I been so conscious of the Leap of Time as this fall, whenever I see the freshmen groups noted as the Class of '41! Ye unmerciful gods! Just imagine—41 years of this dizziest of centuries already well in sight! It's too much!

This was newly hammered into my head as I visited ye dear old campus up at Columbia University, in the heart of Manhattan, just to see the fresh-girls at Barnard College settle into the traces for their first year at the Fem Sem. I must have viewed 300 girls, and I must admit that they seem a gaier, snappier lot than my gang, way back there in the dawn of recorded time. Barnard, under the guidance of brilliant and active Dean Virginia Gildersleeve, who has ruled that pullet-roost almost since the Columbia Lion was a squealing cub, has an honored place in the scholastic sun. Socially, a metropolitan college presents interesting variants from many of the famous Young Ladies' Seminaries.

Vassar, for instance, rests in many wide acres above the lordly Hudson. Or should one say the melancholy waters of the Hudson? Most of the others have broad fields, green pastures and woodland paths. But dear old Barnard's campus consists of three blocks of New York City, which it shares with the men of Columbia College. From the Barnard Campus a strong sophomore can hit Broadway with a field-hockey ball. Thus the struggles of Barnard misses for freedom are faintly tinged with pathos. They adore and flee to a tiny green spot back of Barnard Hall, called "The Jungle," where there's no ban on smoking! Isn't that sort of sad? I think a college girl should get out of the city!

● FEW REALIZE, perhaps, that Mainbocher, the Parisian dressmaker who is now running up much of the winter wardrobe of Her Grace, the Duchess of Windsor, is an Iowa boy. Yes, sir—a product of the corn country, who worked in New York for some years in the fashion business before he went to Paris, fame and fortune. . .

I LEARN TODAY that this months our ambitious, pushing little hamlet will play host to no fewer than 79 conventions, showing that the secretary of our Chamber of Commerce is earning his kopecks, all rightie! And the funny part of it is that we citizens will never know they're in town at all!

—o-o—

WELL, everything is all right now. The incomparable Kirsten Flagstad arrived safely on the Europa the other day, fit and ready to open her mouth and bathe us once more in glorious Wagnerian sounds from that magic throat. The world, Heaven knows, is tough enough, but a Flagstead certainly helps out! . . .

—o-o—

Every year amid the myriad events of the town, we have an Indian convention here, at which a small group of noble red-men gather to survey the mad island their ancestors frittered away centuries ago. This year's meeting was terribly tame, with many dull orations and no scalpings at all. Chief Littlemoose, a Chippewa from Minnesota, ably presided. The few squaws present had nothing to say, in the fine old Indian tradition. . .

● NOPE — they can't stop us! We're inching in everywhere! "Votes for Women!" For the first time in the history of New York University, one of its colleges has a girl for senior class president. Ethel Simon, 19 and voted "the most beautiful co-ed" in the university, now heads the seniors of the School of Commerce. Onward, sisters!

INTO THE WORLD of frozen fruits and vegetables now bounces that dainty, much prized by some, the heart of the artichoke. The frozen hearts are all done up in cellophane, and are said to hold the flavor right doggedly. I'd rather wrestle a grizzly b'ar than an artichoke, so I happily hail this new onrush of science. Unfreeze me an artichoke heart, Mamie, and let's munch!

ONE OF THE BEST and easiest ways of telling footwear fortunes well before the event is to inspect the new leathers before the shoemakers get at 'em. I've recently inspected a lot of colored patent leathers—orange, blue, pink and even yellow! This is just to warn you that in a few months you will be asked to buy patent pumps that will make a rainbow look pretty dull!

—o-o—

Viewpoint on Democracy in Public Schools

By Angelo Patri

"WHAT'S the matter, Robert?"

"Oh, I'm in a mess at school. Mr. Rogers says he wants to see you or father."

"What in the world? Did you do anything wrong, son?"

"Not that I know of. They think I'm rebellious and conceited and selfish. They say that I am not co-operative. Doesn't co-operation include teachers, mother? Or is it one-sided, the teacher's side?"

"I don't know. What happened. Tell me. Then I can think better."

"I'm bored stiff in class. Especially math and history. Today for instance, we spent the whole math period on one point, not even a point, but an example. Just a routine process. That was because Maurice couldn't see why he changed signs. We all had to keep working the same ground over and over because Maurice, who will never know when or why he changes signs, was in trouble.

"Well, I'd work the example in my head, and then go on with some problems I found in the back of the book. And did Miss Rich get mad? She told me to hand over my book. I was rude. I was wasting her time. I was holding up the class. What I wasn't she didn't say.

"Finally I said, 'I'm sorry, Miss Rich, that I'm such a nuisance to you. I can't help knowing what Maurice does not know. And I don't see any reason for your calling me things like this, either. I'm bored stiff in this classroom every day and I'm just as tired of Maurice as you are.' Then she sent me to the office and Mr. Rogers lectured me in the same strain. It all comes down to this: Either I keep step with Maurice, who has stopped the procession now for weeks, or I get out. I'll have to get out."

AND ROBERT had stated the case exactly. He was a genius in mathematics and a whizz at history. He could do a bookful of problems while Maurice prepared to get ready. Yet he, and others with him, had to sit and yawn, and wait, and waste their days because they belonged to a class in a public school and the basic idea of the public school, said the principal, was democracy. One child as good as another. No favors shown. Now I ask you whether that is the idea of democracy as expressed in the public school?

It is not my notion of it. Democracy gives each person his place and opportunity. It allows him freedom of action up to the place where that action interferes with the peace and happiness of others. Why level the group to the lowest grade? If you cannot lift the lower ones why not let the faster ones get where they are going and speed them on their way?

On the WEST COAST

By H. H. Niemeyer

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 9.

WALTER WANGER, pretty active these days out here on the West Coast and the man who dazzled the fans with the color photography of Joan Bennett's lovely blue eyes in his "Vogues of 1938," pulled a hit and miss proposition this week. Really two propositions, for he introduced, via previews, a pair of pictures in "Stand In" and "52nd Street." The first furnished the hit, a genuine one, while his attempt to move uptown and glorify the section 10 blocks away from Times Square was very much on the miss side.

Wanger, with an independent studio and no contracts, borrowed his players from other lots, doing very well indeed when it came to "Stand In," a very funny comedy of behind the screen life in Hollywood. In some manner he managed to get, by this route, Leslie Howard, Joan Blondell, Alan Mowbray and Humphrey Bogart, as stars, and a choice collection of bit players who know how to poke fun at the picture game. Also he had the benefit of Clarence Buddington Kelland's splendid story and the result is good for something over an hour of continuous laughter.

● MR. HOWARD, as a soberminded man of figures from the bookkeeping department of the House of Rockefeller—"all of the characters in this picture are purely fictitious, etc., etc." — demonstrates that he is one of the finest light comedians of the screen and one who is quite likely to win the acclaim of the fans, denied him for his magnificent work in more dramatic roles. Miss Blondell is well nigh perfect, as she should be, as a wise-cracking studio stand-in who steers Mr. Howard along the right path and Mowbray gives a great impersonation of a temperamental film director—who might be Josef Von Sternberg if it were not for that screen warning again that "all the characters are purely fictitious."

● HUMPHREY BOGART, who, up to now has played only underworld hoodlums in a long succession of successful pictures, gets a break in a straight role and does it excellently just to show his versatility. If you want to be really entertained and learn some of the tricks of Hollywood by all means see "Stand In" when it comes your way. You'll get enough laughs out of Joan Blondell reversing the usual order of things in giving an imitation of Shirley Temple singing "The Good Ship Lollypop" to last you for a long time. Wanger's other offering, "52nd Street" is something about speakeasies, the best families in New York and the rise and fall of Fifty-Second Street, West, and can be missed without pain.

● JUST WHERE or how the rumor started that Paulette Goddard would play Scarlett O'Hara in "Gone With the Wind" is a mystery. She will not and while the actress for the role has not been selected Miriam Hopkins is still the best bet. Maybe Dave Selznick started the report about Miss Goddard himself so as to deny it and keep up interest in the picture which will not face the cameras until next spring. . . . The Barbara Stanwyck-Frank Fay case, which rested quietly enough after their divorce a couple of years ago, is beginning to stir up a lot of trouble again. As has been told Barbara sued last week to get a division of the Fay-Stanwyck homestead and now Frank has come back with a suit claiming that Barbara didn't pay her income tax for several years which caused the Government to file a lien on the property. Incidentally Miss Stanwyck has denied once more that she is romantically interested in Robert Taylor. . . .

● THE RADIO has its brawls as well as the cinema. Parkyakarkus and Al Jolson, in their capacities as air entertainers and not as movie actors, clashed in a broadcasting studio the other night and exchanged harsh words and a couple of blows before stage hands interferred and pulled them apart. . . . As the new Tarzan in "Tarzan's Revenge" Glenn Morris, Olympic decathlon champion and a prize elocutionist in his school days, will have just one line to speak. He thinks he will be able to learn it. . . . Eleanor Holm, also an Olympic champion, who makes her reentry into films in the same picture will do quite a lot of talking but will rely a lot on her swimming.

Allan Jones' leading woman in his first starring picture, "The Ugly Duckling," will be Lynn Carver, who will have her first singing role in pictures. . . . "The Girl of the Golden West" was a pretty serious affair as a drama and as grand opera but in the screen version for Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy a lot of comedy will be introduced by Buddy Ebsen. . . . Lewis Stone, who hasn't been doing very much lately except sail his yacht, is coming back for a leading role in Walter Hustons next picture, "Benefits Forgot." . . . Frances Farmer, who has been spending her vacation appearing with a small Eastern summer stock company, is likely to be lost to the screen for some time. She will play the lead in Clifford Odets' new play, "Golden Gloves' in New York.

SCHOOL FOR ACTRESSES

New York Drama Critic, in One Session, Tells Stage Aspirants What To Do and What Not to Do.

ANY man who practices the profession of theatrical critic is bound to get no fewer than a score of letters weekly from young women in all walks of life who are convinced that they have in them the makings of actresses. What the eager correspondents wish to know is how to go about developing their potentialities. It isn't jobs on the stage that they have in immediate mind so much as the proper course of training to pursue with that goal in view.

It is the invariable custom of all theatrical critics either promptly to throw such billets into the wastebasket or perfunctorily to dictate a brief note recommending to the inquirer some kind of dramatic school or other. While it is certainly reasonable to believe that a good dramatic school may be of very considerable assistance to the aspirants—a fact frequently attested to by the results achieved—it is nevertheless my opinion that such schools generally fail to instruct their pupils in some very important details. They center their chief attention upon diction, voice and projection and leave altogether overlooked many little things that can ruin the impression that a fairly competent young actress might otherwise make upon her audience.

I appreciate that, to the heads of these academies, the points I am about to bring to the attention of the future Helen Hayeses, Katharine Cornells and Lynn Fontannes may seem trivial to the point of being ridiculous. But I can assure them that if they had sat before the stage as a reviewer for 30 years, as I have, they would know that they are very far from being that.

One of the things an aspiring young actress should be told and apparently never is—is, when in a sitting position she crosses her legs, never to allow one leg to press tightly against the other. If she does (and she usually does) the calf of the leg thus pressed takes on the aspect of an inverted three-quart bottle and instantaneously magnetizes an audience's displeased eye. While on the subject of legs, it would also be well for the young actress to watch out carefully for the preservation of their slenderness, as it is too often forgotten that a theater audience has to look upward at a stage and that the angle of vision frequently contrives to thicken even the slimmest of legs.

There is a great difference between exact pronunciation and enunciation and obviously painstaking exact pronunciation and enunciation. The former is, of course, to be demanded. But the latter, with its air of a student proudly and self-consciously reciting a heavily learned lesson, will destroy the naturalness, ease and effect of any performance, however otherwise good. It is better, so far as the audience goes, to mispronounce and even badly articulate a difficult word than to speak it like a diction teacher set upon giving a lesson in labial and dental calisthenics.

DON'T let them too readily convert a natural walk and a natural carriage into the routine, standardized walk and carriage of one of the more illustrious tanktown stock company actresses. They usually try to do it and, in the doing, often remove what may be a charming—or at least a partly winning—attribute of a young woman. There probably never was a girl on the stage with a worse carriage than the one named Ermine Clark in the old Casino shows; she had stooped shoulders and walked as if she didn't ever know exactly where she was heading; but she was one of the most-talked-of and popular girls on the stage of her day. Hope Williams walk would never have been tolerated in a dramatic school, yet it attracted to her what attention she more recently got in the theater. Ethel Barrymore's carriage would have received a G-minus mark from any dramatic school professor, yet it proved on the stage to be one of her most engaging assets. And there are dozens of other examples. Don't be a gawk, but on the other hand don't let them make you a mere imitation of a dress model parading at some hypothetical fashion show.

Be as eagerly yourself as the particular dramatic circumstances will permit. Don't allow them to take out of you what fervid glow, inner radiance and excitement you naturally possess. Such qualities, if you have them, are more valuable to you so far as audiences go than anything you can learn from all the books on acting that Stanislavski and Jessie Bonstelle ever have written or ever will write. You can get something much more from watching a single Marie Tempest than you can from watching two dozen Gladys Coopers. You can learn a much more valuable lesson from even Loretta Young of the films than you can from three-fourths of the ingenues in the theater. There is about these women, whether young or old, the impression that their hearts have just drunk a couple of glasses of champagne. And that impression in the theater is generally 20 or 30 times more precious than the one derived from a technique, however magnificent, that seems to have been nourished on alum.

If, however, such a temperament and quality is not yours by nature, do not try to counterfeit it. The counterfeit will be obvious even though you develop, like Bergner, your technical equipment to the highest degree. If, appreciating that you lack it, a director nevertheless in view of the demands of a particular role insists that you "act" it, promptly resign and look for another job. For the best you will be able to achieve in the way of mimicking the excitement and radiance will result in one of those performances which the critical popheads and your old aunt are in the flattering habit of describing as "breathless." To anyone, critic or layman, who knows the difference between black and white, your performance will be remindful only of the ubiquitous radio announcers who palpitatingly describe something like Whistler's "Mother" as if it were a race between two express trains.

If they flatter you that you have an "infectious" laugh and try to persuade you that it is a stage asset, run for your life. Even the most agreeable chuckle that a female may have is somewhat offensive to masculine ears. Mencken, back in his beer-drinking days, once summed it up: "A pebble in the shoe . . . a roach in the macaroni . . . a woman's laugh."

If you are pretty, it will help, but if you are not, don't lose too much sleep over it. There isn't a single important actress on the American stage today who, if he didn't know who she was, would cause even a truck-driver to turn around to look at her. The really beautiful women of the stage have never been its most indorsable actresses.

If your role calls upon you to kiss a man, really kiss him, even if he has had a dinner consisting entirely of garlic and if the mere sight of him off-stage induces in you a comprehensive nausea. Don't try idiotically to persuade the audience that you are full of maidenly modesty and polite reserve by crawling your mouth around the other side of his neck and out of the view of the audience and, at the moment of the break-away, emerging bogusly with your lips passionately half-open. You will look foolish.

When they try to impress you with the importance of achieving versatility, give them the nose. Duse, the greatest actress of our time, had infinitely less versatility than even Amelia Bingham, one of the worst actresses of our time.

LORETTA YOUNG . . . YOU CAN LEARN PLENTY BY WATCHING HER ON THE SCREEN.

Opera Pumps Popular For Wear in Evening

OPERA pumps are returning to popularity for evening as well as for daytime. There is something about the Merry Widow trend to many of the season's costumes that suggests the pump rather than the sandal.

Attractive pump styles on display in the St. Louis shops include one which has a tongue effect of pleated gold leather. This matches the extreme high heel and the piping around the top of the shoe which is of brocaded material. A wing-like bow of silver mesh trims another pump that is made of metallic fabric.

Cut steel buckles are featured for wear on afternoon pumps. These ornaments are replicas of the ones in vogue some years ago and look their best when applied to glistening patent leather.

Do not crowd the washing machine full of blankets or other woolens. Allow plenty of space for the articles to soak. There will then be less strain on them.

Medicines Now Standardized, Fully Reliable

"Modern Products Are Tested and Checked Up, Over and Over Again."

By
Logan Clendening, M. D.

THE days of nasty medicines are over. The old nauseous mixtures have given away to elegant pharmacy, so that taking medicine is even a pleasure—too much of a pleasure, perhaps, for some people.

And even more important, the days of unreliable medicine have gone. Drugs are tested and checked up, over and over again. They are standardized by trying them out on animals to see that they are potent—that they will do what they are supposed to do. And the modern pharmacist is a thoroughly educated, well-trained expert in elegant and accurate compounding.

The mixtures of the old physicians were curious and repulsive—scrapings from the bodies of athletes, mixed with the oil with which they anointed themselves, were used as a tonic. All kinds of strange animals were used and some of their organs or parts for medicinal agents—the hyena, crocodile, chameleon, lion, elephant, camel and hippopotamus.

TOADS AND SNAKES naturally attracted these practitioners, who were more superstitious than learned. The toad is mentioned in "Macbeth":

"Toad that under cold stone
Days and nights hast thirty-one
Sweltened venom sleeping got."

The idea was that the best time to get the toad's venom was after it had lain dormant a month, besides the advantage of catching him napping was that he would have no time to get rid of the poisonous or medicinal principle contained in his skin.

The story was that King John was poisoned by a friar who dropped a toad in his wine, but a curious story is that of a wicked Italian woman whose husband was dying of dropsy. He took so long about it, that she got tired and thought to hurry the process by putting a toad in his wine, so that he would drink the liquid and die. He did so, but to her astonishment and disgust, he completely recovered.

FIFTY YEARS ago that story would have been scouted as mythical, but we know now that the skin of a toad secretes a drug which has an action very like the famous heart remedy, digitalis, which was introduced into medicine as a remedy for dropsy.

In 1911, Doctors Abel and Mocht, two experts in pharmacology, secured from the dried secretion of the salivary gland of a tropical toad bufa agua, a substance they called "bufagen." Injected into animals, it increased the tone of the heart muscle, and the strength of the heart's contraction.

Ben Hecht Play Strays Into Sermons

"To Quito and Back," Staged by Theater Guild, Preaches for Both Sides.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.

AT LONG intervals there happens in the theater a first night which seems fool-proof. The producer, playwright, director and actors are all of estimable reputation, so much so that the event is overly exciting—and then you get a "To Quito and Back," as Broadway did this week before an audience that became quieter and quieter.

There is Ben Hecht, the author, who has himself written or collaborated with Charles MacArthur on so many admirable things from Hecht's own sketches as a newspaper man in Chicago to their dynamic "Front Page" on the Broadway stage and their numerous thrilling movies in Hollywood. And, with all that, in Hecht's "To Quito and Back" he writes the character of a newspaper reporter in the accustomed Hollywood formula No. A to Z of an amiable drunk who seems more concerned with wisecracks than with getting his story to the paper.

There is a cast that an experienced audience knows just can't miss, for in it is Leslie Banks who has been so outstanding in so many gay or grim English plays, and in it is Sylvia Sidney who was such an earthy, capable ingenue in plays like "Crime" and "Gods of the Lightning" until she went to Hollywood.

But, in "To Quito and Back" you find the acting honors completely won by Joseph Buloff and Evelyn Varden. This is the second appearance Buloff has made on an English-speaking stage, his only other such appearance having been in the briefly surviving "Call Me Ziggy." This is a return, and a triumphant one, for the blond, buxom Miss Varden from Oklahoma who already once retired as long ago as 1921.

The plot, from the usually very able plot-making pen of Hecht, wanders. That is the only word for it—"wanders." It begins as the story of a capable middle-aged, American novelist who flees to Ecuador with the young girl who is entranced with him. Escaping from their imagined troubles with the novelist's wife, they find themselves popped right into the brimstone of a tropical revolution and with the novelist's wife, being her husband's own age and understanding him much better, close in pursuit.

The novelist is lured away from his impetuous romance with the girl-in-flight by the color and adventure in the personality of the rebel leader, Zamiano. Too, in this primitive country to which he has fled, he is pursued by devils of realization that reality is not the imagined refuge this young girl might give him, but the ability and courage in himself to work out his problem-life for himself and the skeleton that haunts him is that he might have succeeded much better with the older wife from whom he has fled. He reveals this unsubtly when he writes a confessional letter back to his wife and turns to the young girl with whom he has eloped to this revolutionary refuge and asks if he may address that left-behind wife for the last time as "My Darling."

Then both of them realize what is really true and there are no illusions any more, as pleasant as those illusions may have been for a time. There is the conventional and honorable ending where he goes out to battle with Zamiano and they are both killed in a fruitless cause.

This seems a story of passions, honorable and dishonorable, and it might have been that if Hecht had written with his early reportorial simplicity. But, what the audience has to stumble through in this Theater Guild production are verbose sermons in favor of and against Fascism, in favor of and against respectable love and matrimony, in favor and against ruthless, gangster murders, and countless other vague subjects.

Ben Hecht Play Strays Into Sermons

"To Quito and Back," Staged by Theater Guild, Preaches for Both Sides.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.

AT LONG intervals there happens in the theater a first night which seems fool-proof. The producer, playwright, director and actors are all of estimable reputation, so much so that the event is overly exciting—and then you get a "To Quito and Back," as Broadway did this week before an audience that became quieter and quieter.

AMID the flurry of foreign playwrights and actors tumbling onto Broadway this season, the one alien group feeling warmly at home immediately is the Irish Abbey Theater Players who arrived in their repertoire a night or two ago. A touch of homesickness, and all they need is to walk to the nearest corner and call a cop in this metropolis where most of the cops are Irish.

And, there have been many times in their previous visits to American theaters when they have needed urgently to call a cop and not for the expedient excuse of meeting a sentimental fellow Irishman. When they first came here in 1911 there were tumultuous disturbances from the audiences (in those days, folk spoke their mind), and when they went on to Philadelphia and Boston potatoes and more aggressive missiles were thrown at them from the balconies and boxes and their appearances reached the riot stage in numerous instances.

Happily, on their current venture on these shores the temper of the opposing clans has calmed as it has for the past several of their more profitable visits. Now they come over and play to applause in most of the Sean O'Casey and W. B. Yeats plays which used to be stoned with enthusiasm in their first days in the theater when the Abbey actors rustled for outside day jobs to support themselves while they acted at nights for little or nothing.

In this current appearance they began with a new play, "Katie Roche," which is the folk tale of a spirited Irish girl who grows up in the village streets with the impulsive village boys and when she grows to maidenhood she wants life a bit of berserk and bombastic, which is the way of the Irish, or some of them.

She marries Michael McGuire, a kindly man of calm, even ways, who is good and grave, and all that really is admirable except when he attempts to cool the electric ways of Katie. She doesn't want to lose him, and he doesn't want to lose her, but their ways and temperaments are at two opposite poles.

It is an amusing play, and sentimental, but not the explosive, strong type of the old standbys that the Abbey Players have in their repertoire, such as "The Plough and the Stars" and "Juno and the Paycock."

Mostly the same players are back in their accustomed roles. Eileen Crowe, with her lilting brogue; F. J. McCormick, with his dry Irish wit, and Maureen Delaney, with her quarreling, humorous backstairs commentary—they seem all there with the exception of Barry Fitzgerald. He is one who has remained in Hollywood from the several cinema assignments given various members of the company on the West Coast since they first came here. Fitzgerald, with his vagrant mustaches and professional ability to tip a whisky glass ineptly, probably will be lost to Dublin and its one permanent theater since his memorable performance of the tipsy Fluther in the movie of "The Plough and the Stars."

Symphony Books Its Three Tours

Three tours, through 28 cities in the Middle West and South, are planned for the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra in its new season. The full ensemble of 90 players, under the direction of Vladimir Golschmann, will make the journeys, over routes familiar in the last several years.

The first tour begins Jan. 18, with a concert at Springfield, Ill., and continues through Jan. 23, with stops in Indianapolis and Fort Wayne, Ind.; Toledo and Columbus, O., and Terre Haute, Ind.

On its second tour, the orchestra goes first to Chicago for an appearance on Sunday afternoon, Feb. 13, then to Urbana and Peoria, Ill.; Iowa City, Davenport, Cedar Rapids, Ames and Des Moines, Ia., and finishes up at Columbia, Mo., on Feb. 21. The final tour is through the South, with Nashville the first stop on March 28, then Birmingham, Ala.; Atlanta and Savannah, Ga.; Montevallo and Montgomery, Ala.; New Orleans, Houston, Austin, San Angelo, Dallas and Denton, Tex., and finally Memphis on April 9.

Shady Oak Plays First Foreign Film

INAUGURATING a new foreign film policy at the Shady Oak Theater in Clayton, the British picture, "Nine Days a Queen," starring Sir Cedric Hardwicke and Nova Pilbeam, opens a week's engagement there tomorrow night. Performances are at 8:30 o'clock in the evening, with 2:30 matinees on Wednesday and Sunday.

Reserved seats at a 55-cent and 75-cent price scale, a troupe of usherettes to guide patrons to them and the name of "Shady Oak Cinema" are some of the features accompanying the new order at the neighborhood house. Booked to follow "Nine Days a Queen" a week from tomorrow night is the British musical "Forever Yours," starring Benjamin Gigli, one-time tenor star of Metropolitan Opera, with Joan Gardner and Hugh Wakefield.

"Nine Days a Queen," which arrives in St. Louis a year late by virtue of the hesitancy of larger theaters to play it, presents the tragic story of Lady Jane Grey, 17-year-old victim of court intrigues in the Tudor period in England. The role is taken by Miss Pilbeam, herself now 17 years old. Hardwicke plays John Dudley, Earl of Warwick, who became Duke of Northumberland. Warwick, as he is commonly known, was the master plotter of the period and the man most responsible for Jane's execution by Mary Tudor, the famous "Bloody Mary" of history.

The film has achieved most recognition for its straightforward presentation of history, with little deviation from fact. It opens in the last days of Henry VIII's reign and outlines the succession stipulated by that famous monarch on his deathbed—that his consumptive son, Edward VI, still in his teens, is to follow him, with Mary Tudor next in line, then Elizabeth and Lady Jane Grey, little second cousin of Edward.

Henry dies, there is a mad scramble among the nobles to become Lord Protector of the boy King and Edward Seymour wins out. But his brother, Thomas Seymour, reasons that the King will soon die, that Mary, a Catholic, and Elizabeth, regarded as illegitimate, will never be permitted on the throne. He chooses his own candidate, Lady Jane Grey, takes her up to London from her country home and begins her instruction in court etiquette and state politics.

WARWICK has remained in the background to let the Seymours fight it out. When Edward Seymour has Thomas beheaded, Warwick deposes him and becomes Lord Protector. Then Warwick sets about to have Lady Jane marry his young son, Lord Guildford Dudley, in order to have his own line succeed to the throne. The two are married and out of mutual fear of Warwick, place their trust in each other.

The boy King, the same who is the Prince in Mark Twain's "The Prince and the Pauper," is induced to declare Lady Jane his successor. He dies and much against her wishes, Lady Jane takes the throne. But Mary Tudor's army is gathering and within two weeks is victorious over Warwick's followers. Jane is arrested and with her husband and father, goes to the execution block, a lovely and innocent pawn in the game of statesmanship.

Of the principal characters in the play, nearly all have been seen on St. Louis screens at one time or another in recent years. Miss Pilbeam, who is the daughter of Arthur Pilbeam, British actor-director-manager, was seen in "Little Friend" and "The Man Who Knew Too Much." Hardwicke has played in "Les Miserables," "Becky Sharp," "Nell Gwyn" and was the Bishop in the Hollywood version of "Green Light."

Desmond Tester, who takes the role of the little King, Edward VI, was Sylvia Sidney's brother, the boy who carried the bomb, in a highly melodramatic episode of "The Woman Alone." John Mills, the young Lord Dudley of "Nine Days a Queen," was sailor hero of "Born for Glory" some years ago at the Ambassador.

Also of note is Gwen Ffrangcon-Davies ("Frang-son Day-vees") as Mary Tudor. Miss Ffrangcon-Davies, one of Great Britain's most distinguished stage actresses, created the role of Elizabeth Barrett in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," ahead of Katherine Cornell or Norma Shearer. Dame Sybil Thorndike, famous on Broadway as well as in London, plays nurse to Lady Jane. Others in the cast are Frank Cellier as Henry VIII; Leslie Perrins, Felix Aylmer, Miles Malleson and Martita Hunt. Robert Stevenson directed.

Little Theater Gain

Little Theater subscriptions have reached 950, with one sold-out house in addition to that, according to totals of a second report meeting Friday night. The number is about 50 per cent in advance of subscriptions for a similar period in last year's campaign.

The campaign ends Oct. 19 and the first play of the season, a revival of W. Somerset Maugham's "The Circle," opens on Thursday, Oct. 28, for a two weeks' run. More than 75 persons have applied for instruction in stagecraft classes to be conducted by Gordon Carter, scenic designer for the Little Theater.

Supernatural Sport at Loew's

By Colvin McPherson

GHOST pictures, the theater men tell us, have never gone over very big with the public—not even the best of them. And although all exhibitors from Hollywood to points East have been howling with delight at the hi-jinks of a new comedy called "Topper" for some months, they have been a bit nervous about it all.

Constance Bennett and Cary Grant as the roistering wraiths were colossal, Roland Young as their timid victim was terrific and Alan Mowbray, Eugene Pallette, Billie Burke, Arthur Lake—did you ever see anything like it? Personally, at the preview, I hadn't, and so went back to look at 'Topper" again, at Loew's last Thursday. It is a pleasure to report that the audience does enjoy it, does laugh at it and take it all in fun.

Perhaps this is due to the unfailing sense of humor that goes with any Hal Roach production, perhaps the original Thorne Smith novel from which "Topper" is taken should be credited with the victory, and anybody can see that Connie Bennett, Grant and Roland Young gave their best. "Topper" is as clever as "The Ghost Goes West," but it's not too clever and it has a lot of the stuff that went into the best farces of the "Thin Man" type.

Cary and Constance are a pair of whoop-it-uppers who smack their expensive auto into a tree and take leave of life in an altogether nonchalant fashion. But as their shadows consider the situation, they don't have sufficient good marks to pass the pearly gates. Some noble deed must be done. In characteristic style, they decide the thing to do would be to teach Young, a most inhibited husband and banker, how to paint the town red.

That's all the picture is about, how two gay people get Mr. Young into a lot of scrapes and out of a lot of scrapes and turn his world topsy-turvy. Grant and Bennett have the perfect mood for the adventure and, just by way of a suggestion to Hollywood, make a dandy duet on barroom ballads. Trick photography, permitting tires to change themselves or dainty underthings to flutter about with no one inside, composes a great deal of pleasant, tomfoolery, worth anybody's time.

"Topper" should be seen ahead of "Between Two Women," which is on the same program, for "Between Two Women" takes its bonebreak and blood transfusion altogether too seriously to give "Topper" best opportunity. The second film, featuring Franchot Tone as a doctor, Virginia Bruce as his pleasure-loving wife and Maureen O'Sullivan as a nurse, is one of those things in which every time Virginia wants to go places with Franchot he's wanted in surgery. And since Maureen is always in surgery, that causes trouble.

Despite its plot disadvantages, "Between Two Women" has been put together intelligently and directed well. The story wanders away after a while and the ending is altogether too prolonged for good effect. A little amputation there would have been a pleasure for us all.

Lancer Spy.

SEVERAL things give "Lancer Spy" an edge as entertainment this week at the Ambassador. A new leading man, George Sanders, who was a first-class scoundrel in "Lloyds of London," takes the title role. He encounters, on his dangerous mission into Germany during the World War, a beautiful enemy, Dolores del Rio, and whatever Miss del Rio is as an actress, she still is a very pleasant subject for the camera. Then there are shining small performances by Peter Lorre, Maurice Moscovich, Joseph Schildkraut and Lionel Atwill. Finally, there is smooth and amusing direction by Gregory Ratoff and occasional dialogue that argues directly to the point in today's international affairs.

The picture opens with a speech about "international marauders" and leaps right into battle, the capture of German prisoners and the discovery that a German officer is the image of an English officer on naval patrol duty. The British espionage system gets an idea and sets to work to make a substitution. So George Sanders goes to Germany in place of himself and begins collecting information on the Big Push that the Germans have in mind. From there on, melodrama, an automobile chase to the Swiss border and escape, at a price.

Sanders' work is of the best, although it would be foolish to predict what his course in future films will be. Joseph Schildkraut races through the role of Prince Ferdi zu Schwarzwald, which ought to make some Teutonic ears burn by its caricature, Moscovich is great as General von Meinhardi and Lorre does the best he can with only a few things to do.

If there is such a thing as bad taste in borrowing in an industry where borrowing is an established practice and ideas go in cycles, then "Danger—Love at Work," the Ambassador's second film, is something on which Hollywood should frown darkly. Not only is the film about the crazy kind of family that exists in the stage play, "You Can't Take It With You," but some of the lines bear close similarity.

Now a household of zanies existing for the public amusement is nothing new and there's nothing to prevent Twentieth Century-Fox from doing a picture on that plan, either before or after Columbia brings you "You Can't Take It With You" to the screen. The bad taste lies in using a Class A idea in a Class B picture before the Class A version has a chance to amuse the public. Only one comfort may be taken. "Danger—Love at Work" probably won't be circulated widely enough to do "You Can't Take It With You" a great deal of harm.

That Certain Woman.

THAT Bette Davis is an emotional actress of great ability, that she does sunken and sodden and mistreated females exceptionally well, that she deserves strong screen plays for her hard work will surely not be denied by anyone who goes to pictures even occasionally. The point is, how often does she get a really good play? Or, putting it differently, isn't she overplayed?

"That Certain Woman," at the Fox, starts out in good style, but ends up on the most annoying tremolo of mother love we have had this year. Incidentally, "That Certain Woman" is no stranger. She was "The Trespasser" in 1929 and was listed in about the same spot among movies of the week of Oct. 21 that year. Edmund Goulding wrote and directed both times. One cannot help admiring his treatment of the idea. Dialogue is good, continuity is convincing, acting is superior in every instance.

For those who forget, the plot takes up the life of a gunman's widow, how she studied in night school, went to work for a big lawyer and what bad luck she had with men even after that. Fonda is the rich boy and father of the baby, Ian Hunter the understanding attorney and loving protector. So many scenes are filled with crisp realism and good sense that one wishes Mr. Goulding hadn't gone in deeper water, as an author, than he could swim, as a director.

But when he comes smack up against the issue of mother love vs. the right thing, he has to turn all the stops on and let Bette emote all over a 12-room apartment. She suffers gorgeously but she suffers too much. Audience emotions can't stand such a marathon.

The weekly concession to the double-bill customers is "Public Wedding," a much-frayed affair in which Jane Wyman cuts loose from her dishonest carnival friends to marry William Hopper, an artist, and make him famous. Hopper, son of the famous DeWolf and Hedda Hopper, is disappointing in a romantic role.

An excellent survey of the background of the war in China and the conflict itself is the main subject of the "March of Time" issue on the same program. Local shots of high school football teams and processions attending the consecration of Bishop Paul Schulte are in the regular news-reel.

Removed to the Missouri for the week are the Ritz Brothers in "Life Begins in College," a football musical of much merriment. Guy Kibbee in "The Big Shot" is another feature of the same program.

Mummers Repeat Spring Comedy at Alhambra Grotto

THREE performances of "Gentlemen Wear Gloves," comedy presented by the Mummers last spring at the Wednesday Club, will be given by the same group at Alhambra Grotto, 2626 South Grand boulevard, on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday nights of this week, under sponsorship of the Wardens' and Masters' Clubs, for the benefit of the Masonic Home Building Fund.

The play, translated from the German of Paul Vulpius by John Coman, has been acted in New York and by various Federal Theater units over the country. Its main character is Christopher Stringer, young unemployed Swiss hotel man who comes to America, bluffs his way into a Wall Street office and, by concoction of a mysterious "Kubinsiki affair," makes a permanent place for himself in the financial world.

With Williard H. Holland, director of the Mummers, in the title role, the cast is largely that which appeared last May. Members are Fred Birkicht, Jane Garrett, Angeline Mueller, Al Hohengarten, Frank Novotny, Victor Zuzenak, Robert Davis, Ralph Johanning, Jack Bieger, Lillian Byrd, Genevieve Albers, Wesley Gore, Leland Brewer and Mae Novotny.

The Mummers' first play in their regular season will be Thomas Lanier Williams' "Fugitive Kind," which arrives at the Wednesday Club on Nov. 18. The play is an entirely new one which Williams, former Washington University student and now at the University of Iowa, wrote for the Mummers.

Another original is in the repertory of the group for the new season. This is "Tomorrow We Live," by Robert Hahnel, which deals with a phase of group medicine. The Mummers also are negotiating for a London comedy, "Heroes Don't Care,' which one of their members saw there and which has not been done in this country.

Building Exhibit at Fox

A collection of 35 photographs of modern buildings in all parts of the world, with floor plans, has been placed on display in the Fox Theater lobby. Included are apartment houses, low cost housing developments, factories, theaters, churches and other buildings, all examples of the modern style. The exhibit, organized by the Museum of Modern Art in New York, will remain throughout October.

Comedy Hit To American On Oct. 24

AN unexpected entry for the week of Oct. 24 at the American Theater, "Yes, My Darling Daughter," comedy by Mark Reed, is now definitely set for that date. The time was given originally to "You Can't Take It With You" but the latter comedy has been going at a fast clip in Chicago and will not come to St. Louis until Chicago is ready to give it up.

The cast of "Yes, My Darling Daughter," organized for the road and now in Detroit, is headed by Florence Reed, noted dramatic star of "The Shanghai Gesture" and "Mourning Becomes Electra" and supporting player in Katharine Cornell's "Romeo and Juliet." Opposite Miss Reed is the English comedian, Lawrence Grossmith, Agnes Doyle is Miss Reed's "darling daughter," Owen Davis Jr., formerly in stock in St. Louis and lately in the movies, is Miss Doyle's young man and Helen Flint, of the movies, Boyd Davis and Janice Hanforth are others in the cast.

The Broadway version of "Yes, My Darling Daughter" is now in its ninth month and continuing as a hit. By the author of "Petticoat Fever," it depicts a situation in which a banker's daughter, learning that her sweetheart is about to depart for Europe to be gone two years, decides to spend the week-end with him. Her mother is shocked at the idea and opposes it strongly until the daughter digs up a flaming affair that the mother, a leader in feminist campaigns, had in her youth.

The play is a production of Alfred de Liagre Jr., one of Broadway's most successful younger managers. Sets were designed by Raymond Sovey of Municipal Opera and Broadway.

"Tobacco Road," opening next Sunday night, will precede "Yes, My Darling Daughter" and Manager Paul Beisman of the American has spent the last week in the East trying to work out a continuous or nearly continuous procession of plays afterward. As things now stand, the revival of "A Doll's House," with Ruth Gordon, Dennis King and Sam Jaffe, arrives Nov. 8, Charlotte Greenwood in "Leaning on Letty" Nov. 14, "The Women" on Nov. 28, and the Fredric March-Florence Eldredge play, "Christian Hero" on Dec. 6.

"Tobacco Road," on its farewell coast-to-coast tour, has a new Jeeter Lester in John Barton but retains many of the players seen here last season. This will be the third engagement of Jack Kirkland's history-making play of the southern share-croppers and the fifth week it has been presented in St. Louis.

IN NEW YORK, "Tobacco Road" continues steadily and on next Dec. 4 will start the fifth year of its continuous run, a record equaled only by "Abie's Irish Rose" in the entire history of the American theater. It has been presented in 137 cities throughout the country. The company to be seen here is the only one on tour and has been seen earlier this season in Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Newark and Columbus, O.

Based on Erskine Caldwell's factual story of the penniless share-croppers of the back country of Georgia, "Tobacco Road" takes a typical family of tenant farmers and shows the humor and the drama in the daily lives of these forgotten people, who know only sex and religion and who dwell content in squalor and poverty.

The new Jeeter Lester is familiar to vaudeville audiences through his headline comedy act, "Canal Boat Sal," in which he appeared for seasons. An uncle of James Barton, who has played the same role in New York for more than 1000 times, John Barton was inspired to play the part by his nephew's success.

Florence Gerald will be seen again as Ada, the wife, too apathetic to desire anything but "a stylish dress to be buried in." Other familiar players will be Pitt Herbert as Dude, William Bishop as Lov, Lillian Ardell as the grandmother, Dick Lee as Henry Peabody, Rhett Townes and Walter Ayers. Newcomers to the cast this season are Lonnie Nace as Sister Bessie Rice, the evangelist, Kay Thorne as Ellie May of the slit-lip and Sondra Johnson as Pearl, the child-wife.

Jewish Film Showings

"Love and Sacrifice," a Jewish sound film, will be shown in Assembly Hall No. 1 at the Auditorium, at 7 o'clock and 9 o'clock tonight, as the first of a series of such pictures. The feature describes modern Jewish life and the devotion of a mother to her family. Lazar Freed, Rose Greenfield and Leibelle Waldman are principal players. English sub-titles accompany the dialogue.

SYLVIA CLARK, NBC MONOLOGIST, SINGER AND COMEDIENNE, WHO PLAYS IN KSD'S SATURDAY NIGHT JAMBOREE. BORN IN JAFFA, PALESTINE, SHE CAME TO THIS COUNTRY WHEN A YEAR OLD, AND EVENTUALLY MADE A NAME FOR HERSELF IN VAUDEVILLE AND AS AN INGENUE ON BROADWAY.

Ultra Short Wave Transmitter Built For Station KSD

BROADCASTING by KSD from points to which it is impracticable to string wire circuits is expected to be facilitated by use of a new portable ultra short wave transmitter which has just been completed in the station's engineering department.

The transmitter, which fits into a leather carrying case measuring only 14 by 14 by 10 inches and weighs about 32 pounds, has an output of three to five watts. Batteries for lighting the tube filaments and furnishing current for the plate and screen circuits fit into the case. On top of the case are two ingenious telescoping aerials, which can be set at any angle desired and extended or contracted to suit transmitting conditions. In the front of the transmitter panel is a jack into which a portable crystal microphone can be plugged. This microphone has a cord sufficiently long to give an announcer considerable latitude in wandering with it through a crowd.

The transmitter can be operated on several of the wave lengths assigned to KSD for ultra short wave experimentation, including 31,100, 34,600, 37,600 and 41,100 kilocycles. For a broadcast from the National Horse Show, and in tests since, it has been worked on the 37,600 kc. (37.6 megacycles) frequency.

The effective broadcasting range of the transmitter is any distance up to about a mile. When operating the transmitter, the engineers set up within its transmitting range a portable ultra short wave receiving set, which is connected to an amplifier which, in turn, is hooked to a wire circuit running to KSD's studios. Whatever the microphone plugged into the transmitter picks up is broadcast on the ultra short wave frequency by the little transmitter. The radiations are picked up by the short wave receiver and go over the wires to the KSD studios and on to the big transmitter on the roof of the Post-Dispatch building for broadcasting on the station's frequency of 550 kilocycles.

The portable transmitter was built by Joseph Volk, of KSD's engineering staff.

SOUTH SIDE SCOUTS HOLD RALLY IN PARK

The annual rally of the South District was held yesterday at Tower Grove Park with 25 boy scout troops participating in a field day of camping and scouting activities. The rally, sponsored by the South Side Kiwanis Club, was brought to a close with a campfire during which award certificates were presented to the winners of competitive events.

The actual awards will be formally presented to the winners at a dinner and get-together Tuesday evening at St. Paul's Evangelical Church, Potomac street and Giles avenue. Plans for the district's participation in the December Merit Badge Show and the Council's achievement program will also be discussed.

Field commissioners, troop committeemen, and scoutmasters from every local scout unit will be guests of the St. Louis Council, Boy Scouts of America, at a dinner Tuesday evening, Oct. 19, at Pilgrim Congregational Church. Campaign plans for the sale of tickets to the Merit Badge Show will be formulated during the meeting.

A training course in scout leadership will be offered to troop committeemen beginning Monday evening, Oct. 25, at Elias Michael School. Streamers will be awarded to those troops whose committeemen complete the course. A course in the elements of cubbing, intended for Den Mothers, will open tomorrow at 9:30 a. m. in the bridge room of Stix, Baer & Fuller.

Troop Notes.

Courts of Honor were held last week by Troop 175, Wagner Place Methodist Episcopal Church, and Troop 333, Lyndover School, Maplewood.

J. V. "Pop" Allison has been appointed Rover Master for Rover Crew No. 1, West District's Order of the Blue Ox. A similar service group will be organized in Midland District with Cecil Kirk, scoutmaster of Troop 347, as its leader.

The Second United Presbyterian Church, Forest Park and Grand boulevards, has authorized the organization of a neighborhood scout troop under its sponsorship.

Troop 305, sponsored by Webster Groves' DeMolay order, will hold its annual banquet at Lion's Den Saturday evening.

Troop 214, Fremont School, will present its first Eagle award at a Court of Honor Oct. 29.

Girl Scouts.

The national convention of the Girl Scouts of America will open tomorrow at Savannah, Ga., and will continue through Friday. Mrs. Herbert Hoover, national president, will open the convention, and plans for the further development of the girl scout program will then be formulated. A group of St. Louis girl scout leaders plans to attend.

The Golden Eaglet award, the highest honor of the girl scout organization, will be presented to Ruth Thym and Lenore Bertram of Troop 35, Horace Mann School, this afternoon at Park Hammer Estate, near Pevely, Mo.

A series of general discussions and round table sessions will be sponsored this month by the St. Louis Girl Scout Council for the purpose of developing a better understanding of the scouting program among adult leaders. A city-wide meeting and tea is planned for Nov. 1 at St. John's Methodist Episcopal Church, Kingshighway and Washington boulevards.

The annual dog show of Troop 74 will be held Oct. 21 at 8 p. m. at St. Stephen's School, 3939 Wilmington avenue.

Hitler and Army; It Isn't Likely To Turn on Him

Some Germans Hope Reichswehr General Will Depose Nazi, But Aims of the Two Run Parallel.

Reprinted From Living Age.

EVER since Adolf Hitler came into power in Germany it has been rumored that he governed by the sufferance of the Reichswehr, and that in their good time the Army leaders would oust him and restore the monarchy or set up a military dictatorship. This is the so-called 'Reichswehr myth.' Nurtured mainly by the opponents of the present German regime, it is based upon a boundless faith in the will and ability of the high Prussian soldiers some day to put an end to the Brown Dictatorship. The book, "I Cannot Keep Silent," which appeared a year ago, expresses this pious hope of German salvation by the Reichswehr.

More recently another book, entitled "The Hitler Myth," likewise foresees the creation of a new German Reich through the intervention of the Army.

It is obvious that a devout and hopeful respect for the Prussian generals is still deeply rooted even in the former German Left and Center. The hope that the National Socialist Party dictatorship will be terminated by the Reichswehr really springs from a deep spiritual and moral resignation on the part of the elements that are secretly opposed to National Socialism.

Waiting for Savior in Uniform.

There is an inextinguishable belief among Germans in a 'Savior' who with one stroke will erase the difficulties of the present and bring in the millennium. This "Savior" is invariably endowed with a uniform. Twelve years ago the aged Field Marshal von Hindenburg was placed at the head of the Reich in the hope that he would "save" it; a few years later Bruning, the "front-line lieutenant," was supposed to be the "Savior"; then the ecstatic hopes of the people turned toward the "unknown corporal," Adolf Hitler. And today the hopes of the disappointed are directed toward an unknown Reichswehr general who is expected some day to liberate the German people overnight from the burdens of the totalitarian state.

This belief in a Reichswehr myth, which is widespread in Europe, is based on a twofold error. It neglects the fact that National Socialism is the offspring of the Prussian military spirit and it fails to recognize that the National Socialist party and the German

By SAMUEL J. SHELTON
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Oct. 9.

ELECTRIC power produced at the Tennessee Valley Authority's great dams where the Government has harnessed the rushing rivers of the Tennessee Valley was so distributed in the last fiscal year that only 11.3 per cent, just a bit more than a tenth, reached the consuming public at the low retail rates established by T V A.

In the year that ended last July 1 the T V A, utilizing in part facilities which have cost the Government more than $300,000,000, sold 731,587,192 kilowatt hours of electricity, for which it received gross revenue of $1,629,941. The "net income" out of this, as shown on the books, was $768,363, but this requires explanation and will be dealt with later.

It should be explained here that the T V A plan for "integrated development" of the Tennessee Valley is far from complete, although now ready to produce a vast amount of electricity, and that the enterprise on the scale to which Congress seemingly is committed may call for another $300,000,000 from the Treasury. Only half of the cost up to this time is chargeable to T V A, as the Government had spent approximately $150,000,000 on Wilson Dam, Muscle Shoals nitrate plants and other projects on the Tennessee River before creation of T V A by Congress in 1933 as an early phase of President Roosevelt's New Deal.

Alluring Promises—Munitions, Cheap Electricity and Fertilizer.

Munitions for national defense, cheap fertilizer for the farms of the United States and cheap electricity were the alluring phrases on which the program was based. There were other considerations—flood control, navigation, soil conservation, and "economic and social welfare" of the people of the area—all fitted into the picture which T V A has sketched on the background of utilization of natural resources.

When President Roosevelt took office in 1933, the Government already had constructed Wilson Dam, two nitrate plants and a steam power plant at Muscle Shoals and had commenced work on navigation locks for the projected Wheeler Dam on the Tennessee River above Wilson Dam. The War Department in 1930 had given Congress a comprehensive plan for dams, locks and power plants on the Tennessee River and tributaries, and had reported that electricity generated at Wilson Dam could be delivered as far away as St.Louis, about 300 miles, at "tempting prices."

This fitted into Roosevelt's campaign promises of lower electric rates and better regulation of public utilities, so he asked Congress at the 1933 special session to create a Federal corporation to be known as Tennessee Valley Authority to carry out the plan. The President had held out in campaign addresses the promise that public ownership of electric generating and distributing facilities would establish a "yardstick" which would "in most cases guarantee good service and low rates."

Roosevelt's 'Birch Rod' And Other Speeches on Subject.

"I might call the right of the people to own and operate their own utility a 'birch rod' in the cupboard to be taken out and used only when the child gets beyond the point where a mere scolding does any good," Roosevelt said at Portland, Ore., in the 1932 campaign.

Further defining his purpose to bring about wider distribution of electricity at lower cost, he said:

"The water power of the State should belong to all the people. The title to this power must rest forever in the people. No commission—not even the Legislature itself—has any right to give for any consideration whatever a single potential kilowatt in virtual perpetuity to any person or corporation whatever. It is the duty of our representative bodies to see that this power is transferred into usable electrical energy and distributed at the lowest possible cost. It is our power, and no inordinate profits must be allowed to those who act as the people's agent in bringing their power to their homes and workshops."

In proposing to Congress the establishment of T V A, President Roosevelt said: "It should be charged with the broadest duty of planning for the proper use, conservation and development of the natural resources of the Tennessee River drainage basin and its adjoining territory for the general social and economic welfare of the nation."

In his book, "On Our Way," published in 1934, President Roosevelt wrote:

"By controlling every river and creek and rivulet in this vast watershed (that of the Tennessee River and tributaries), and by planning for a highly civilized use of the land by the population of the whole area, we believed that we could make a lasting contribution to American life."

In a statement on the scope and purpose of a power-pooling conference called by him last September, the President said:

"The public interest demands that the power that is being or soon will be generated by the Tennessee Valley Authority and at the Bonneville Dam and other public works projects should be made to serve the greatest number of people at the lowest cost."

T V A is now in its fifth year of operation, and in the light of promises held out, its stockholders—the people of the United States—may properly inquire into its performance. What is published here is from official records and from interviews and investigations by the writer. In this inquiry the T V A official staff at Knoxville headquarters freely made available such books and records as were desired.

Results of electric power operation of T V A are of particular interest, first because this was expected to be a source of broad public benefits, and second, because the sale of electricity is the only means from which there is any hope of direct return to the Treasury, and so to the people, of any part of the huge investment of public funds.

Hope of full repayment in 50 years of the whole cost of T V A was held out by David E. Lilienthal, one of T V A's three directors, in a statement before the House subcommittee on appropriations at a hearing in 1936. Lilienthal was supporting a request for more money to build transmission lines.

"If you think you will recover the entire cost of this project through the sale of electrical energy you are the greatest optimist I have ever seen," said the committee chairman, the late Representative James P. Buchanan of Texas.

"Show us in as concise language as you can where we will get the money," said Representative Edward T. Taylor of Colorado, now chairman of the appropriations committee.

Director Lilienthal then submitted his figures, saying: "Obviously these are estimates running into the future; I am sure the committee realizes they are estimates."

Production of Electricity And Its Sale Analyzed.

Since then, T V A has completed its fourth full year of operation, with its construction program still under way. It has had available, however, large amounts of electricity for sale, and it is possible to analyze the results of this phase of its operation.

As stated earlier in this article, only 11.3 per cent of the production reached consumers at the low retail rates established by T V A. This was that part distributed by municipalities, co-operative associations and directly by T V A to temporary rural customers—a volume of 82,584,787 kilowatt hours out of the total distribution of 731,587,192 kilowatt hours.

By far the greater part—70.2 per cent, or 514,067,237 kilowatt hours—was distributed to consumers by private utility corporations which purchased it wholesale from T V A at a very low rate and then resold it at their own rates which are substantially higher than the T V A retail rates. The average wholesale price paid by these private utilities for the large block which they distributed was just about one-fourth of the average unit price which T V A received from the municipalities and co-operatives. In the one case it was 1.41 mills a kilowatt hour and in the other 5.53 mills. The wholesale rate schedules were the same, but the larger volume taken by the corporations enabled them to get a greater proportion at the lowest rates allowed for quantity purchases.

TVA's Sales to Itself And to Other Customers.

Next in size was T V A's sale of power to itself—that is, to other departments of the big enterprise for use in construction, operation of navigation locks, and other purposes. This was 17.7 per cent of the total, or 129,387,168 kilowatt hours, for which $410,242 was charged at the average rate of 3.17 mills a kilowatt hour. This item has little bearing in the taxpayer's appraisal of the success or failure of his big power business.

Less than one per cent—5,548,000 kilowatt hours for $19,418—was sold by T V A direct to commercial and industrial customers. Here the average rate was 3.5 mills; but in the current fiscal year, and in future, sales of this class will be much more important, as will be shown later in this article.

How widely diffused are the public benefits of this cheap electricity, is one of the questions the citizen-stockholder may ask—a question partly answered by the foregoing record of quantity distribution through various avenues. The greatest direct benefits accrue, of course, to the customers served by municipalities and co-operative associations, for there T V A so far has been able to fix the retail price, under the terms of the contracts by which the municipalities and co-operatives buy the power, since this condition is agreeable to those purchasers.

At present these distributing agencies are serving about 34,000 customers. Sixteen municipalities are distributing T V A electricity to the public, and 14 co-operative associations, some covering a whole county, are similarly

Briton Describes Plight of Southern Share Croppers

By Sir John Harris
Secretary of the Anti-Slavery and Aborigines Protection Society.

TENNESSEE, September.

I WAS recently invited to join a group of experts in Negro affairs on a journey of nearly 2000 miles through the cotton fields of the South. We numbered five persons, including Dr. Johnson, a Negro statistician, better known to the British public as the American member of the Liberian Commission appointed by the President of the United States, but we did not always work together—indeed, I began in other districts—and were joined by "experts" at various points.

The cotton belt stretches roughly 1600 miles, from the Carolinas to Western Texas, and away south to the Mississippi in the form of a gigantic crescent embracing ten states. In this vast area we saw evidence of the approaching harvest, which may exceed 15,000,000 bales.

Cheerful in Spite of Rags.

In the Carolinas and Kentucky the boll had only just begun to open, but farther south, in Alabama, the pickers were everywhere busy filling with extraordinary zest the landlords' sacks, whilst all along the roadway of Alabama our car jostled with lorries laden with freshly picked cotton and the air was heavily scented with the warm odor of newly ginned seed.

In the fields Negro men and women looked gay in their patched cotton gowns, and the men were cheerful in spite of their ragged trousers and outworn Mexican straw hats. One family hoped to pick 550 pounds—the man 200 pounds, his wife 150 pounds and his two daughters 100 pounds each.

What is this system which still holds the

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

A "Blood-Curdling Cartoon."

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

THE lurid cartoon on the editorial page of the Post-Dispatch for Oct. 6, depicting a bloodthirsty monster stalking through a devastated land, spreading death, destruction and terror among unarmed men, women and children, is unworthy of a newspaper which professes devotion to the cause of peace. This picture is strangely similar to the type of propaganda posters which, during the World War period, were used to arouse the American people to a frenzy of hatred and passion which prepared them psychologically to plunge into the madness of war. The only difference is that then it was the "terrible Hun" who was pictured as the fiend of destruction. Now it is a three-headed ogre.

If the net result of the "war to end war" and to "make the world safe for democracy" was to replace the ravaging "Hun" by an even more horrible three-headed monster, isn't it time we learned the lesson that America cannot truly and permanently promote the cause of peace and democracy by taking sides in the wars of Europe or Asia?

It is true enough that a major war anywhere in the world will have serious economic repercussions in America. It is also true that the United States will have difficulty in staying out of another world war—especially if the President continues to ignore the neutrality law whose purpose is to keep us out. In this sense, President Roosevelt may be right when he says: "Let no one imagine America will escape." But to combine this statement with a blood-curdling cartoon in such a way as to imply that America is in imminent peril of invasion is utterly misleading and vicious. However great a menace certain nations may be to their European or Asiatic neighbors, the idea that they are powerful enough to conquer all the rest of the world and then attack America is fantastic. F. WARNER FISCHER.

P. R. in Action.

JOHN T. FLYNN writes in Collier's: "No citizen of any American city, no leader of public thought in any American city, can afford to be ignorant of what Cincinnati has done for herself. No matter how busted any city or village is, it ought to make as its first expenditure an appropriation for an expedition of citizens to this Ohio city to see for themselves and at first hand the achievements."

The only difference between Kansas City and Cincinnati is the proportional representation method of elections. Cincinnati and New York City are holding P. R. elections Nov. 2 and the count will take a week.

Could not the Aldermen sponsor an expedition (including the entire Election Board) to study Cincinnati at its Cincinnatiest—during its P. R. election, and also New York's first P. R. election?

Picturesque Names of Missouri Towns.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

YOUR editorial on the discontinuance of the Enough postoffice is good enough, but not early enough. Too many picturesque names have already gone by the board. Adam and Eve are no longer with us in Missouri. Energy departed long ago, as did Reform. There followed into the discard Eye and Sunlight, as well as Restful, Useful, Welcome, Goodnight. Though Bullion and Ore disappeared some time ago and Gold became Tintown in local usage, we kept Pay Down until recently. Nirvana, which is scarcely remembered, may not have been worth keeping, but Needmore, Pulltight and Turnback added a flavor we hate to miss.

We used to have Sereno, but lately have had Racket. Competition seems to flourish, with its consolidated school and a federated church nearby. There is a Half Way between Fair Play and Prosperine, while Fairdealing is mere irony. Tradition has it that when a pioneer traveler found his horse had been stolen while the saddle was left, he exclaimed, with the subtle humor of the mountaineer, "Now that is fair dealing!" We never had Faith, but Hope and Charity abide to this day. Kissee Mills is not very far from Romance, and Handy is still there. Not is gone and so is Map, but why worry as long as we have Safe?

Professional Ethics ad Nauseam.

PEOPLE not only will defy a court supporting the contention that a lease, for instance, must be drawn up by a lawyer, but will unseat a Judge whose bias would tolerate such stupidity.

This would be submission to tyranny, and more people can be mustered to defeat any such action here in Missouri than all the members of the bar in the State can muster. Every reputable lawyer will align himself with the people who resent such an assumption by self-constituted arbiters, even though the latter be supported by a court decision.

It is just such instances as the Reardon case that bring into contempt not only lawyers, but the law itself. Lawyers as a body are not trusted because of the sharp practices employed by shysters. It is unfortunate that professional courtesy is of more importance than the contempt that could rid the profession of its parasites and restore confidence. E. G. C.

ON "EXECUTIVE JUSTICE."

Arthur T. Vanderbilt of Newark, N. J., newly elected president of the American Bar Association, in his first statement in that office, directs attention to a public problem of great importance. This is, to use Mr. Vanderbilt's accurately chosen words, "the unparalleled growth of our administrative tribunals and the executive justice administered by them."

The problem, as he was at pains to point out, is not a partisan one. Although government by administrative bodies has been developed as never before under the aegis of the New Deal, it went forward also under Republican administrations.

The theory behind the creation of administrative tribunals is simple. It is that in the modern world of complex problems there are many questions which Legislatures are not competent to answer because of their lack of specialized, technical knowledge. Accordingly, in the states as well as at Washington, the tendency has been to set up enforcing bodies, generally styled commissions, to which the lawmakers intrust the drafting of rules and the passing of judgments. The best-known of such agencies, the Interstate Commerce Commission, goes back to an act of Congress passed in 1887. In the half-century that has intervened, these agencies have multiplied until there are now literally hundreds of them.

Where the danger lies, as Mr. Vanderbilt indicated, is in what may be called the self-sufficiency of these commissions. After one of them is created by Congress or by a state Legislature, it becomes, as a rule, more or less of a law unto itself. To quote from the statement of the bar association president:

> In some of them, the counsel drafts rules and regulations for his commission, directs an investigation, files a complaint in the language of an outraged plaintiff, presents evidence to the commission to support the complaint, writes its opinion sustaining the complaint of his outraged plaintiff in judicial language adopted from pertinent decisions of the court of last resort, and in the event of appeal, moves heaven and earth to prevent a review of the facts.

There is involved in this condition, manifestly, something which strikes at the very heart of fair and disinterested adjudication. This is the business of having one of the parties to a suit drawing up the rules and then sitting in judgment. The situation is made worse in too many instances because those who compose the commissions and must pass these judgments live at least officially in a political atmosphere and without security of tenure.

Again, there is the fact that appeal is sometimes impossible and generally difficult. The decision of an equity or admiralty Judge is subject to review by a higher court. The rulings of the administrative bodies are as final as their members can make them; in the great proportion of cases, the losers have no course open to them except to take the consequences.

It was this very issue which Charles Evans Hughes, then Governor of New York, was dealing with in 1907, when he made the address at Elmira, N. Y., containing the frequently misapplied utterance about the Constitution being "what the Judges say it is." Matters of detail, requiring the attention of experts, are the business of the commissions, Mr. Hughes said, pointing out that the appeal of every ruling would not only make a mockery of regulation but would swamp the courts with administrative burdens from which they should be protected. But when "the constitutional right to hold property and not to be deprived of it without due process of law is involved—when there is a real judicial question—let the courts have it." Then, as Mr. Hughes went on to say, "every good citizen will stand aside and hope to see it decided fairly and with even-handed justice."

Notwithstanding the great importance of administrative tribunals in the United States, statistics compiled by the American Bar Association show that only about half the law schools which are on its approved list offer courses in administrative law. The exact figures are 95 approved law schools and 40 without courses in administrative law. The Harvard University Law School, where Prof. Felix Frankfurter occupies the James Byrne chair of administrative law, provides superior training in this field, but by and large, as Mr. Vanderbilt says, "students are leaving law school without any adequate grasp of the outstanding legal phenomenon of the century."

Some members of Congress have proposed that the United States set up a system of administrative courts, such as those in France, for the specific purpose of handling the relations between the citizen and his Government as a collection of administrative agencies. Whether that is the solution, this much is certain: here is a problem calling for the sober thinking of laymen and bench and bar and members of Congress.

O, MR. JONES!

Did Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the R F C, ever read a little book entitled "Oh, Yeah?"

He made a speech the other evening in New York in which, among other charming and comforting things about the condition of business, he said there "seems no good reason" for the decline in the stock market to have gone as far as it has.

In that little book, Mr. Jones will find quotations from a good many pillars of society prior to and after the 1929 crash, assuring the country that all was well and there was not a thing to worry about and prosperity was just around the corner.

In the light of what happened later, this book is both devastating and uproarious. Mr. Jones wouldn't want to have his predictions embalmed in a possible sequel to "Oh, Yeah?", would he?

A DISTINGUISHED HISTORIAN.

Dr. J. Franklin Jameson, who has died in Washington at the age of 78, was not a popularizer of history such as James Truslow Adams, but much of his long life was devoted to making the facts of history available to the rank and file of Americans. More than 40 years ago, when a young professor at Brown University, he conceived the idea of a "dictionary" of American history with accurate, concise and readily understandable descriptions of events, persons and places of historical significance, arranged in alphabetical order. The stout blue-backed volume of upward of 800 pages which resulted was the final authority on points of history in thousands of homes and offices and schoolrooms a generation ago.

In 1922, he was made a member of the committee of scholars which considered the possibility of a comprehensive encyclopedia of American biographical material, and from 1924 to its completion in 1936, he served as chairman of the committee of management of the resulting monumental Dictionary of American Biography.

Professional historians are deeply in debt to Dr. Jameson for his work as editor of the American Historical Review for more than 30 years, as director of historical research in the Carnegie Institution and, since 1928, as chief of manuscripts in the Library of Congress. What he could do as a historical thinker was shown by studies such as that in which he considered the Revolution as a social movement. American historical scholarship has lost a distinguishead member.

CHICAGO'S WAR ON SYPHILIS.

We salute the City of Chicago for its unprecedented assault upon the dreadful disease of syphilis and for its sundering of the ancient taboos that forbade the public mention of a plague that takes thousands of lives and causes untold suffering.

Chicago's campaign began last summer when health authorities mailed a questionnaire to half a million citizens reading as follows: "In strict confidence and at no expense to you, would you like to be given, by your own physician, a blood test for syphilis?"

Although there had been a lot of foolish talk that most people would never voluntarily undergo such a test, the response to the questionnaire was an overwhelming, thunderous chorus of "Yes." Those voting "No" were in the proportion of 1 to 30, and many of those voting "No" did so because they had been tested, or because they were certain they were free of the disease, or because they were already under treatment for it.

The next step in the campaign is to distribute 450,000 blood test coupons, authorizing the family doctor to take a blood sample without charge and send it to the Board of Health for examination. The patient's name is known only to the doctor. Already 19,621 active cases have been brought to light.

Similar experiments on a much smaller scale have resulted in discovering a surprising incidence of the disease; in one part of the South, it developed that four of every 10 Negroes examined were syphilitic. Surgeon-General Parran has estimated that, in the general population, one of every 10 is syphilitic.

If this is so—and Chicago's findings will throw authoritative light upon its accuracy—a nation-wide war on the disease must be fought.

It should be emphasized that a huge proportion of syphilitics are wholly innocent sufferers, inheriting the disease from their parents or otherwise contracting it as they might contract measles or whooping cough. Further, many who have it are quite unaware of it and will not know the truth until they are examined, or until the disease makes such shocking headway that it becomes obvious.

Syphilis is one of the few diseases for which a specific exists. When caught in time, it yields readily to treatment, though the treatment must be persistently adhered to, often over a long period.

So the first thing to do is to find out who has the disease and then to make available the means for treatment. The cost of the campaign will be great and much of it will necessarily have to be borne from public funds, but the gains—and we speak in terms of economic gains as well as in terms of human happiness—will be infinitely greater. We are now spending many millions to support syphilitics in their last stages; how much more sensible to use the preventive means at our disposal!

VIGILANTE TACTICS AT WARRENTON.

Jack Spry, organizer for a C I O union, went to Warrenton, Mo., last week to attempt unionization of workers at one of the two factories there. It was his legal right to make such an endeavor. Citizens of the town, however, took the law into their own hands to stop him. A crowd of about 100 approached Spry on the street, ordered him to leave Warrenton at once and threatened him with a beating if he returned. Spry left.

This is an indefensible outburst of vigilante tactics. It is not the way of American democracy. Warrenton citizens may be opposed to the C I O; factory workers there may prefer not to join a union. If so, such views are their privilege. But the way of democracy and fair play is open discussion and the ballot, not the use of force and threats against a spokesman for unpopular tenets.

A similar episode occurred at the same time at Chester, Ill., where another C I O organizer, Peter Faderhaugh, was forced to leave town, and other instances of such tactics are reported with increasing frequency from elsewhere over the country. These are disquieting symptoms. If Fascism ever gains a foothold in this country, it is not so likely to result from the efforts of alien missionaries as from the misguided efforts of domestic vigilante groups.

MILD DEMURRER.

At a meeting in St. Louis, a woman arose to deliver a panegyric to Benito Mussolini and, at the end of her glowing tribute, she said that, in her considered judgment, he was the greatest man to walk the earth since Jesus Christ. We offer the mild demurrer that she was a little unfair to some of the celebrities that came between, for example, Genghis Khan, Attila the Hun and Ivan the Terrible, all of whom were beautifully proficient in the high art of mass murder.

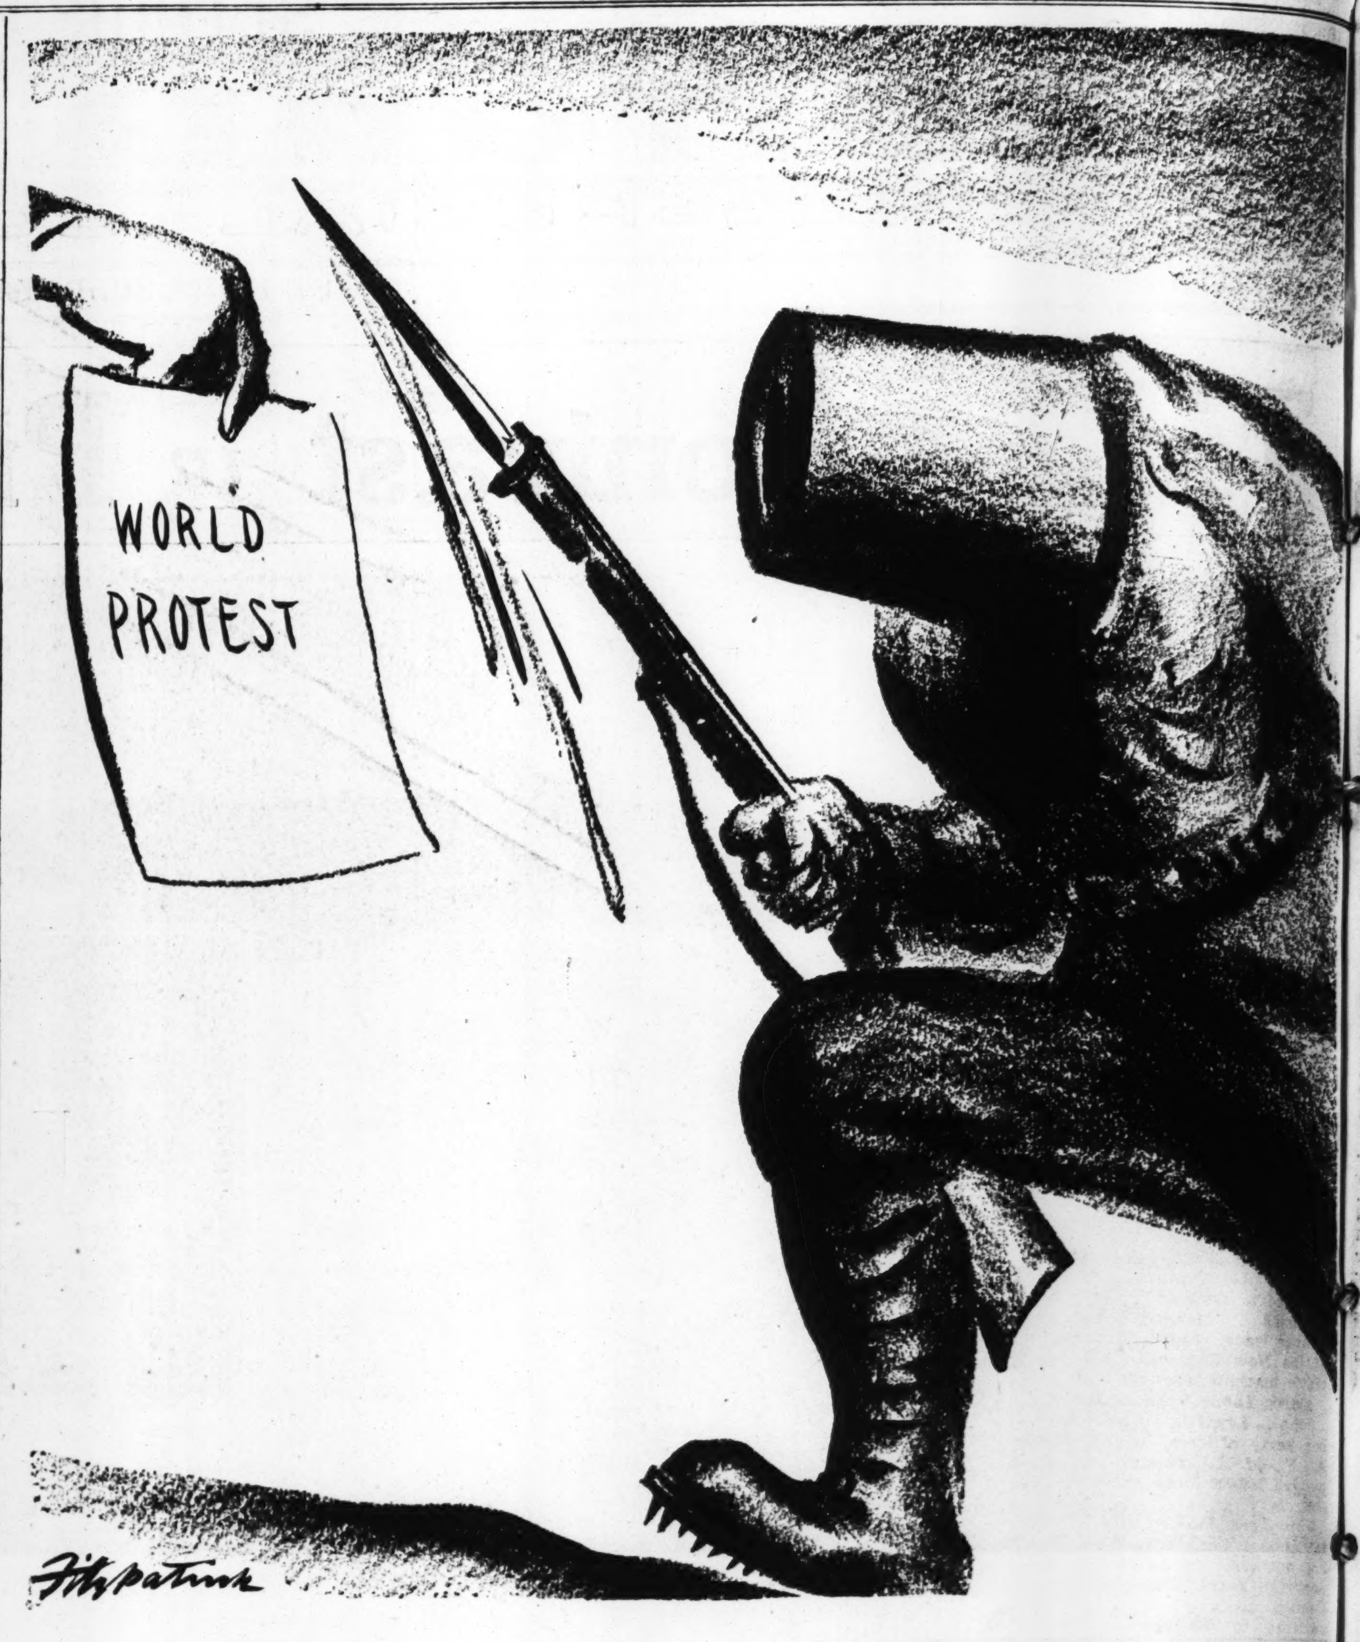
JAPAN, THE PEACE-MAKER.

It's all clear now; Japan's undeclared war on China is purely a measure of self-defense. And when the Japanese aren't busy defending themselves against their mighty opponent's onslaughts, they are seeking to cultivate friendship with the foe, so that peace and co-operation may reign over the Far East. Those are the disclosures made in Tokio's reply to the condemnations of the League and the United States.

Anyone can see that the Japanese are doing a splendid job of defending themselves. Thousands of women, children and other noncombatants in Nanking, Shanghai and elsewhere will never again engage in conspiracy or raise a hand against their well-intentioned neighbor. And the survivors of Japan's courageous self-defense measures have certainly been filled with a spirit of friendship toward the loving militarists across the Yellow Sea.

Japan wants no territory; she will, of course, give back every acre seized all unwillingly in the Northern provinces, just as she gave back Manchuria. China, not Japan, is the lawless treaty-breaker, especially of that treaty whose signers agreed to respect the sovereignty, independence and territories of China. Instead of discussing such wholly unjust proposals as taking "concerted action" against Japan, Geneva and Washington really should recommend that nation for the Nobel Peace Prize.

Now that Tokio has cleared up the matter to its own satisfaction, the work of pacification can go on. Get those bombs on board, Togo!



A NOTE FOR YOU, MISTER.

Missouri and Thomas Benton's Art

Genius at murals, a native son of the Ozarks, turns out to be an artistic prophet to whom honor is begrudged in own country; was received with open arms upon return to State, but realistic drawings in Capitol roused ire of prideful citizens; work may become "a shrine of American cultural achievement," writer says.

THOMAS HART BENTON is more than a painters: he is a social historian, anthropologist, cultural irritant and vivid exponent of the American civilization.

At present he is living in Kansas City, but his field of operations extends from the outlying regions of Missouri to the most distant corners of the West. In Kansas City, he teaches painting at the Art Institute, opens his house to young artists, consorts with politicians, and argues publicly over the rights and duties of the artist in modern society.

Benton returned to Missouri in the spring of 1935, after a career of more than 20 years in New York, where he had succeeded in making himself the most conspicuous and controversial of American artists. His return to his native State was the logical consequence of his determination to cast his lot with the common people of America, with whom, as artist and adventurer, he had been intimately associated for many years.

He was tired of New York, with its cults and shams and narrow intellectualism; he was hopeful of the West and Southwest, where he had observed a new cultural consciousness and a thriving interest in the expressive arts. When the Missouri Legislature voted him $16,000 for a mural and the Art Institute named him director of painting, he returned in triumph to his native State.

Missouri received him with open arms—with palaver, ballyhoo and prideful ceremony, but with manifest ignorance of his art. He was welcomed as a celebrity, half-hobo and half-highbrow, the scion of a distinguished family, whose life had been rich in escapades and provocative irregularities.

Benton, an inveterate worker, set up shop in the State Capitol. He painted under public inspection; the doors were wide open and people flocked in to watch him perform, speechless before his swift, sure strokes and his exhibitions of virtuosity—for he is quite capable of showing off in the midst of his most serious work. But they saw only the showman strutting his facility.

They were blind to the import of his demonstrations, inexcusably indifferent to his immense preparatory efforts—the months of quiet thinking and planning, the first-hand investigations, the sketches and clay models of his characters; in short, to the significance of his originality, to his basic philosophy of mural decoration upon which his substantial reputation rests.

At the end of a year, the murals were officially presented to the State, and Missouri surpassed itself in rustic vituperation. Benton, a tough-skinned fellow and no stranger to abuse, expected opposition, but was not prepared for so mean, vindictive and unintelligent an onslaught.

He was charged with the crimes of "deliberate insult and painting a lie," of holding a great State up to nation-wide ridicule as a commonwealth of canine habits and indecencies. Instead of the usual stuffed-shirt statesmen and imaginary heroics, he had painted Frankie and Johnny, Huck Finn and Nigger Jim, the James boys in action and the unloveliness of Kansas City with Boss Pendergast, the stockyards and a parvenu culture.

I am pretty well acquainted with Missouri; my father was born there; I have followed the vagaries of the State with no less interest than amusement. It has a deserved reputation for individuality and picturesque behavior; and the unpredictable manners of its Ozark hillbillies, politicians and slow-speaking mossbacks are proverbial.

But notwithstanding the originality of its general folkways, Missouri harbors a hidebound, middle-class practicality which, weighing heavily against nonconformity of thought, tends to dominate expressed opinion. This insistence on conformity operates most viciously against the creative spirit, against that mental elasticity so necessary to the development of original thought.

Standing out against this mediocrity of average mental performance, the murals of the State Capitol of Missouri may well become one of the shrines of American cultural achievement. The issues precipitated are not only of the first importance to art, but to all fields where clear thinking is indispensable. Benton, a thoroughgoing Missourian in many respects, refused to be bound by conventions or acceptable patterns of thinking.

Commissioned to paint a social history of his State, he took the position that such a history should deal with the actualities of behavior, not with professed ideals. In consequence, he represented Missouri as a place where unconventionality flourishes and originality is not to be despised.

He has evolved a new technique for the exploration of that much-debated land, the Middle West, showing that beneath the dullness of intellectual respectability, there runs a flow of human blood which sometimes creates situations as dramatic, and perhaps as poetic, as those in the plays of Shakespeare.

In defense of his mural, Benton journeyed from town to town, meeting all comers and answering all questions, technical, insulting and childish. He gave no quarter to his detractors and refused to budge an inch in his stand as creative artist against rustic bigotry and high-toned conformity of thought.

The general attitude of the opposition may be illustrated in his tilt with a gentlemanly heckler, who, after relating the illustrious deeds of the painter's antecedents, asked the usual question: "You come from a State of high ideals and heroic achievements. How can you make us so ignoble when you are proud of Missouri?"

"You got me wrong," Benton answered. "I am not proud of Missouri, I am only interested. I have no pride in anything but my paintings."

Benton imagines he will remain in Missouri, but I am inclined to doubt it. A man of his character is not likely to fit comfortably in the upper brackets of society—and authority. As long as he is bigger than his carpers and the local houn' dogs of culture—that is to say, as long as he keeps in the public eye and the Eastern press—Missouri will find a home for him, but if he begins to slip, it will be another story.

If those who have supported Benton, and appreciated him as the most invigorating force in American art, wish to hold him, they must keep him busy—when unoccupied, he is the devil's disciple. For whatever Benton may be, he is a worker, and while working he usually hums an old hillbilly tune called "Prisoner for Life."

Realism on Armaments

From the Baltimore Sun.

It makes no difference to say that s expenditures are forced upon France by c ditions in the world. For that is only to that the militaristic madness in France i part of world madness.

A. F. L. - C I O SPLIT HITS LABOR PARTY IN NEW YORK RACE

ORGANIZED WORKERS' FIRST POLITICAL BID

On Outcome of Nov. 2 Election May Depend Future Success of Organization Nationally.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—The American Labor party is making its first bid for power in the New York mayoralty race, in which it is backing Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia for re-election Nov. 2. LaGuardia also is the nominee of the Republican, City Fusion and Progressive political organizations and carries Socialist and Communist indorsement.

Organizers of the American Labor party predict that it can hold the balance of power nationally if it is successful here.

The party, predominantly C I O—at least locally—but supported by strong American Federation of Labor elements, is now facing a crisis in its own ranks.

500,000 Labor Votes the Goal.

This week Joseph P. Ryan, International Longshoremen's head, and dominant figure on the city's powerful Central Trades and Labor Council, an A. F. of L. affiliate, switched to the support of Mahoney.

Both sides believe the balance of power in the local labor vote situation to lie in the hands of George Meany, head of the State Federation of Labor, who, at the Denver convention of the A. F. of L., said: "The New York State Federation unanimously indorsed LaGuardia. I am chairman of the A. F. of L. committee working for LaGuardia. You guess who I'm for."

Both Proud of Labor Records.

Both candidates are proud of their labor records. The Mayor has championed New Deal social and labor policies, and has currently won labor favor by successful mediation of numerous local labor disputes.

Mahoney complains that the Mayor has sometimes transgressed that latitude, that he has intimidated police so that they are unwilling to enforce law and order in industrial disputes. He calls the Mayor's support "red."

Mahoney announced this attitude after the Mayor had received pledges of support from the CIO and the A. F. of L. state and local organizations.

Denver Convention.

Then came the Denver convention and William Green's call for war to the finish against the CIO. Almost overnight there sprang into being a "trades union" party to support Mahoney. Some of the original labor leaders named as Mahoney backers were not generally considered of great importance in labor circles; some others had been identified in the past with Tammany politics.

However, when Ryan and many of his powerful allies in the central council began to align themselves with Mahoney, the American Labor party concluded that it had tangible opposition.

Report has it that both groups are bringing what pressure they can to bear on Meany. American labor party leaders are confident he will stay on their side.

They are fully aware that on their ability to keep in alliance powerful A. F. of L. blocs despite Green's call for a fight on the CIO, will depend their ability to make a convincing demonstration of political strength.

TVA—Contrast in Performance and Promise

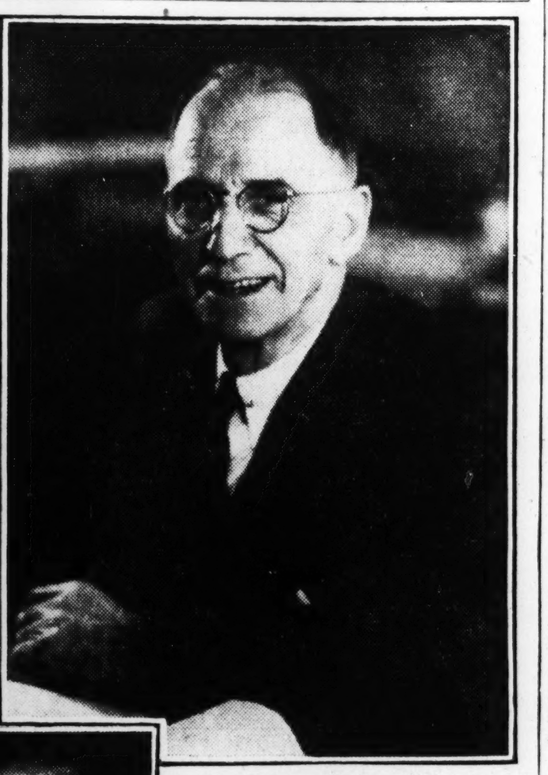
DR. ARTHUR E. MORGAN



DR. HARCOURT A. MORGAN

engaged. The total population of the 16 municipalities so served is 58,688. No accurate estimate of total population in the areas, chiefly rural, served by the co-operatives was available at TVA headquarters.

The largest city now engaged in municipal distribution of TVT power is Florence, Ala., with a 1930 population of 22,172. The large markets at Memphis, Birmingham, Chattanooga, Knoxville and Nashville are still without TVA power for distribution at TVA rates. These have a combined population of perhaps 1,000,000. The census of 1930 gave them 829,287. Birmingham voted against a municipal distribution plant after TVA was created. Memphis, Chattanooga and Knoxville have voted for municipal distribution systems, and the three cities have contracts to buy TVA power, but lawsuits, whose termination is uncertain, have prevented consummation of the arrangements. All three have negotiated unsuccessfully for purchase of distribution systems from the operating utility companies.

The Tennessee Electric Power Co., supplying Nashville, recently had under consideration a proposal to buy a large amount of TVA power to supplement its own resources. A contract was not agreed on, and the company applied to the Tennessee Railroad and Public Utilities Commission for authority to issue $1,500,000 of bonds to build a new steam generating plant of 25,000 kilowatt capacity. After a hearing two of the three members of the commission found in favor of the company's contention that it could generate electricity in the proposed plant more cheaply than it could buy it from TVA under the terms offered. The third member of the commission entered vigorous dissent, asserting that the company had not made a sincere effort to come to favorable terms with TVA.

Willkie and Alabama Power.

Whether the company actually will build the steam plant or eventually come around to the purchase of TVA power remains to be seen. This company is a subsidiary of the Commonwealth & Southern Corporation, whose president, Wendell L. Willkie, long has carried on a vigorous campaign against TVA, although his Alabama Power Co. and affiliates were until recently the principal customers for TVA power.

Discontinuance of sales to the Alabama Power group early in 1937 left TVA with a large surplus of power just at a time when Wheeler Dam, with additional capacity, was nearing completion. The contract was canceled when TVA and the companies were unable to agree on terms for purchase by TVA of certain distributing systems. To further the widest distribution of TVA electricity at TVA rates through municipally owned distributing systems, it has been the policy of TVA to buy up distributing systems and sell them to the municipalities. The record shows it has been successful in this only in comparatively few cases, and these include only small cities.

Industrial Contracts.

The industrial contracts recently signed are expected by TVA to take up almost immediately the surplus left on its hands when the power company sales were discontinued. This would result, in the greater part of the TVA output going directly to industries whose stockholders obviously would be the beneficiaries of whatever saving in power costs the companies would thereby enjoy.

Largest of these contracts, with maximum energy demand and expected annual revenue, are: Aluminum Co. of America, 100,000 kilowatts, $1,500,000; Monsanto Chemical Co., 50,000 kilowatts, $750,000; Electro-Metallurgical Co., 40,000 kilowatts, $750,000; Victor Chemical Works, 32,000 kilowatts, $500,000.

These major contracts at the maximum would call for 222,000 kilowatts. Present capacity of the TVA hydro-generating plants is 348,000 kilowatts. Capacity on completion of the Pickwick Dam now under way will be 420,000. Thus present industrial contracts will take more than half of capacity. Of course, ultimate plans call for a great deal more generating capacity, but that is in the future.

How Does Public Benefit?

How the public benefit from these industrial contracts would be measured was a question put by the writer of TVA Director H. A. Morgan and General Manager John B. Blandford Jr.

Was it not true that whatever savings these industries might enjoy from use of TVA power would accrue to the stockholders in larger profits?

The TVA officials agreed there was no control by which the industries could be required to pass such savings on to the public in lower prices, but they contended there would be public advantages in two expected results: first, in the stimulation of industry in the district and provision of more employment; second, in establishing and maintaining a large stable market for TVA power which would help to make possible continued low rates for general public distribution.

What the Companies Save.

In the case of a smaller industrial contract, not included in the foregoing, the writer was able to get a specific estimate of the benefit expected to accrue to the company. This was the contract of the Volunteer Portland Cement Co., at Knoxville, employing about 125 men and producing approximately 1,000,000 barrels of cement a year. This company's purchases of TVA power are expected to amount to $60,000 a year, and the company expects to save $40,000 a year in its power bill.

It has been said by TVA critics that such contracts amount to a subsidizing of industry at the expense of the taxpayers of the United States, but TVA is prepared to show in its own way that this is not true.

Another contract worthy of note is that recently made with the Arkansas Power & Light Co. for a maximum of 40,000 kilowatts. Annual revenue from this is estimated by TVA at $750,000. The contract is for five years, with automatic renewal annually thereafter unless advance notice of termination is given.

Harvey C. Couch's Company.

This power, to be distributed in Arkansas to its customers by the company, of which Harvey C. Couch is president, will be delivered to the company at Memphis, just across the Mississippi River from Arkansas. Incidental to this contract, the Arkansas Power & Light Co. was able to borrow $323,000 of Federal funds from the Rural Electrification Administration to construct lines and other facilities for serving 19 Arkansas counties. The company pays 2.88 per cent interest on this loan, and it will be able to add the full value of the property constructed with the proceeds to its rate base upon which it will be entitled to earn a return of 6 to 7 per cent.

The Arkansas company is not required by the contract to resell the TVA electricity at TVA rates, and of course it could not be legally obligated to do so. There is in the contract, however, a clause authorizing TVA, if it wishes, to cancel the contract if the company charges more than TVA rates for the electricity purchased from TVA. Two years' notice would be required for cancellation on this account, and the company meanwhile would get its own rates.

It is not likely that TVA will make any attempt to control the company's rates, or that it would succeed if it tried unless the Supreme Court should completely upset the law of the land as that Court has repeatedly applied it to utility rates. The Court has consistently held that owners of property devoted to public use are entitled to receive a reasonable return on the fair value of that property and that contract provisions which do not allow such return are of no effect.

Operations of Municipalities.

TVA points with pride to operating results of municipalities which purchase its power and resell to consumers at TVA rates. The standard residential rate set by TVA starts at 3 cents a kilowatt hour for the first 50 consumed in a month, and succeeding steps are: next 150 kilowatt hours, 2 cents each; next 200, 1 cent each; next 1000, 4 mills each; excess monthly consumption over 1400 kilowatt hours, 7.5 mills a kilowatt hour. The minimum monthly bill is 75 cents, and the rates quoted are net for payment within 10 days of date of bill. Gross rates 10 per cent higher are charged for later payment.

Utility companies operating in the area reduced rates after TVA competition began to be felt. Director Lilienthal testified at a Congressional hearing that after the reduction TVA rates were on the average about 32 per lower.

Sales by TVA to municipalities and other wholesale customers are at 4 mills for the first 100,000 kilowatt hours a month, 3 mills for the next 200,000 kilowatt hours, 2.5 mills for the next 700,000 and 2 mills for all in excess of 1,000,000. There is also a charge of 90 cents for each kilowatt of demand a month. Industries and utility companies may buy "interruptible" or secondary power at lower rates, sometimes bringing their average cost to a very low figure.

Great Savings Claimed.

It is the contention of TVA that its experience shows great savings can be made in distribution cost, and that its municipal customers are passing these savings on to consumers. One of the largest distributors of TVA power at TVA rates is the Alcorn County (Miss.) Electric Power Association. Its report for the fiscal year 1936 as published by TVA shows its gross revenue from sale of electricity was $113,792, at the average retail price of 1.83 cents a kilowatt hour. In 1936 the nation-wide average retail price was 2.3 cents a kilowatt hour. The Alcorn County Association paid TVA an average of 5.8 mills a kilowatt hour. The report showed that after setting aside 8 per cent of its gross revenue in lieu of taxes and 9 per cent for depreciation, and paying interest of $6023 on long-term debt, there was net income of $35,655.

Reports of other municipal operations, all of them small scale, are of like character. TVA requires its municipal customers to pay into general municipal revenue a sum said to represent what a private company would have to pay in taxes. Whether in actual practice this equals the amount of taxes a private company would be subject to is much debated. Since taxes go into operating expenses and therefore are collected from customers in rates, utility operators critical of TVA contend that if relieved of taxes to the same extent as TVA and its municipal customers they could sell at lower rates than TVA's.

No Depreciation Charge.

The "net income" of $768,363 from power sales in the last fiscal year recorded in TVA's books was arrived at without deduction of a proper charge for depreciation. From the gross revenue of $1,654,025, including some rent for electric property, the only depreciation deducted was $4049 on account of incidental equipment. There was no depreciation charged for the major part of the plant, the reason being that there has not yet been a definite allocation of the investment in dams, reservoirs and other facilities as among the stated TVA functions of navigation, flood control, national defense and power.

If the "net income" had been properly determined it would correspond to the amount available for "return" in the case of a private utility; that is, the sum out of which the owners would pay interest on borrowed capital and dividends to stockholders. The "return" usually allowed by regulating commissions in such cases is from 6 to 8 per cent of the value of the property used in the public service.

Because of the unfinished state of TVA and the fact that it is still actively engaged in finding markets for its power, it is not possible to make an accurate estimate of its operations from the standpoint of ultimate ability to pay interest on its investment and earn a return toward liquidation of that investment.

It is obvious, however, that $768,363 would pay interest, at the low rate of 3½ per cent, on only $22,000,000—just a fraction of the $300,000,000 that the Government has spent in the Tennessee Valley.

No Rush to Buy TVA Power.

There has been no rush to buy TVA power. In fact, salesmanship has had to be used. This is graphically reflected in an operating expense item of $91,793 for "sales promotion." The most ready customers have been the small municipalities and rural areas where electricity at TVA rates is a boon.

The Tennessee Valley is not an area of large industries, and thus far there has been no important movement of new industries into the district as a result of TVA power prospects. Careful consideration on the basis of long-time conditions usually precedes such investments. Litigation pending against TVA, in which the constitutionality of its whole program is attacked, no doubt has provided some of the "sales resistance" that TVA has had to contend with.

Those large industries which have recently made TVA power contracts already were operating in the Tennessee Valley. The Aluminum Co. of America has had plants there for years and has water-power plants of its own. It will use TVA power for expansion. The same is true of the Monsanto Chemical Co., which expects to build an additional plant near Columbia, Tenn., for processing phosphate rock mined in that area.

To aid it in selling power, TVA has adopted a policy of delivering wholesale power at the same price at any point in the Tennessee Valley. Transmission distance makes no difference, except that a discount of 10 per cent is allowed for power taken at the bus bar at one of the generating plants.

Cost of Transmission Lines.

Up to last July 1 expenditures of TVA for transmission lines and sub-stations were approximately $11,300,000. The longest transmission line built was that connecting Wilson Dam with Norris Dam, 233 miles. Its cost was about $350,000. Director Lilienthal testified at the 1937 hearing before the House subcommittee on appropriations that TVA estimated it needed to spend $13,000,000 this year to build transmission lines and sub-stations, but the amount asked for was pared down to $4,700,000.

A line from Pickwick Dam to serve Memphis, when and if that city is ready to take the power, is to cost about $1,275,000. This line also will serve the Arkansas Power and Light Co.

A member of Congress sought to obtain from Director Lilienthal at the 1937 appropriations hearing an estimate of the total revenue that might be expected from the power operations when the enterprise is entirely completed and the service stabilized. Looking six years into the future, Lilienthal estimated the gross revenue for 1943 might be $11,500,000.

Three Big Dams Completed.

Three of the big TVA dams are completed and their electric generating plants are at work. The Wilson Dam, built before TVA, cost over $50,000,000. It has the largest power capacity, 184,000 kilowatts. It is in the northwest corner of Alabama, 259 miles from the Tennessee River's confluence with the Ohio at Paducah, Ky. Twenty-five miles farther up the river is the recently completed Wheeler Dam, with present capacity of 64,000 kilowatts, cost of which is about $37,000,000. Construction of the Norris Dam, finished last year, with 100,000 kilowatts capacity, cost about $36,000,000. It is on the Clinch River, a tributary of the Tennessee, 25 miles from Knoxville and 647 miles from the mouth of the Tennessee.

In addition to these, TVA now has under construction four other dams, in various stages. Pickwick Landing Dam, on the Tennessee, 52 miles below Wilson Dam, is expected to cost about $33,000,000. It is the only one of the four under construction which will be immediately equipped to generate electricity. Installations at others will await development of the market.

Guntersville Dam, on the Tennessee, 349 miles from the mouth, will cost about $34,000,000, and the Chickamauga Dam, still farther up the river, 471 miles from the mouth, is expected to cost $40,000,000. On the Little Tennessee River TVA is building the Hiwassee Dam, which will cost about $17,000,000.

In the Ultimate Scheme.

Three other dams are included in the ultimate TVA scheme. The largest of these proposed structures would be at Gilbertsville, Ky., about 22 miles from the mouth of the Tennessee. Lowest estimate of its cost is $95,000,000 and other estimates run up to $112,000,000. There is, in fact, a proposal, grandest plan of all, for co-ordinating the Gilbertsville Dam with another that would cross the Ohio just below where the Cumberland empties into it. The lakes formed by these two dams would be separated above Gilbertsville only by a narrow ridge, and the proposal calls for a canal to connect them. This, it is said, would provide navigation without locks for 175 miles on the Ohio, 184 miles on the Tennessee, 150 miles on the Cumberland and 50 miles on the Wabash. Cost might be $300,000,000.

Other proposed dams would be at Watts Bar and Coulter Shoals on the Tennessee, costing $29,000,000 and $25,000,000, respectively, and at Fontana on the Little Tennessee, to cost $40,000,000.

There are 11 large dams in this scheme, not including the Ohio River project, and TVA, in exhibits submitted to the House subcommittee on appropriations early this year, estimated their cost in the initial stage at $434,673,638 and in the ultimate stage at $520,600,000.

By ultimate stage is meant with maximum generating capacity installed, when the possible capacity would be 1,878,800 kilowatts. The significance of this maximum capacity is seen by comparison with total capacity of all water-power plants in the United States last year, which was 9,410,000 kilowatts, and with capacity of all fuel-burning plants, which was 24,666,000 kilowatts. The long-time program of TVA is based on continuation of rapid increase in the use of electricity, and a TVA theory is that low prices will accelerate this increase.

Money for Other Purposes.

Of courses TVA has spent money for many other purposes than actual construction of dams. Acquisition and cleaning of land for the reservoirs created by the dams is a large item in the cost of each of the projects. For the Norris Dam TVA purchased 149,400 acres, a good deal more than was actually inundated. The average cost was $51.59 an acre for land and improvements, and overhead cost of $4.89 an acre for examination of titles, appraisals and other items, brought the total to $56.48 an acre. For the timbered part of the area which was inundated the clearing cost, including overhead, averaged $74.49 an acre.

In the Norris reservoir are the "marble deposits" for the loss of which United States Senator George L. Berry of Tennessee and associates have claims pending running up to $1,600,000, or more. TVA has paid nothing on these claims, but has filed suits to condemn these "mineral rights." Whatever may have to be paid on this account is not included in the foregoing statement of land costs.

For Wheeler Dam TVA bought 103,059 acres, paying $44.25 an acre for land and improvements, and $3.24 an acre for other costs. The purchase for Wheeler Dam was 59,080 acres and cost for land and improvements was $50.11 an acre, and for other items $5.64 an acre.

Cost of land for the Chickamauga reservoir is running much higher than these prices because much of it is adjacent to, and some in, populous towns.

Navigation and Flood Control.

Navigation was emphasized in the act of Congress creating TVA and is likewise emphasized in statements of policy by the directors of the project. The plans are intended to provide a nine-foot draft channel from the mouth of the Tennessee to Knoxville, a distance by river of 650 miles.

But if this were the only objective, there would be no justification for the tremendous costs running up to $500,000,000 or $600,000,000. The War Department reported to Congress in 1930 that nine-foot navigation up to Knoxville, comparable to that on the Ohio River, could be provided by construction of 32 low-water dams with adequate locks, at a cost of $74,709,000.

TVA argues that for navigation the present plan is far superior, because the fewer locks will cause less delay in transportation. Speed, however, never has been an important factor in water transportation. The volume of freight that might be transported on these rivers is wholly speculative.

The "integrated plan" is what makes TVA cost so much. Power companies attacking constitutionality of the project are expected to argue that the purposes of navigation and flood control would have been served by the War Department's $74,709,000 plan, and that the huge expenditures above that are mainly to put the Government into the power business, to engage in which it has no constitutional power.

TVA asserts the high dams are not only better for navigation, but also better for flood control, and that the incidental electrical capacity which could not have been had from the low navigation dams is just an extra benefit thrown in for good measure.

Fertilizer Experiments.

Congress directed TVA to carry on experiments for the production of cheap fertilizer at the old wartime nitrate plants at Muscle Shoals. TVA found that these plants, designed to turn out great quantities of fixed nitrogen from air in peace time and of nitrates for explosives in time of war, were useless for production of commercial nitrogen fertilizer.

So at a cost of more than $10,000,000 TVA has carried on experiments in production of phosphate fertilizer. It has distributed about 50,000 tons free to selected farmers in many states, to be tested on the soil. It is the theory of TVA crop and soil specialists that the phosphate should be applied to legume crops, which as a result of the stimulation will produce and restore to the soil three times as much nitrogen as could have been manufactured artificially at comparable cost.

The building up of the soil and restoration of land to grass is expected to provide additional storage of rainfall and help prevent floods. The phosphate rock which is processed to produce fertilizer is found in Central Tennessee.

Great savings to farmers are promised for a highly concentrated type of phosphate fertilizer which TVA reports it has developed. It is said to contain three times as much available plant food as the old types. The saving is expected to come from the lower transportation cost for the smaller volume required. So far there has been no commercial production of the TVA product.

Machinery and Cold Storage.

For the benefit of farmers TVA also is carrying on extensive experiments for development of new types of farm machinery. It found suitable equipment was not available from manufacturers, especially portable machines for threshing out the seed of lespedeza and other legumes. Also it is trying to develop a walk-in type of cold storage unit which a few farmers may co-operatively construct for storage of meats, fruits and vegetables. They are to be operated by electricity from TVA.

Experiments in Ceramics.

TVA also is conducting extensive experiments in ceramics, hoping that native clays and other materials may be used to build up a large industry which could supply American homes with a high grade chinaware at basement prices. Electricity from the TVA dam would be used for firing and another large market created for this power. It is hoped this product would in time displace a large volume of imported ware.

Development of a large paper industry to supply newsprint is another objective of TVA, again looking for a market for power.

At Norris Dam TVA has spent more than $3,500,000 for employe housing, most of which was for construction of the permanent town of Norris—a "company town." This town is four and one-half miles from the dam in a beautiful location, and was laid out with winding streets and spacious grounds as a model home community. There are in the town about 350 homes, many of brick or stone. In one section are large frame dormitories which formerly housed single men employed in construction work on the dam, now finished. These are unoccupied.

Town Manager J. W. Bradner told the writer that, under a change of policy, about 25 per cent of the houses will be rented to non-employes of TVA to keep it from being a 100 per cent company town. Most of the houses are occupied by TVA executives and office workers employed at the Knoxville headquarters. Two are occupied by directors of TVA, A. E. Morgan and David Lilienthal. The highest rentals are $55 a month, only two at that price, and the average is about $30. Many are heated by electricity, for which the tenants pay at TVA rates.

School and Its Cost.

Rentals are expected to pay the town operating costs, including the $5200 annual salary of the town manager, and the cost of the school—about $55,000 a year. An increase in rents will be necessary, the manager said.

The school building is a handsome brick structure so modern that sensitive photo-electric cells keep the light in the study rooms at just the right intensity by automatically turning on or off the TVA electricity as outside conditions vary. The school has about 300 pupils and 18 teachers.

Two of the TVA directors are former educators. The chairman, A. E. Morgan, was president of Antioch College in Ohio. H. A. Morgan was president of the University of Tennessee and has lived in Knoxville for many years. The third member, David E. Lilienthal, formerly was a member of the Public Utilities Commission of Wisconsin. Their salaries are $10,000 a year each.

Employes of TVA are not under civil service, but the law provides that no political considerations shall enter into their selection. The directors seemingly have made a sincere effort to live up to this provision.

In the month of August this year there were 14,500 persons on the TVA payroll. The payroll for the month was $1,789,843. The number of employes varies according to the amount of construction under way. The law requires that all workers be paid "prevailing" wages.

Establishment of TVA headquarters in Knoxville meant a big boom for the Eastern Tennessee city. Principal TVA offices occupy two large buildings and many other structures are rented in Knoxville and elsewhere for various purposes. Total annual rentals paid by TVA for space, as reported to the House appropriations committee this year, were $286,325. Rent for general offices at Knoxville is $149,540 a year.

Obviously a final balance sheet on TVA cannot be made up now or in the near future. Its vast plans are projected into the years ahead, and not for several years will the great plant as it is planned approach completion.

Idealism and Realism.

Members of Congress are beginning to inquire into results. At the hearing before the House subcommittee on appropriations early this year, when Director Lilienthal was testifying about the power phase of TVA, Representative Louis Ludlow of Indiana asked for an estimate of performance. He said:

"I believe the idealistic conception of TVA at the time of its creation was that it would serve as a yardstick that would redound to the general benefit of the people of the United States as respects rates, and perhaps correct practices. I think those who held to the philosophy that the Government should not engage in business probably had some skepticism concerning that. I wonder whether you could give us the facts, or in lieu of exact figures, if you feel free to express an opinion as to what has already been accomplished along that line. I am wondering just where we stand. I am wondering whether realism has measured up to idealism."

The answer was general, as it had to be. The director thought it had been demonstrated that lower electric rates were good for the country; he thought reductions by utility companies in the Tennessee Valley should be credited to TVA; it was true that TVA rates had been charged only in relatively small communities thus far. But eventually the question will have to be answered, whether realism has measured up to idealism.

A strange provision of the TVA law requires the directors to be "believers" in the project. It says: "All members of the board shall be persons who profess a belief in the feasibility and wisdom of this act." Believe it or not, they do.

YOUNG DEMOCRATS LAY PLANS AT LOUISVILLE

National officers of the Young Democratic Clubs of America were in Louisville, Ky., this week-end to attend the State convention of Kentucky clubs and also to lay plans for the meeting of the national committee of the organization, to be held in St. Louis Oct. 22.

Alfred Fleishman, chief deputy circuit clerk and Missouri national committeeman of the Young Democrats, who is in charge of arrangements for the St. Louis meeting, met with the national officers in Louisville and also attended a meeting of sectional officers at Cape Girardeau Thursday night in connection with the five-state rally of the clubs there Oct. 23.

Pitt Tyson Maner of Montgomery, Ala., national president of the organization, said last week that St. Louis was likely to become the permanent meeting place of the national committee, because of its favorable central location. Meetings held in Washington in the past have drawn scanty attendance from the West and South, as members must pay their traveling expenses.

The St. Louis meeting will be the first since the national convention of the Young Democratic Clubs in Indianapolis last August. Of primary importance on the program will be the planning of a national membership drive and also of "Roosevelt Fifth Anniversary Dinners," to be held throughout the country Nov. 9 in observance of President Roosevelt's first election.

The day after the St. Louis meeting, the committeemen and committeewomen will go by special train to Cape Girardeau where several thousand club members from Missouri, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Tennessee and Kentucky are expected to attend the five-state rally.

Fleishman said the St. Louis program probably would include addresses by Gov. Stark and Mayor Dickmann and local politicians, as well as a banquet in the evening. At Cape Girardeau the program will include addresses by Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace and United States Senator Alben Barkley of Kentucky.

The renewed activity of the Young Democratic Clubs, Fleishman said, is an answer to Republican plans for another grass roots convention to support Herbert Hoover for President in 1940. "The Republicans can hold grass roots conventions, but we won't be letting grass grow under our own feet," Fleishman declared.

A CLOSE-UP OF EARLY AMERICA

FORTY YEARS OF AMERICAN LIFE. By Thomas Low Nichols, M. D. (Stackpole Sons, New York.)

FIRST published in England in 1864, this work has now been brought out as a "find" by the present publishers. In this commentary upon life during the period between 1821 and 1861, the author—New Hampshire born doctor, reformer and journalist—seems to have missed few of the multifarious phases of existence in pioneer America. Being a socially inclined chap with a fine eye for the ladies, he enters with zest and animation into the activities he describes. Sleigh rides and husking bees in the North, luxurious hotels, air-cooled railroad cars (believe it or not), gilded steamboats and Louisiana plantations, together with other "Excitements and Sensations," "Recreations and Amusements" all come within the range of his vivacious pen, as do literature and politics.

There was no lack of material in the teeming, bustling expanse across which energetic colonizers were swarming westward to take up land that could be had for a song. Versatile, ingenious, eager for learning, of a child-like frankness of manner, developing wealth and wastefully extravagant of the riches they found, the Americans seemed to view every prospect in a mood of exaggeration. Doctors were "trained" in a hurry and without consistency of method; lawyers hustled through a brief period of reading; shameless corruption reigned in politics; drunkenness was the great national vice; in the realm of religion there were bigotry and crudity.

Despite all the lavishness of natural resource at their command, the Americans were not happy, as is indicated by the author in these amazing words: "In no country are faces furrowed with harder lines of care. . . . Work and worry eat out the hearts of the people and they die before their time."

Peering into the future, the excellent doctor opines that "great landed proprietors will need a strong government made by and for the rich, to give their property adequate protection." He asserts that the American workman has no jealousy of machinery; that when the machines do everything, his most difficult problem will be equitable division of the products. Perhaps he was writing with his tongue in his cheek. But there is nothing hazy about his description of the labor activities of women working in the factories of Lowell, Mass., who, if they were imposed upon, held public meetings, made speeches and had the whole manufacturing interest at their mercy!

Most well rounded and satisfying of the portraits is that of Horace Greeley. Parts of the book dealing with Lincoln and the North are colored by a violent secessionist attitude. It was this antipathy toward "brotherhood by coercion" which led to Dr. Nichols' departure for England at the opening of the war.

The following comment on the American character is especially notable in that it still seems to be true of us. "Americans are sanguine enough to believe that no evil is without a remedy, if they could only find it, and they see no good reason why they should not try to find remedies for all the evils of life."

The volume is an important contribution to first-hand records of our country's story.

Dull Chronicle Of Four Wars

THE TIDE OF TIME. By Edgar Lee Masters. (Farrar & Rinehart, New York)

SOLDIERS of the War of 1812, pushing to the West to claim their land bonuses, scattered many towns on the fertile Illinois prairies. Some of these were fragile shoots, destined to wither at the first blast of adversity. Others, like Ferrisburg, the locale of Mr. Masters' novel, took firm root and prospered in varying degree.

Leonard Westerfield Atterbury, son of Capt. Atterbury of the Black Hawk war, was regarded as a phenomenal child from the start. His education was carefully nurtured by Joel Strain, scholarly teacher at the Indian Hill Academy, and supplemented by a season at Northern University in a nearby town. As a stripling, Leonard "wronged" the buxom daughter of a scalawag family, and was deeply depressed when she met a violent death as a result of her promiscuity, for which he felt responsible. Nevertheless, his interest in sex was unquenched; at college he was seduced by his middle-aged landlady. When the Civil War began, Leonard's brother Henry enlisted to fight the Rebels, but Capt. Atterbury's loyalty to the Union was only lukewarm, and he would not permit Leonard to go to war.

In Chicago, after the war, Leonard had a strange adventure with a mentally emancipated girl who conducted herself and talked like a precursor of the female characters of Ibsen. But Leonard prudently married Adele Richland, a childhood playmate, and settled down to a career of modest achievement. He attained some eminence as Congressman, Judge, and champion of those unable to pay a fancy fee for an attorney. His son, the apple of his eye, perished of disease in the Spanish-American War. Leonard survived the World War, and lived to experience the iniquities of prohibition. With most of his friends and relatives gone, he ruminated about the meaning of it all.

Mr. Masters' novel is distressingly prolix, and the evidence of careful research and earnest thought cannot compensate for its almost unrelieved dullness. In some places the author has managed to recapture the flavor of a more leisurely day, but the narrative is abandoned completely at frequent intervals for long-winded discussions of the military strategy of Grant and other details never integrated into the texture of the plot. When one remembers his cameo-sharp portraits in "Spoon River Anthology," it is difficult to believe that the same author could so tediously unwind such graceless prose.

Voluminous Novel Still Growing

THE DEPTHS AND THE HEIGHTS. (Volume VI of MEN OF GOOD WILL.) By Jules Romains. Translated from the French by Gerard Hopkins. (Alfred A. Knopf, New York.)

LOVERS of literature who have not as yet begun to read the gigantic novel which Jules Romains is writing about Paris and its people should begin soon. For, although the publishers maintain that this volume can be read separately as a novel complete in itself, that is an erroneous claim and, in fact, contrary to M. Romains' purpose. This installment makes it clear that he is not writing a mere continued story, but is following a pattern as intricate as that of a symphony.

Actually this sixth volume is, in a way, a back trek. One has, by now, the right to ask of M. Romains: To what end? At the conclusion of the previous volume it seemed that the end purpose was in view. The story was progressing rapidly toward the World War, and it could be assumed that the war would soon come and produce the all-pervading emotional conflict which would tie all the characters together and bring the necessary unity to the novel.

In "The Depths and the Heights," however, the war seems as far off as ever, and we are given the personal meditations and troubles of two main characters—George Allory, the frustrated novelist, and Dr. Albert Viaur, an idealistic psychiatrist, new to the story.

But this is hardly cause for complaint. M. Romains' remarkable breadth of view and insight are still functioning, and this reviewer, for one, is glad that the great novel is apparently far from completion.

There are some notable new minor characters in this volume: Mme. Raymond, a sly and brilliant procuress; the Le Burec family, an ordinary middle-class group with surprising habits; and Geoffroy, secretary to the Premier. Marc Strigelius, the cautious author, writes another of his brilliant letters.

If there is one complaint to be made about the book, it concerns the publisher, who has discontinued the complete index of characters at the end of the volume. It would have been easy to include this valuable feature.

MISS LOWNSBERY has presented here a series of thumbnail biographies of 12 heroic people for whom, as she says, "humanity's redemption from exile was a life task." Among these people she includes Lord Shaftesbury, Thomas Paine, Hannah More, Christine de Pisan, and such less well-known figures as Fra Antonio, William Wilberforce and Don Bosco.

Through the lives of these men and women there burned an unwavering devotion to the ideal of social justice and to the people in whom its need was greatest; and in a narrative so simply told that a child could follow it, this devotion and the heroism with which it was accompanied is given clear expression.

Another Fine Play From Canterbury

THE ZEAL OF THY HOUSE. By Dorothy L. Sayers. (Harcourt, Brace & Co., New York.)

TWO years ago the annual Festival of Canterbury Cathedral, in England, brought forth T. S. Eliot's play, "Murder in the Cathedral," which became a great success in this country as well as abroad. This year "The Zeal of Thy House" was written for the same festival by Dorothy L. Sayers, and the result is another fine play, worthy of production away from its natural setting.

Instead of Thomas a Becket, Miss Sayers has chosen as her central character William of Sens, French architect who designed a new choir for the Cathedral, after the old one had been destroyed by fire in 1174. The period covered is 1175-1179, and the details of William's work and injury in a fall from the great arch of the choir are authentic history. Miss Sayers adds William's romance with a Lady Ursula and interprets his accident as the vengeance of the Almighty for his reprehensible conduct while the choir was in construction.

Partly in distinguished verse, partly in prose, "The Zeal of Thy House" is free from any historical mustiness or pretentiousness on the part of its author. Taking part with William, Lady Ursula and workmen are members of the cathedral chapter and three Archangels. Closely woven together are human and celestial motives that go far to glorify and explain the cathedral structure, making the play equally appropriate for Canterbury or the stage anywhere.

An Impresario's Life Story

ADVENTURES AMONG IMMORTALS. By Lowell Thomas. (Dodd, Mead & Co., New York.)

LOWELL THOMAS lends his name to this autobiography of Percy Burton, English impresario, in much the same way that Burton introduced Thomas with his lecture on Lawrence of Arabia, then unknown, to England.

Burton has an amazing tale to tell. The young Englishman, first a secretary in Barnum & Bailey's Circus, then an actor in various traveling companies, soon found where his chief talent lay. Since the turn of the century he has been associated with most of the great actors of the English stage. He has been the manager of Wilson Barrett, Sir Charles Wyndham, Sir Henry Irving, Sir John Hare, Forbes-Robertson, Sir Herbert Tree, Sarah Bernhardt during her farewell tour of the United States, and most recently Leslie Howard during his production of "Hamlet." This imposing list of names is supplemented with those of Shaw, Barrie, Duse and Edgar Wallace, with all of whom Burton has had business dealings.

Burton's own experiences and the reminiscences of the actors he has managed combine to give an intimate picture of the theatrical world for the past 40 years. Burton describes with equal knowledge the difficulties of surmounting the Klaw and Erlanger monopoly and the command performances at court witnessed by half the crowned heads of Europe. The most prominent actors and even literary men of the day are seen from the stage side of the footlights. The title of the book is in this sense misleading, for Burton is too matter-of-fact in his viewpoint and too shrewd in his business dealings to regard the great and near-great as anything but human beings, frequently very ludicrous ones.

A logical interpretation of the Scriptures.

As Viewed From Kennebunkport

EVEN a book reviewer must feel a pang in pronouncing unfavorable judgment on the collected works of a seemingly pleasant old lady who, one gathers from the foreword, has retired to Kennebunkport, Me., smugly certain that in a long life of writing she has dealt adequately with "the permanent human passions." Whether adequately or not, she has certainly disposed of them simply. Proceeding by "Do tells!" and "So what do you thinks!" she brings sinner after sinner to the throne of grace, avoiding only those who have erred in the more indelicate ways. One envies the certainty with which she picks her way through human confusion but wonders whether she really knows the words for which she has substituted decorous blanks.

Her raw material, the human scrap-heap from which she plucks her jewels of wisdom and virtue, is Old Chester, a smug Pennsylvania town spiritually very lucky, indeed, since it is presided over by an infallible oracle, Dr. Lavendar. A typical story of its inhabitants is called "Good for the Soul," in which an innocent middle-aged farmer marries a tarnished chorus girl. As the tarnish wears off remorse sets in, and the lady, whose early sin is only daringly hinted at, wilts and pines. The tale ends happily and nobly on a regenerate note, but the climax is reached in the words, "Here is the great mystery: we poor little creatures cannot understand that He both makes peace and creates evil for his own purpose—for sin is the prerogative of God. This poor girl, in her pure and placid life here on the farm, had eaten of this tree, and the anguish of the knowledge of goodness had fallen on her."

Mrs. Deland doesn't seem to realize that "the permanent human passions" concern real people. Her characters are mere manikins made to carry about large labels, "Greed," "Gossip," "Goodness." Miss Lydia, who jumps singing out of bed at sixty, when asked how she feels, replies, "I am always well; and so sorry for the people who are sick." Youth is expressed by hand-clappings and obtuseness. Willie King, the doctor, grasps at the wall for support when he discovers a patient has cancer. Such artificiality inclines us to agree with the author's modest assertion that only the Lord knows "what lies in the darkness of human nature."

Summing up her work Mrs. Deland says, through Dr. Lavendar, "There is nothing more astonishing to me than the goodness of the Bad—unless it is the badness of the Good." And, coyly adds the pleasant old lady in Kennebunkport, "I fear that some of the readers. . . . were shocked by those last eight words!"

In Deadwood's Giddy Youth

CALAMITY JANE was no lady. There wasn't a bull-whacker in the West who could outguzzle, outbrag or outcuss her. She began life in Missouri as Martha Jane Canary and for more than 30 years of freighting, nursing and carousing, her star burned brightly and dangerously in the cow camps, bull trains and diggin's of the West.

She never refused to help anybody; and was at her energetic best when calamity fell upon some cluster of frontier derelicts. When she died in 1903 she was a legend in America and, no doubt, a surprise to the angels.

Miss Hueston tells the not-altogether-imaginary story of the strange, strong friendship between the proper Phoebe Ann Norcutt and her self-appointed guardian, Calamity Jane. Phoebe Ann was Preacher Norcutt's daughter. He was a missionary to the Indians, and when he died exhausted from his battle to help preserve the buffalo pastures for the Sioux, Phoebe Ann was tossed alone upon the raw West. When rip-snortin' Jane came barging along, Phoebe Ann acquired protection and spunk.

Jane's greatest calamity was Phoebe Ann. To Jane, no matter how many times a woman rolled the dominoes, she had only two chances—gittin' hitched or goin' wild; and though she herself preferred the latter, there could be but one answer for a lady like Phoebe Ann. During the turbulent years these birds of a different feather lived and traveled together, Jane did her dangdest to git the gal married. But Phoebe Ann picked her own man, one Len Wade, a mysterious, rather colorless figure who arouses no interest.

The love story of Len Wade and Phoebe Ann is negligible. The novel is really a careful, boisterous study of Jane and the rollicking society in which she and Phoebe Ann moved. Very properly, Miss Hueston refuses to expand into a love affair the slim circumstance that Jane and Wild Bill Hickok were in Deadwood at the same time. If you think, because a woman wrote it, that this novel is in any wise tame, get it and you'll experience the wallop that's coming to you.

Still a Fugitive Seeking Freedom

MANY people will remember the Gastonia riots of 1929 which resulted in long prison sentences for seven young textile organizers. Fred E. Beal was one of the seven, and was rewarded, for his conscientious efforts, with a 20-year sentence to the penitentiary of North Carolina. Some will remember, too, the reports that they fled to Soviet Russia—much to the embarrassment of their bondsmen. There is some dispute as to who advised them to jump bond — or whether they were so advised. But one thing seems certain; they were all glad to get a free ride, and to see with their own eyes the new Workers' Republic.

"Proletarian Journey" is Mr. Beal's story of this flight for freedom, of his life until then, and of his disillusionment in the land of the G. P. U. It is written in a simple but readable style. Starting with an excellent portrayal of the struggle of "mill slaves" in New England, where Mr. Beal became a mill hand at 14, we are introduced soon to the savage brutality of our own South. We have a picture of lawlessness winked at by those in power, of brutal attacks in the night, of near-lynchings, and finally, the "frame-up" as a means of crushing labor organization.

In Russia, Mr. Beal is assigned, eventually, to a large tractor factory in the Ukraine. He finds the dictatorship oppressive, and, having arrived there in the midst of famine, he describes the suffering of helpless and defeated peasants. He is shocked by the cold-bloodedness that is Asiatic. He describes the rounding up of hundreds of starving peasants, and tells of their being shipped in putrid cattle cars to the great wilderness, far from any inhabited region, only to be left there to die—away from the scrutiny of foreign correspondents and tourists. He is out of Russia, and still a fugitive—now from two countries.

A Medical Study Of Napoleon

NAPOLEON, known as a man of great endurance in his prime, emerges under the probing scalpel of Dr. Sokoloff with a staggering accumulation of physical deficiencies. He was born with a predisposition toward a bad stomach; he suffered all his life from a constitutional dysuria; as a General of the republic he shared a virulent skin disease with most of his soldiers; there is good evidence that he was tubercular until past his thirties; and during the exile a complication of diseases, stimulated by the unhealthful climate of St. Helena and a restriction on the horseback riding that had provided his only exercise, piled up until his death from cancer of the stomach.

Dr. Sokoloff's book is a great deal more than a medical case history, however. It presents a series of striking pictures of the Corsican: as a slight, studious cadet at military school; as a ragged revolutionary General, yellow-skinned, sickly, making a disciplined army out of a mob of sansculottes by his dynamic energy; as a Republican Consul, working 15 hours a day, wearing out six secretaries, almost single-handed turning France from a feudal into a modern state; as Emperor, behaving like a boor, growing obese, losing his daring and his power of concentration; as an exile, conscious of his impending death, spending his last years in petty battles with a petty English Governor and a series of ignorant physicians.

Most interesting of all is the chapter entitled "The Malady of the Caesars," in which Dr. Sokoloff examines Napoleon's sudden diminution of power in mid-career, his metamorphosis from a living dynamo into a listless, over-cautious, easily-fatigued semi-invalid. Discussing similar phenomena in the cases of Alexander and Julius Caesar, accompanied in all three instances by over-emotionalism and convulsive fits, Dr. Sokoloff rejects the conventional hypothesis of epilepsy, and proposes the almost mystical idea that no man can stand too much power, too much accomplishment, that some natural law of compensation must finally become operative. As a scientist, of course, he cannot accept an out-and-out mysticism; so he takes refuge in endocrinology, that marvelous, little-understood theory that the ductless glands are the masters of human destinies; that they make all things possible, but that with constant hyperactivity they may wear out and cause complete reversals of character.

Dr. Sokoloff was formerly on the staff of the Washington University medical school in St. Louis, and is an outstanding expert in the field of cancer. His book, while seldom over-technical, has every indication of scientific authority, although the psychological discussions are not so convincing as the pathological. The style is simple and vivid, and the original viewpoint justifies the book's addition to the already innumerable Napoleonic biographies.

What Substitute For Lost Faith?

SPIRITUAL stability is the one thing most, if unconsciously, desired by the modern world, a fluid world of change. An older generation found peace in the authoritative dicta of religion; but these, for many, are no longer valid. Some substitute must be found, something strong and solidly constructed.

"The Flowering Aloe" is the story of a quest for such a something. Primarily the quest is Selina Chantry's; but her children too feel the same need for an answer. What ought I to do with my life? That is the problem all of them face. Selina's answer is instinctive; her aim is to help her children in their search. She fails . . . Rex, the "average man," complacent in his mediocrity, does not even recognize the existence of such a question; while Justin and Caroline prove conclusively in their lives that no outside help is possible; they must find their own answers. And yet, working in their own separate ways, they come finally to conclusions which are in accord with their mother's antiquated notions of decency and honor.

This is a novel of questions, a book of seeking. No final answers are suggested, for none is possible. Like the aloe tree which gives the book its title, one must draw, from the resources of his own character, strength to meet life—an inner strength, more than merely resignation. No external forms, no dogmas, can meet the infinitely various chances of life; all must be of one's self.

It will be seen that "The Flowering Aloe" is what is called a novel of ideas. But, although the ideas treated are important, the book is not primarily intellectual. Its approach, rather, is emotional. The ideas are studied only in their effects on men and women; and the characters are not abstractions, but living persons.

THREE STUDIES OF THE PRESS

THE PRESS AND WORLD AFFAIRS. By Robert W. Desmond. (D. Appleton-Century Co., New York.)

ENGLAND GOES TO PRESS, 1815-1937: The English People's Opinion on Foreign Affairs as Reflected in Their Newspapers Since Waterloo. By Raymond Postgate and Aylmer Vallance. (The Bobbs-Merrill Co., Indianapolis.)

SURVEY OF JOURNALISM. By George Fox Mott and 12 Associate Authors. (Barnes & Noble, Inc., New York.)

THE most notable single passage in these three books on the press is the two and a half page introduction which Prof. Harold J. Laski of the London School of Economics and Political Science contributes to the first.

There are four things, writes this internationally read and respected student of current social problems, which need to be understood by the average reader of the newspapers:

"1. That there is no government in the world not engaged in 'weighting' the news in its own interest;

"2. That there are many news-gathering organizations, some of which add their own bias to what they report;

"3. That correspondents have what Mr. Justice Holmes called their inarticulate major premises, which necessarily color the reports they send;

"4. That the editorial offices have also their own special values to contribute to the work of selection and presentation of news."

* * * *

When these points are generally appreciated a more critical audience possibly will demand "greater respect for objective truth than now obtains in the press," Laski suggests, but he adds "that day is far ahead." For his hard conclusion is that "our news system is a reflection of our social system; there will be no vital change in the one unless there is also a vital change in the other. . . . We shall have truthful news when untruthful news does not pay, but it will not cease to pay until the major causes of social conflict, national and international, have been removed."

The book which this challenging statement presents was originally written as a thesis for a doctorate at the London School of Economics and Political Science, a fact which in itself testifies to its thoroughness and disinterested scholarship. Dr. Desmond, in pursuit of relevant facts, visited and worked professionally in such news centers as London, Paris, Geneva, Rome, Berlin, Washington and New York. Many books tell more about journalism in the United States, but there is none which gathers together such a wealth of information about the press of the whole world.

"England Goes to Press" is an attempt to get at the English public mind on important matters since Napoleon's historic rout at Waterloo. The emphasis is on political, social and economic affairs, rather than the picturesque, headline events which were the stuff of a somewhat similar compilation, "America Goes to Press," brought out by the same publishers last year. The extractors and writers of the interlarded statements of fact are journalists of wide experience in Fleet street. British foreign policy being what it is—or isn't—today, there is an especial timeliness in the publication of a book which recalls what it has been in other periods.

The third book is an encyclopedic compendium on newspaper practice, arranged in outline form. The materials assembled discuss the editorial, business, mechanical and social aspects of newspaper making. The editor is a member of the University of Minnesota journalism faculty and 10 of his 12 associates are teachers of journalism. The remaining two are practicing newspaper men.

Innocence Out Of Luck

WHIRLPOOL. By David Lamson. (Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.)

IN a small Mid-Western community, the Norfolk brothers, Hannibal and Joel, their uncle Benijah, and Martha, Hannibal's city-reared wife, have an orchard from the proceeds of which they live. Life is drab and uneventful for all of them. One day Hannibal finds his brother and his wife in a compromising situation. A fight results between the two brothers. Hannibal is victorious and Joel, in anger and humiliation, leaves home to seek his fortune in Alaska. Three years later, through the accidental finding of some bones on his land, Hannibal is accused of murdering his brother, and is brought to trial.

During the course of Hannibal's imprisonment and trial, Mr. Lamson brings out the pettiness of small-town politicians, the depravity and vanity of lawyers and judges, the cheapness of the yellow press, the stupidity and dishonesty of juries and the helpless perplexity of the accused in their midst. Innocent, yet not knowing the whereabouts of his brother who could save him, Hannibal is caught in an ever-tightening net of circumstantial evidence. At first he is silent, but later through the help of his faithful and confused Martha, and the one honest and able lawyer the town affords, he tells his simple story of all that occurred. The more he talks, the more he is doubted. He is tried and found guilty by the newspapers and the public long before he actually appears in court, where the expected verdict is handed down.

Mr. Lamson develops Hannibal's thoughts and sensations with keen insight. In the characterizations of Red, Hannibal's cell-mate, and of one of the jurors, Rebecca Werner, he has done a poignant piece of writing. There is a fine sense of the dramatic throughout the book, and the reader is overpowered by the final tragedy.

—Amelia R. Landau.

TO PIVOT the history of the United States from the close of the Revolution to the Civil War on the life of one man, and that man Henry Clay, requires quite a bit of doing, but that is precisely what Bernard Mayo is attempting to do in "Henry Clay, Spokesman of the New West," a three-volume work of which the first book has just come off the press. While Clay was, of course, a man of parts, not all of them were good; he is conceded brilliance, but hardly greatness. A compromiser may well turn out to be, in final analysis, merely a political trimmer.

Nevertheless there is reason in Dr. Mayo's pattern. Whether Clay was all he should or might have been is altogether beside the point if he is regarded, as in this case he is, as a key man in the growth of Western weight and importance in national affairs. "I have tried," says Dr. Mayo, "to portray in objective manner the influence upon Clay of his environment, and the influence of Clay upon that environment." Accordingly, he depicts with lavish detail the Virginia scene of Clay's boyhood and the life and politics of Lexington, Ky., of his early manhood and smart law practice—so lavishly, indeed, that one might almost say there is more to the frame than there is to the picture.

The implied promise of all this background material is a sharpened emphasis on the more important events to come. Whether the promise shall be kept can be told only by volumes two and three. The present book goes only to the 1812 declaration of war against Great Britain—"Mr. Clay's War."

This much can be said: Dr. Mayo writes with scholarly discrimination, in unpedantic style, as one who understands his man, open-eyed and undeceived, yet is sympathetic and forgiving. Clay can stand a lot of forgiving.

BONDS ON NARROW DOWNWARD COURSE

NEW YORK, Oct. 9. — The WEEK: The bond market followed a descending path. A short-lived midweek rally failed to interrupt its course. Railroad obligations were under constant pressure and showed widest losses, particularly lower-priced liens.

Federals followed a narrow course.

Industrial and utility obligations found little real support.

Foreign dollar loans were marked by a sharp break in Japanese issues on Friday. German and Italian obligations tended a little lower and South American bonds were in small demand.

Turnover was erratic, with principal activity on the downside. The heaviest volume—around $9,000,000 face value—was on Tuesday. For the most part transactions hung around the $7,000,000 daily mark.

TODAY: Railroad obligations and foreign issues were forced down in a sagging market. Averages for rails, industrials and foreigns touched the lowest levels in nearly two years.

Federal loans tilted down a little. Declines did not exceed 3-32ds of a point and the few scattered gains were confined to 4-32ds of a point.

The Associated Press averages for 20 railroad bonds dropped .2 of a point to 82.9, the lowest level since Nov. 20, 1935, when they stood at 82.4.

Utility and industrial obligations fluctuated narrowly.

The averages for 10 industrials slid .1 of a point to 100.4, the lowest since November, 1935, while 10 utilities held unchanged at 93.9.

The averages for 10 foreigns fell .3 of a point to a new two-year low. Japan 5½s slipped a point to 54 and Oriental Development 6s gave up 2 at 55.

Total turnover for all bonds was $3,371,700 face amount, compared with $3,289,000 last Saturday.

have truthful news when untruthful news does not pay, but it will not cease to pay until the major causes of social conflict, national and international, have been removed."

The book which this challenging statement presents was originally written as a thesis for a doctorate at the London School of Economics and Political Science, a fact which in itself testifies to its thoroughness and disinterested scholarship. Dr. Desmond, in pursuit of relevant facts, visited and worked professionally in such news centers as London, Paris, Geneva, Rome, Berlin, Washington and New York. Many books tell more about journalism in the United States, but there is none which gathers together such a wealth of information about the press of the whole world.

"England Goes to Press" is an attempt to get at the English public mind on important matters since Napoleon's historic rout at Waterloo. The emphasis is on political, social and economic affairs, rather than the picturesque, headline events which were the stuff of a somewhat similar compilation, "America Goes to Press," brought out by the same publishers last year. The extractors and writers of the interlarded statements of fact are journalists of wide experience in Fleet street. British foreign policy being what it is—or isn't—today, there is an especial timeliness in the publication of a book which recalls what it has been in other periods.

The third book is an encyclopedic compendium on newspaper practice, arranged in outline form. The materials assembled discuss the editorial, business, mechanical and social aspects of newspaper making. The editor is a member of the University of Minnesota journalism faculty and 10 of his 12 associates are teachers of journalism. The remaining two are practicing newspaper men.

TO PIVOT the history of the United States from the close of the Revolution to the Civil War on the life of one man, and that man Henry Clay, requires quite a bit of doing, but that is precisely what Bernard Mayo is attempting to do in "Henry Clay, Spokesman of the New West," a three-volume work of which the first book has just come off the press. While Clay was, of course, a man of parts, not all of them were good; he is conceded brilliance, but hardly greatness. A compromiser may well turn out to be, in final analysis, merely a political trimmer.

Nevertheless there is reason in Dr. Mayo's pattern. Whether Clay was all he should or might have been is altogether beside the point if he is regarded, as in this case he is, as a key man in the growth of Western weight and importance in national affairs. "I have tried," says Dr. Mayo, "to portray in objective manner the influence upon Clay of his environment, and the influence of Clay upon that environment." Accordingly, he depicts with lavish detail the Virginia scene of Clay's boyhood and the life and politics of Lexington, Ky., of his early manhood and smart law practice—so lavishly, indeed, that one might almost say there is more to the frame than there is to the picture.

The implied promise of all this background material is a sharpened emphasis on the more important events to come. Whether the promise shall be kept can be told only by volumes two and three. The present book goes only to the 1812 declaration of war against Great Britain—"Mr. Clay's War."

This much can be said: Dr. Mayo writes with scholarly discrimination, in unpedantic style, as one who understands his man, open-eyed and undeceived, yet is sympathetic and forgiving. Clay can stand a lot of forgiving.

BONDS ON NARROW DOWNWARD COURSE

NEW YORK, Oct. 9. — The WEEK: The bond market followed a descending path. A short-lived midweek rally failed to interrupt its course. Railroad obligations were under constant pressure and showed widest losses, particularly lower-priced liens.

Federals followed a narrow course.

Industrial and utility obligations found little real support.

Foreign dollar loans were marked by a sharp break in Japanese issues on Friday. German and Italian obligations tended a little lower and South American bonds were in small demand.

Turnover was erratic, with principal activity on the downside. The heaviest volume—around $9,000,000 face value—was on Tuesday. For the most part transactions hung around the $7,000,000 daily mark.

TODAY: Railroad obligations and foreign issues were forced down in a sagging market. Averages for rails, industrials and foreigns touched the lowest levels in nearly two years.

Federal loans tilted down a little. Declines did not exceed 3-32ds of a point and the few scattered gains were confined to 4-32ds of a point.

The Associated Press averages for 20 railroad bonds dropped .2 of a point to 82.9, the lowest level since Nov. 20, 1935, when they stood at 82.4.

Utility and industrial obligations fluctuated narrowly.

The averages for 10 industrials slid .1 of a point to 100.4, the lowest since November, 1935, while 10 utilities held unchanged at 93.9.

The averages for 10 foreigns fell .3 of a point to a new two-year low. Japan 5½s slipped a point to 54 and Oriental Development 6s gave up 2 at 55.

Total turnover for all bonds was $3,371,700 face amount, compared with $3,289,000 last Saturday.

Horses and Mules.

NATIONAL STOCKYARDS, Oct. 9.—Better than 500 heads of horses and mules were received on commission here the past week and a fairly large number of buyers responded to the sale. Trading was more active and firmer in spots, but as a whole there was no material improvement in quotations. The break in cotton, for one thing, is exerting a restraining influence.

Some of the outstanding unbranded fillies sold some better and a broader outlet was indicated for well broken work horses and mares. There was no particular feature to the mule trade and dealers continued to report difficulty in moving colt animals at a profit.

*MULE QUOTATIONS.

Farm mules, 15.2 to 16 hands, $110@140; colt mules, small, $60@85; draft mules, $150@200; mine mules, 14.1 to 15.2 hands, $120@160; choice cotton mules, 14.3 to 15.2 hands, $160@200; small green mules over 3 years old, $50@85.

THE WEEK ON NEW YORK STOCK MARKET

Attempted Rallies in Today's Market Checked by Selling but a Few Favorites Improve.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—The average price of 60 stocks as compiled by the Associated Press fell from last Saturday's mark of 56.5 to 52.6 today, a loss of 3.9 points, thus more than canceling the gain of 2.8 scored last week, previous to which the market had fallen for six consecutive weeks.

Today's market jogged along in a rut, with a few leaders adding gains of fractions to around a point or more, but the list was mixed at the close, with gains and losses in most cases small. Steels and motors and aircrafts made some headway but buying interest lacked enthusiasm and rallies were weak.

As the week drew to a close, prices on the average were the lowest since October, 1935. Some observers thought the market decline was due largely to undefined fears or hesitation or nerves over the aspects of foreign affairs and the apparent slowdown in the speed of the recovery pace, although actually reports from business and industry were bright in important divisions.

For instance, carloadings rose to the highest point since 1930, motor production was accelerated, electricity output gained over the previous week, widening its margin of increase over 1936, wholesale trade, despite a slower retail shopping pace, registered a steadier tone, and chain store and mail order concerns continued to report increased business.

Various Aspects of Market.

The steel picture caused some hesitation. Production dropped sharply. But even this division had a cheerful aspect. Before long, it was said, motor makers, heaviest consumers of steel, will be placing orders.

President Roosevelt, returning from his Western tour, spotlighted strife and diplomatic wrangling abroad. This, some analysts held, unsettled stocks. Later Secretary Hull condemned Japan's Secretary China. This whetted the appetite briefly for shares of companies producing goods used in war. Next came falling wheat prices, which puzzled Wall Street, for wheat is normally regarded as a war commodity.

Wall street has erased about $10,000,000,000 in stock values in the past two months. No such abrupt shrinkage in share values had been experienced since 1931. Jesse Jones, chairman of the R F C, speaking in New York this week, said: "The stock market may have been too high. But there seems no good reason for its going so low as it has. Business trends are frequently reflected by the trend of the stock market but it is not an invariable barometer."

Business volumes remain large but there has been a pronounced falling off in steel, cotton textile production, and residential building.

Corporate earnings for the first nine months of the year are estimated at the largest since 1929, but profit margins have lately shown a rather definite tendency to narrow.

Washington's higher bank reserve and stock market margain requirements and indicated curtailment of "pump priming" expenditures have cooled some buyers. S E C restrictions upon speculation have curtailed the activity of porfessional traders.

War scares probably contribute to general uneasiness.

A good deal is being said as to whether the market did not get too high last spring. Business had been improving pretty steadily, with consumers' goods lines feeling the effects of the soldier bonus in the summer of 1936. Late last year there was talk of the need of curbing "boom" psychology to prevent excessive speculation. In the meantime, heavy buying of American securities was coming in from Europeans.

Specialists on Outlook.

Any consideration of the meaning of the slump, specialists say, should take into consideration that big crops, higher wages and large business volumes of the past year have provided the biggest base of public buying power in years. A tabulation of September sales of 30 large chain store and mail order houses shows a gain of 7.6 per cent over that month of last year, compared with only 3.7 per cent in August. This gain is, of course, offset to some extent by higher prices.

A decline in commodity prices, such as has taken place in many staples in the past few months, notably cotton and copper, tends to slow business for a time as buyers wait to see how far the decline will go. Observers say preparations are steadily going forward for active sales in coming months. Replenishing of durable goods such as homes, industrial plants and buildings, will require growing use of credit and capital by industry.

Bankers have been urging a balanced budget to restore "confidence" in long term investments, and thus make a good capital market for business. In the meantime, business has started to use capital and credit more freely. Until the slump in the stock exchange brought an interruption, flotation of new capital issues had been growing, and the past year has seen a considerable expansion of bank loans for business use.

Total stock sales during the week amounted to 6,923,530 shares, compared with 6,875,063 a week ago and 12,785,830 corresponding week a year ago. Total sales from Jan. 1 to date were 308,560,298 shares, compared with 370,348,351 a year ago and 246,431,428 two years ago.

Traders' Eyes on Far East in Week's Closing Session.

Traders were cautious today in making commitments in view of conferences over the Far Eastern crisis. There was little in domestic news to influence the market one way or another. A Government order, placed with Boeing, helped the aircraft shares. Chrysler improved on trade estimates third quarter sales were better than in 1936. Dealings were quiet through most of the session, with activity heightened in the last half hour. Transactions totaled 488,980 shares compared with 285,720 last Saturday. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks gained .1 of a point at 52.6.

U. S. Steel was the most active share on the board, closing at 71, up ¾ of a point. Boeing picked up 1⅛ at 26⅝, and Chrysler was higher by the same margin at 85⅞. Other gainers of fractions to around a point or more included Bethlehem 61⅜, Republic Steel 21⅜, Douglas Aircraft 39⅜, United Aircraft 22¼, General Motors 45¾, American Telephone, 157½, Western Union 32, Northern Pacific 17¼, Cerro de Pasco 55¾, J. I. Case 123, and Air Reduction 62¾. Santa Fe was in supply and finished off 1½ at 48¾, although other rails were unchanged or advanced by small fractions. Others to lose by as much as a point or more were Phelps Dodge 30, International Nickel 48, International Harvester 85¼, Allied Chemical 183½, Continental Can 51, Texas Corp. 46⅝, and Seaboard Oil 26⅝.

Consolidated Stores 9-Month Gain.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—September sales of Consolidated Retail Stores, Inc., gained 16.16 per cent to $1,011,470 from $870,790 in the like 1936 month. Nine months' sales were $6,744,018, against $6,156,707 in the same period last year, a gain of 9.54 per cent. The company operates a chain of women's clothing stores in the Middle West and South, including Sonnenfeld's in St. Louis.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.

ALL American security and commodity exchanges, with the exception of principal livestock markets, will be closed Tuesday in observance of Columbus Day.

European markets will operate as usual.

INDEX OF INDUSTRIAL PACE OFF 2.8 POINTS

Within Fraction of Year's Low but Still Above the Level of a Year Ago.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—Industrial activity declined this week to within a fraction of the year's low in the widest break since 1934. The Associated Press seasonally adjusted index slipped 2.8 on the week to 99.2 per cent of the 1929-30 average. The latest figure was only slightly above the corresponding level a year ago of 96.2. The drop from the May high point to date has been roundly 9 per cent.

Steel operations dropped lower as backlogs virtually disappeared and new orders continued scarce. Mill activity was off 8.3 points to 66.1 per cent of capacity, the lowest level since the week beginning April 6, 1936.

Steel, cotton and residential building indices continued substantially behind 1936 levels.

Freight carloadings rose less than seasonally expected, despite big increases in coal shipments. Cars loaded totaled 847,245 as reported yesterday, an increase of 6799 cars over the preceding week and 27,648 above a year ago.

Industrial classifications lagged, although automobile output gained slightly.

The index, with its seasonally adjusted components based on 1929-30 as 100 and the latest available statistics, compared as follows:

STOCK PRICES DOWN ON LOCAL EXCHANGE

Losses Extend Nearly to 4 Points — Some Gains in Week.

Prices slipped some on the St. Louis Stock Exchange last week, but without any material increase in volume of trading. Losses extended nearly to 4 points, Wagner Electric at low being off 3¾ points.

Scullin Steel preference lost 2½ points and Scruggs 2. Smaller losses were shown by other issues.

COPPER, TIN, LEAD AND ZINC; RED METAL AT 12 CENTS

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—Copper prices quoted by smelters on the delivered Valley basis declined last week from 12¾ cents at the beginning of the period to 12 cents toward the end. The break was attributed to reduced domestic demand and weakness at London.

Tin prices declined almost 3 cents, but later recovered slightly to 55⅛, off 2½ cents for the weke. There was a noticeable pickup in demand on the scale down.

Zinc business was quiet, following a decline of 25 cents to 6.25, East St. Louis basis. Production, meanwhile, has been rising to levels which can be compared only with pre-depression output, and stocks of prime Western grade showed their first increase in two and a half years.

Lead was unchanged, with business not quite up to normal, but inquiry general and indications of latent buying power still withheld.

Lead and zinc were nominally unchanged in St. Louis Saturday.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—Copper steady; electrolytic spot and future, 12.00; export 11.95. Tin steady; spot and nearby 55.12½; futures 54.25. Other metals nominally unchanged.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—Associated Gas & Electric system reported a 5.7 per cent increase in power output for September to 392,063,875 kilowatt hours compared with the same month last year. This was the smallest percentage increase over a comparable month since June, 1935.

Storm Damages Apple Crop.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—Mid-September storms caused a loss of 300,000 to 400,000 bushels of apples in Nova Scotia, a Canadian observer reports. The crop at that still is said to be larger than last year. Canadian apples compete with those from the United States in European markets.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE QUIET; FRANC POSITION STEADIER

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—Foreign exchange markets were quiet during the week. The French franc steadied its position further after the recent sharp decline. Movements of all other European currencies were minor and Far Eastern units kept within narrow bounds.

The unusually small amount of gold abroad during the week for shipment to New York—6,444,000, compared with $16,718,000 last week, which in itself was under the low average of recent months—reflected increased demand on the Continent for gold to hoard.

The engagements in England have been dwindling in recent weeks, with resurgence of the financial crisis in France, but this week there was no British gold in the engagements. Not only was the available gold in London taken up by the continental hoarding demand, which emanates principally fram France, but the London free market price remained above the price at which shipments to New York, with its $35 an ounce, were profitable.

The small shopkeepers and farmers in France have seldom failed to hoard gold in times of crises, political and financial, and the current crisis has brought no exception.

The French franc, reported supported by the French official control fund, was up .01½ of a cent. The Swiss franc rose .02 of a cent and The Netherlands guilder .00½ of a cent.

The British pound sterling, the Belga and the German mark were unchanged.

In London, the United States dollar fell 1-16 of a cent at 4.95 7-16 to the pound, compared with a New York overnight rate of $4.95⅜ for sterling. Paris markets were closed.

The Federal Reserve Bank reported $2,497,000 had been engaged in Canada for shipment here.

Closing rates follow: Great Britain in dollars, others in cents. Great Britain, demand, 4.95⅜; cables 4.95⅜; 60-day bills 4.94⅝. France, demand, 3.31½; cables 3.31½. Italy, demand, 5.26¼; cables 5.26¼.

Demands: Belgium 16.86; Germany free 40.17, registered 21.35, travel 25.70; Holland 55.29½; Norway 24.89; Sweden 25.54; Denmark 22.12; Finland 2.20; Switzerland 23.02; Spain unquoted; Portugal 4.50½; Greece .91½; Poland 18.91; Czechoslovakia 3.50½; Yugoslavia 2.33; Austria 18.88n; Hungary 19.75; Rumania .76; Argentina 33.03n; Brazil 8.80¼n; Tokio 28.86; Shanghai 29.70; Hongkong 31.05; Mexico City 27.85; Montreal in New York 100.06¼; New York in Montreal 99.93¾.

COMMODITY PRICES AT NEW 1937 LOW

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—Commodity prices declined into new low ground for the year this week. The Associated Press weighted index of 35 important wholesale staple quotations slipped down to 82.91 per cent of the 1926 average. The last day of the week, however, found the index a little better at 83.03.

Among farm products, cotton fell below 8 cents a pound for the first time since 1933, with official estimates of the prospective harvest set at 17,573,000 bales.

Grains were marked down. Buyers were scarce. Heavy supplies pressed on the market. Corn, wheat, oats and rye gave ground. Hogs, cattle and lambs weakened.

Textiles registered their tenth consecutive new bottom for the year. Cotton cloth, wool and silk dipped. Substantial inventories in retail outlets and mills have caused buying to dry up, which in turn has been reflected in manufacturing operations.

COMMODITY PRICES AT NEW 1937 LOW

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—Commodity prices declined into new low ground for the year this week. The Associated Press weighted index of 35 important wholesale staple quotations slipped down to 82.91 per cent of the 1926 average. The last day of the week, however, found the index a little better at 83.03.

Among farm products, cotton fell below 8 cents a pound for the first time since 1933, with official estimates of the prospective harvest set at 17,573,000 bales.

Grains were marked down. Buyers were scarce. Heavy supplies pressed on the market. Corn, wheat, oats and rye gave ground. Hogs, cattle and lambs weakened.

Textiles registered their tenth consecutive new bottom for the year. Cotton cloth, wool and silk dipped. Substantial inventories in retail outlets and mills have caused buying to dry up, which in turn has been reflected in manufacturing operations.

RALLY IN COTTON AFTER HEAVY SETBACK

NEW YORK, Oct. 9. — The WEEK: Cotton declined to about the 7½-cent level this week, or more than 6 cents under the high levels of last April, losing about $1.75 a bale in five days, with an additional decline of around $2 after the official figures were published yesterday pointing to production of 17,573,000 bales, an increase of 1,475,000 bales over the indication of a month ago. December sold off from 8.30 to 7.60 and closed yesterday at 7.69 compared with 8.28 a week ago. The week closed with a rally today of 70 cents to $1.25 a bale.

The crop figure, a surprise, proved to be about 750,000 to almost 1,000,000 bales above average trade ideas. The largest crop ever harvested in the United States was 17,978,000 bales, in 1926

The Federal crop reporting board boosted the estimate of cotton acreage yield to the record peak of 249.3 pounds in forecasting a crop almost 42 per cent above a year ago.

Traders took less favorable view of the world statistical position when the New York Cotton Exchange Service increased its tentative figure on cotton production outside of the United States this year to 20,000,000 bales, compared to 18,410,000 bales produced commercially in foreign countries during the 1936-37 season.

Rally of $1.50 a Bale.

TODAY: Cotton rallied about $1.50 a bale when Southern selling dried up but advances were not fully maintained and the market closed 14 to 25 points net higher. December, which had sold up from 7.62 to 7.97, finished at 7.92.

Opening losses of 2 to 7 points reflected moderate declines at Liverpool and an overnight accumulation of foreign and Southern selling. These offerings were soon absorbed by trade buying and covering and, when the selling tapered off, the market responded to a light demand with advances of 32 to 37 points from the lows.

The market proved thin, however, and late fluctuations were erratic. Prices lost about 14 to 18 points from the highs under liquidation but again turned steadier in the last few minutes.

The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the close of the week was estimated at 162,000 bales against 115,000 last year and 101,000 two years ago.

Less Buying by Japan Than in Recent Years Forecast.

The Washington Bureau of Agricultural Economics reports that indications now are that Japan, biggest buyer of American cotton last season, will import less raw cotton this fall than any similar period in recent years.

Trade sources predict Japanese mill consumption of cotton for the year that started with September will be 25 to 30 per cent under the all-time peak for the season just ended.

Japan imported a record total of 4,451,450 bales in the 12 months ended with August, and 35 per cent of this, or 1,539,500 bales, was American cotton. In the previous season the United States supplied 1,661,119 bales, or 44 per cent, of total imports of 3,736,926 bales. Other chief sources of raw cotton for Japan are India, Egypt, China and Brazil.

Ginnings Lower in Grade and Shorter in Staple.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—Government cotton specialists reported today that ginnings from this year's cotton crop continued lower in grade and shorter in staple than cotton classed to the same date last season. The weekly survey by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics reported 28 per cent of the cotton classed during the week ended Oct. 7 was white middling and better in grade. For the season 63 per cent was in these grades compared with 68 per cent last season. Spotted grades comprised 18 per cent for the week and 20 per cent for this season compared with 17 per cent last season.

The Government chart on staple lengths showed cotton shorter than ⅞-inch constituted 12 per cent for the week, 10 per cent this season and 6 per cent last season; cotton from ⅞ to 31-32 included 52 per cent for the week, 58 for this season, and 48 last season; cotton from 1 inch to 1 3-32 inches comprised 33 per cent for the week, 28 for this season, and 36 last season; cotton 1⅛ inches and longer constituted 4 per cent for the week and this season's against 10 per cent last season.

The bureau said 87 per cent of the cotton during the week qualified for futures contracts, compared with 89 per cent of tenderable grades and staples for the season to date.

WHEAT HIGHER ON INCREASE IN RUSSIAN PRICE

Values at Chicago Climb More Than Two Cents but Profit-Taking Cancels Half the Gain.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Oct. 9.—Sudden increases in prices demanded for breadstuff supplies from Russia ran Chicago wheat values upward 2⅜ cents today, but profit-taking then canceled half the gains.

Announcement that Russia had raised quotations on her wheat offerings to other countries three cents a bushel came as a surprise, in particular to Liverpool traders, who were short of wheat to meet contract requirements, and who made haste to purchase. The result of this was that the Liverpool market, due 1⅛@1¾ cents lower, closed today ⅝@1¼ cents net higher, giving a decided stimulus to price upturns this side of the Atlantic.

Tending also to lift the Chicago wheat market was word that export business in Canadian wheat today totaled 600,000 bushels and that 150,000 bushels of United States hard winter wheat had been bought for shipment to Antwerp and Rotterdam.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were varying from ¼ cent decine to 1⅛ cents advance compared with yesterday's finish, Dec. $1.00⅜-$1.00½(May $1.01⅛-⅜, July 95c; corn ⅛-½ cent down, Dec. 58⅞-59 cents, May 60⅛ cents, July 61 cents; Oats exactly unchanged, Dec. 29¼ cents, and rye showing ⅞-1 cent bulge, Dec. 74⅞ cents. For provisions, the outcome was unchanged to 12 cents lower.

Leading wheat specialists here said the increase in price of Russian offers was just another of many indications that Russia did not possess an exportable wheat surplus large enough to warrant forcing it on the world market. A reason suggested from London, however, was that negotiations for shipment of 25,000 tons of Russian wheat to Switzerland had prompted the price increase. Meanwhile, United States Department of Agriculture advices from Buenos Aires were at hand that, despite breaking of the Argentine drouth, irreparable damage to wheat crops had been done amounting to about 28,000,000 bushels.

Overnight rain in southwest and west sections of the United States winter wheat belt served to make the price of July delivery lag as compared with old crop months, December and May. On the other hand, some buying of wheat futures in Chicago was regarded as against sales at Kansas City. Primary receipts of domestic wheat today were 987,000 bushels, a falling-off from a week ago when they totaled 1,186,000 bushels, but still large in contrast with 331,000 bushels the corresponding time last year.

Most of the time corn averaged higher with wheat and because corn belt rains were expected to cause delay to drying of new corn. An opposite inffluence, however, especially at the last, was that Chicago receipts of corn today were fairly liberal, estimated at 137 cars. December and May corn touched new low price records for the season.

With offerings light, rye displayed independent strength. Arrivals of rye here were only seven cars. There were no purchases of oats to arrive.

Lard steadied after dipping to season fresh bottom levels. Some buying of provisions was attributed to cotton market advances.

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, Oct. 9.—Wheat futures closed 1c higher, December finishing at $1.01⅝ and May at $1.02¼. Early in the session, the gain was as much as 2⅛c.

Liverpool wheat opened ⅛@¾d lower but closed ½@1⅛d higher.

Winnipeg started at 1@1⅝c advance and soon was 1¾@2c up. The close was 1⅜@1⅝c higher.

Argentine wheat was up ⅜@½c at opening and corn ¼c higher. At the close wheat was ⅝c higher and corn ⅜c up.

Local wheat receipts which were 40,500 bu., compared with 91,500 a week ago and 22,500 a year ago included 25 cars local and two through. Corn receipts which were 39,000 bu., compared with 70,500 a week ago and 19,500 a year ago included 23 cars local and three through. Oats receipts which were 6000 bu., compared with 16,000 a week ago and 20,000 a year ago, included three cars local. Hay receipts were one car through.

St. Louis Cash Grain.

In the cash grain market Saturday, soft wheat was steady. Supply was small and the demand just fair. Mills and elevators divided the available supply. Trading basis of No. 2 was shaded to some extent. Corn was 3c lower. Receipts increased somewhat but a better demand cleared the offerings. Mills were the purchasers. Premiums were 3½c under the previous day's levels. Oats were unchanged. Demand improved but not enough to clear the increased supply. Outside order buyers showed the interest.

GERMAN INDUSTRY FEARS EFFECT OF SHELVING SCHACHT

NO LONGER SEEN AT BERLIN OFFICE

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Oct. 9.—Serious concern is expressed by German financial and industrial quarters over the apparent elimination of Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, a director of the delicately balanced Nazi economy.

His often-rumored resignation as Minister of Economics has not become official yet, but for several weeks Schacht has been absent from his Ministry—many say on permanent vacation.

Industrialists ask whether the lifting of his expert hand from the control levers of the machine he created may not eventually shake the whole National Socialist structure.

Schacht's unheralded trip to Italy in September gave rise to reports a final rift with the highest leaders of the Nazis had occurred, but he returned to Berlin and even took part in official festivities in honor of Premier Mussolini's visit.

As recently as Sept. 29, Schacht has made public appearances bolstering the belief his official connections have not been completely severed. At that time he told the savings bank convention in Essen that the nation's rearmament task included the vital problem of financing production of consumers' goods.

His Difference With Leaders.

His deepest divergence with Nazi leaders in the past has been over diversion of what he thought was too great a part of the national resources to armament.

Apparently Schacht has continued as president of the Reichsbank, but officials admit he is no longer at the Economics Ministry where he accomplished the seemingly impossible task of keeping National Socialism out of bankruptcy.

Even the Bank of France has applauded his genius—it was a French official who called him Europe's ablest central banker.

But his functions gradually have been usurped by the organization Colonel-General Hermann Wilhelm Goering built up to execute Reichsfuehrer Hitler's four-year self-sufficiency plan, now in its second year.

It was apparently this factor, that his voice no longer counted, which brought about his reported retirement.

Will Goering be able to carry the load or can he find collaborators sufficiently schooled to do it, industrialists ask?

What Schacht Has Done.

Foreign observers used to predict that if Schacht ever left his job, it would mean disaster to the Hitler Government. The success of the Government, it is generally admitted, depends upon success in manipulating Germany's highly complicated economic set-up.

Schacht was believed to be the only man in Germany capable of holding Hitler's State together.

Der Fuehrer, it was said, recognized this and would not let Schacht go despite constant sharpshooting over a period of years by spendthrift party radicals.

When faced with foreign debts, few resources and an ambitious Hitler bubbling over with schemes that cost money, Schacht built a managed economy system the magnitude of which is hard to conceive.

Debts were defaulted, business life was regimented, a wall was erected around Germany so that nothing could go in or out without Schacht's permission, and the "new plan" was started—the policy of trading only with countries which would make barter and clearing arrangements; a policy of buying from a given country only as much as that country would buy from the Reich.

In short, the daily and hourly welfare of Germany's 68,000,000 inhabitants depended upon decisions taken by a handful of experts working day and night in a large gray stone building on Berlin's Unter den Linden.

Wholesale Buying of Supplies.

They bought the nation's daily supplies much as a purchasing agent for a large factory buys for his plant. They ordered from abroad what eggs, butter, meat, iron ore, cotton and other articles they thought would be needed during the week or month. Many food shortages were laid on the doorstep of someone who miscalculated.

They were able—until Goering's four-year plan began to cut in—to direct the uses for which raw materials would be used. Here came the rub with party leaders who held different social ideas than Schacht, and who had different conceptions as to the place of business and industry in the Nazi state. Schacht represented capitalistic enterprise while the Nazi party left wing holds many socialistic notions. In many things Schacht had to give in. It is known that he never approved the anti-Jewish policy of the Government because it tended to scare business and hamper recovery.

Turning Defeat Into Victory.

Direction could be changed overnight, with all industry and finance regulated. Schacht could and did turn what might have been disasters into benefits by cunningly switching policy—something requiring a period of time in democratically-ruled countries.

It was in trying to make a smart maneuver that he ran headlong into his last battle with party chieftains.

When world prices of raw materials began to boom as a consequence of feverish rearmament, things looked bad for the Reich which must buy raw materials. With no gold and with foreign exchange barely sufficient to keep the country supplied with bare necessities, rising prices meant increased difficulties, more belt tightening, and less food if the Nazi pace of arming was to be continued.

Attempting to turn this black picture into a brighter one, Schacht proposed to solve the problem by making money from rising world prices rather than permitting them to defeat him.

How Plan Worked.

His plan was this: Use fewer raw materials on armament and the huge construction program which Hitler is fostering, and devote this to manufacturing articles for export. This plan was put into effect last fall. It was found that Germany could pay the higher world prices for raw materials, sell the manufactured products abroad and make a handsome profit, whereas, formerly, it was necessary to maintain a billion mark export subsidy because German prices were far above world prices. Dr. Schacht, for example, sold steel to England at prices about 50 per cent above the German domestic price.

But in following this plan, Schacht was pinching party progress and he eventually had to give way. Hitler is said to have given Dr. Schacht his approval at the outset, but later to have withdrawn it.

As a result, Schacht faded out, and with him two of the three devoted experts who ran the technical machinery. Herbert Goering, cousin of Colonel-General Goering, is the only one who remains in power. Dr. Karl Blessing and Dr. Rudolf Brinkmann have been made Reichsbank directors.

DEAN ROBBINS' RESIGNATION ACCEPTED BY MISSOURI U.

Regret Expressed at His Leaving; to Become Professor at Columbia.

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Oct. 9.—Resignation of Dr. William J. Robbins, dean of the University of Missouri of Missouri Graduate School, was accepted "with regret" at a meeting of the board of curators here today.

Dr. Robbins designed to become professor of botany at Columbia University and director of the New York Botanical Gardens. He was awarded an honorary doctor of science degree by Lehigh University last Wednesday.

He has been dean of the graduate school since 1930, and has been chairman of the national fellowship board since 1931. A successor has not been named.

Briton Tells of Share-Croppers' Plight

South in the grip of slavery? First there are the landlords, who are still where they were before the Civil War, but are now themselves enslaved in debt. These landlords allow poor whites and Negroes to occupy their mortgaged lands upon a sharing system.

Tenants and "Croppers."

A shock was administered to the American public when it was discovered that there are more poverty-stricken white people than Negroes engaged in cotton-growing, the proportion being approximately 5,000,000 whites, 3,000,000 colored persons.

These tenants and "croppers" generally hold the land upon a 50-50 basis, payable in two installments. The landowner advances at a high rate of interest furnishings, which include food, tools and sometimes doctor's attendance. The furnishings are generally about $1 a month per acre planted with cotton, and are paid monthly only from March until September or October.

When the harvest comes and the sale of the cotton the landlord collects the cotton, gins and sells the lint and seed, and hands the tenant, without any account, his half of the proceeds less the accumulated furnishings—less interest.

A System of Debt Bondage.

These croppers are uneconomical, because they are inefficient. They are not expected to exercise initiative; they are expected to do what they are told to do. They are not supposed to be resourceful; they are supposed to be attentive, obedient, and cheerful. They seldom apply themselves to their tasks with enthusiasm. Their inadequate diet, their submerged status in the community, their subservient relation to the landlord, and the meager returns for their labor leave them with low vitality and without an economic motive. The whole system is, for 75 per cent of the croppers, one of debt bondage and for the landlords little better.

There is much discussion as to the amount the tenant farmers and croppers receive, and nobody claims that more than a few get a living wage. Indeed, 24.2 per cent of white croppers and 18.75 per cent of Negroes are insolvent.

Statistics on Croppers.

In a public affairs statement the position of 112 croppers is given. The furnishings amounted to 63 per cent of their wage, and when their debt had been paid it was found that the balance each family of four persons received worked out at 10 cents a day! In 600 cases the net average received in November was $90 upon which to keep the family until the following March, when furnishings could again be drawn upon.

A larger group of 2000 families taken from South Carolina, Mississippi, Alabama, and Texas gave the average as $105.

In Wretched Quarters.

True, they have what serves as a "house" and a garden. Who, having visited these tenant homes, can forget them? They are not homes but little wooden cabins, most of them dilapidated, with boards rotten and broken. Few have any windows or interior doors, none has any sanitary arrangements, few have water, and none has light.

Out of the hundreds we saw, for example, in the Mississippi Delta, not one had ever been painted, although a few had been whitewashed. The open cracks in the boards left the wind and rain to drive through in spite of rough attempts to nail old newspapers and brown paper over them. Not a few were actually the old slave cabins.

Only 1.3 per cent of the white tenants had sinks and none of the Negroes. The beds and bedsteads were of the roughest kind, and there was no privacy.

Food of Poorest Quality.

Their food is of the poorest quality. According to Robert Vance, maize contributes 32.5 per cent of the Southern tenant farmer's diet, as against 1.6 per cent in the Northern States; the diet is further made up of sweet potatoes, sorghum, and an occasional piece of "fatback." Few of the families we visited possessed a cow and none had been able to eat chicken or an egg for months.

Only 57.5 per cent of white women and 8.3 per cent of Negroes had doctors at confinement. Only 86.5 per cent of whites and 70.8 per cent of Negroes could read and write. The average number of books in the houses of white tenant croppers was 2.69 and of Negroes 1.5.

The number of times recreation had been taken in the year was, poor whites 1.4, Negroes .92.

Dr. Johnson in reply to a question received this characteristic reply: "We can't get any flour, snuff, shoes, sugar, coffee, thread or anything from the landlord but meat and meal. We have a divil of a time. No soap, soda, or salt. Can't borrow a dime, not a damn cent. If this ain't hell, I'll eat you. We work our damn heads off and git nothing. The harder we work the deeper in debt we gits."

Trail of Usury.

The trail of usury is everywhere. The landloard pays the relatively low interest of 10 per cent for his mortgage, because in law the tenant's cotton crop is his property, and thus he alone has "security." The tenants and croppers have to pay up to 25 per cent and even 30 per cent on furnishings and even more on such loans as can be raised.

I received an amusing if tragic illustration of this. A merry-hearted picker in Montgomery County had given me so much information and I had taken such a slice out of his time that just before leaving I could not refrain from throwing him a quarter. His unrestrained gratitude was only equaled by the hilarity of an educated man standing near. Upon inquiring the cause of this hilarity I was told: "That's the first quarter he has seen for months, and he will soon be surrounded by others like him, each of whom will readily offer a dollar (payable in October), and he will then make nearly 500 per cent interest on his great good fortune!"

Negro Philosophy.

Never will I forget a talk with two Negro women, the first gray-headed and neatly attired, the second a bright, cheerful, young married woman living in a tiny cabin, its floorboards sparkling clean, with a carefully tended little flower-patch in front. It was the same story of utter poverty which met us everywhere.

To both of them I put the same questions: "How on earth do you live?" Both gave the usual reply: "I've got a few sweet taters and a few beans and our chickens will lay us a few eggs (one had a cow); we shall get no meat till March." "Any money?" "No, boss, not a cent." Then another question: "Yet in spite of all your troubles you seem cheerful?"

No. 1: "Yes, boss, but look down there at 'Old Man River' (the Mississippi); he goes rollin' along, carrying all his troubles without grumblin', so we does the same. Then, too, we remembers that when there were three in the fiery furnace there was de fourth which them that loved de Lord did see—an' we sees him with us in our fiery furnace."

No. 2: "It ain't no use to grumble so we shows our smiles to de white boss and we shows our tears to de lord."

Looking for a Moses.

The way of economic salvation for cotton-growing is not yet apparent, but hope is rising; and the most encouraging feature is the awakening of public opinion. One Negro voiced the general hope of his fellows when he said they were "looking for a Moses." There are several candidates for the post.

The head of a State department in Tennessee is an enthusiast for education; Dr. Sherwood Eddy is endeavoring to demonstrate in the Mississippi Delta that the right way is ownership for all by all. Business men are doing much hard thinking, and some are devoting money made in other spheres to experiments in the South.

President Roosevelt is running some "New Deal" tenant-sharing schemes up in the Blue Ridge Mountains and also down in the Mississippi Delta, all of which are interesting but cost such large sums of money that any large-scale developments are prohibitive.

Migration From the South.

There is no longer any doubt that the South is showing a great deal of initiative and determination and a recognition that the Negro is its job and that it is up to it to save him, if only because otherwise the South will sink with him. It is agreed on all hands that pro-Negro sentiment is waning in the North without much good reason, while it is waxing in the South for solid reasons.

The causes of this change are difficult to appraise. First place is generally given to the great migration of 1916-25, during which more than 1,500,000 Negroes flocked from the South to the North, crowding industrial centers like Detroit, where the Negro population has risen during the period from 5000 to 70,000. This has had a dual effect. The planters and business men of Dixieland, alarmed at the loss of laborers, were stirred to do some hard thinking, while the prosperous people of the northern cities were not quite sure that they were right to give so much encouragement to thousands of impoverished and debilitated Negroes to settle in their midst.

Dr. Eddy's Scheme.

But the various schemes when taken collectively are less than a drop in the ocean. There are four main groups. The most "Left" of these is the one established by Sherwood Eddy, which is being tried at Hillhouse, on the Mississippi. It may have been the atrocious roads leading us to it, or the storm which engulfed everything but the bright enthusiasm of Eddy's leaders, or the vigorous "doctrines" preached to us; but, whatever it was, we came away without any wild enthusiasm for the contribution which Eddy's 350 earnest workers on 2000 acres would make to the problem affecting a farm tenant population of 8,000,000 of people on nearly 250,000,000 acres of land!

Dr. Eddy's scheme covers 2000 acres, of which about 600 are cultivated. Of course, it has been "subsidized," and friends and workers are full of enthusiasm. Everybody shares the hardships and profits (if any) equally. "Realistic religion" is the motive spirit, and the community upholds the principles of co-operative effort. All the other "New Dealers" sniff at a system which, as one put it, gives "plenty of philosophy but no ownership"!

Trying to Teach Thrift to Negro.

At the other extreme is the "Tory-Socialist," the best type of whom we found on the Yazoo. He was approaching 90 years of age, newly married, very happy, and joyously sure of his Methodism and his soul's salvation. He and his father had owned slaves before the Civil War, and after the war his freed slaves remained with him as paid workers.

But he was a great lover and admirer of the Negro, and the policy he was pursuing was that of encouraging his tenant Negro croppers in thrift so that they could march with him to prosperity. He charged them a low rate of interest on furnishings, helped them to buy stock, and taught them the arts of husbandry and especially the value of Methodism—and at all times thrift.

Although he had every sympathy with the efforts of Sherwood Eddy's group and some admiration for President Roosevelt's schemes, and was even prepared to rejoice at any success they attained, he had little confidence in their leading to anything but bankruptcy. But he was the embodiment of the spirit amongst the old-time Southerners who are looking earnestly for some way of economic salvation for cotton.

How One Plan Worked.

The best example of the third group of schemes we found close to one of the huge levees. This is being run by the managing director of a large store and is unique. There are now altogether 350 persons engaged on this novel scheme of cotton-growing. The author of the venture boldly propagates the conception of white and Negro partnerships on equal terms—that is a bona fide sharing of expenditure, as well as income—and these are the results of cotton-growing for one season carried out by 51 families totaling 275 people on one section:

They produced under his direction 700 bales of cotton from 950 acres of Mississippi land; they sold the cotton and seed for $61,400. From this were taken the following deductions for material supplies at wholesale prices: Food for people and cattle, seed fertilizers and so on, amounting to $15,000; interest on advances of loans for transport, $15,000, and $1500 for "management," leaving a credit balance of $24,900, or $566.25 per family for cotton products alone.

Audited Statements.

In addition, there was free rent, free fuel, free feed for stock, because outlay was included in the charges. Each of the tenant croppers was supplied with an audited statement of accounts every month. Each had the whole of his own proceeds from sale of pigs and poultry. This merchant landlord also arranged—and this was no light matter—for first claim on adequate lorries and carts for removal of stock if the Mississippi broke the adjoining levee and flooded the area.

The Sherwood Eddy scheme ignores the desire, deep-seated in both Negro and poor white, for a piece of "our very own" farm land and some stock. In the foregoing case the owner looks forward to the time when his tenant's sharers will buy their farms. Already the five years' experiment shows an increase in the capital value of Negro stock on the farms from $4000 to $12,000.

New Deal Schemes.

The President's "New Deal" proposals recognize that one of the surest routes to any sort of prosperity is that the element of ownership must be incorporated in every reform scheme. We saw the homestead venture for unemployed on the slopes of the Blue Ridge Mountains and the tenant sharing scheme 800 miles south on the Mississippi. There is also an interesting Negro scheme at Gee's Bend on the Alabama River.

President Roosevelt began with some startling facts staring him in the face. First, in 30 years farm ownerships had dropped nearly 10 per cent and tenancy (sharing) had risen 20 per cent. Next, the "cropper" class alone represented 39 per cent of all tenants in the South, which, at four persons per family, makes 3,000,000 people.

The principles of the "New Deal" settler scheme include security of tenancy leading to ownership, coupled with generous advances of cash and goods to strictly selected tenants. But the schemes are so few and so limited that they cannot on their present scale make much impression on so colossal a problem. Finally, none of these schemes as yet touched the stranglehold of the countless mortgage bonds, held by every interest in cotton and secured on farm implements and crops which are officially estimated to exceed $11,000,000,000 in value.

German Army Unlikely to Turn on Hitler

Reichswehr are welded together because of their common ultimate aims. It is now known that the Illustrierte Beobachter, from which emerged Herr Hitler's Volkische Beobachter, was owned by the Army interests. There was an even more direct link between Hitler and the Reichswher since he was a paid instructor for the new Reichswehr formations during the early days of the Weimar Republic.

Reichswehr Always Controlled.

"It was always the Reichswehr that actually determined German post-war policy. The democratic republic was accepted as long as there was nothing better to replace it, and although the pacifist ideals of the Weimar Constitution were very distasteful to the leading generals, in practice the Republic always did what the Prussian military wanted. Thus the famous "stab-in-the-back" legend was nothing but an attempt to stifle doubts about the semi-divinity of the Prussian generals. The German people could not be allowed to believe that Prussian generals had ever suffered a major defeat. They had to be persuaded, at all costs, that the victory was not lost because the General Staff had vastly underestimated the enemy's strength in the offenses of 1917 and 1918, but because the people, in revolting, had acted contrary to the will of the Prussian generals.

To post-war Germany the Reichswehr appeared as a sphinx; its symbol and its leader was Colonel-General von Seeckt. No one knew in whom and in what he believed. Some particularly naive Republicans and Democrats seriously hoped that their own pacifism might some day penetrate into Reichswehr circles. Now, however, those who believe that the Reichswehr will some day on its own initiative put an end to the National Socialist dictatorship fail to realize what the Reichswehr really wants and what are its political aims.

In reality, all that has happened in Germany is the fulfillment of an old dream of the Prussian military; the entire nation lined up on the drill ground for the needs of war; the submission of all education to military needs; the uniforming of the entire nation and the degradation of the civilian into a ridiculous figure. Above all, the entire national wealth has been placed at the disposal of the war machine. The Prussian military have not forgotten the annoyance of having had to answer the inquiries of ordinary civilians in the Reichstag about individual items of the military budget. Why should the German Reichswehr wish to terminate a State in which the soldier and his wishes are placed above everything else?

Those who believe in the Reichswehr myth claim that the leading generals are ill at ease because of the growing dissatisfaction among the masses, and that they are on the lookout for an opportunity to transform the present state into a legal state. Yet the war clearly demonstrated that the army leadership utterly lacked the ability to break the swift descent into the abyss.

For some time it was rumored that the Reichswehr had resisted the introduction of the "Aryan Clause" in the new army. Yet it has now been ruthlessly put into effect. It was also claimed that the army opposed the party's determination to overpower the churches. Here, too, the believers in the Reichswehr myth have lately quieted down considerably. The Reichswehr leadership gave conspicuous notice that no military delegations were to participate in this year's Corpus Christi processions, while a recent decree of the Minister of War expressly admitted Ludendorff's anti-Christian writings to all barrack libraries.

Moral Claims in Background.

The extent to which the Reichswehr has made moral considerations secondary to the rearmament and militarization of the German people was tragically and irrefutably illustrated by the fact that it made no attempt to avenge the shooting of the innocent Gen. Schleicher and his wife and the equally innocent Col. Bredow. It was satisfied with a private exoneration of those highly placed officers, whom the Nazis had publicly denounced. This course was irreconcilable with the former German conception of military honor. Finally, those who contend that the Reichswehr is compelled for the time being to "keep its sword sheathed" seem to accept the quaint moral concept that anyone can honorably "keep his sword sheathed" in the face of deeds of violence on the part of his fellow citizens.

Ultimate Aims Ambitious.

In contrast to the followers of the Reichswehr myth, we believe that the aims of National Socialism and the ultimate aims of the Reichswehr coincide. Their common aim is complete rearmament, even at the risk of complete exhaustion. Such complete rearmament would be senseless, were German foreign policy to be content with the adjustment of Germany in the framework of present-day Europe. The ultimate aims of both the Reichswehr and the party are far more ambitious than that. In an article in the Viennese publication, Christlicher Standestaat, there appeared the following significant sentence: "The 'myth of the Reichswehr' is actually the 'myth of Prussia'; the rebirth of Germany will not come from Prussia."

To believe in the Reichswehr myth is to renounce the hope that some day, out of the creative depths of the German people, out of its intellectual and moral reserves, there may grow the strength to transform the Nazi-Military dictatorship into a state of law and to regain its honorable place among the great European nations.

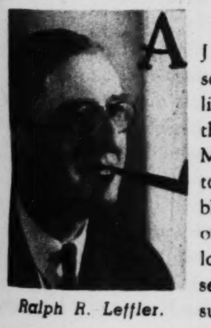
By ROBERT RANDOLPH
Of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine Staff



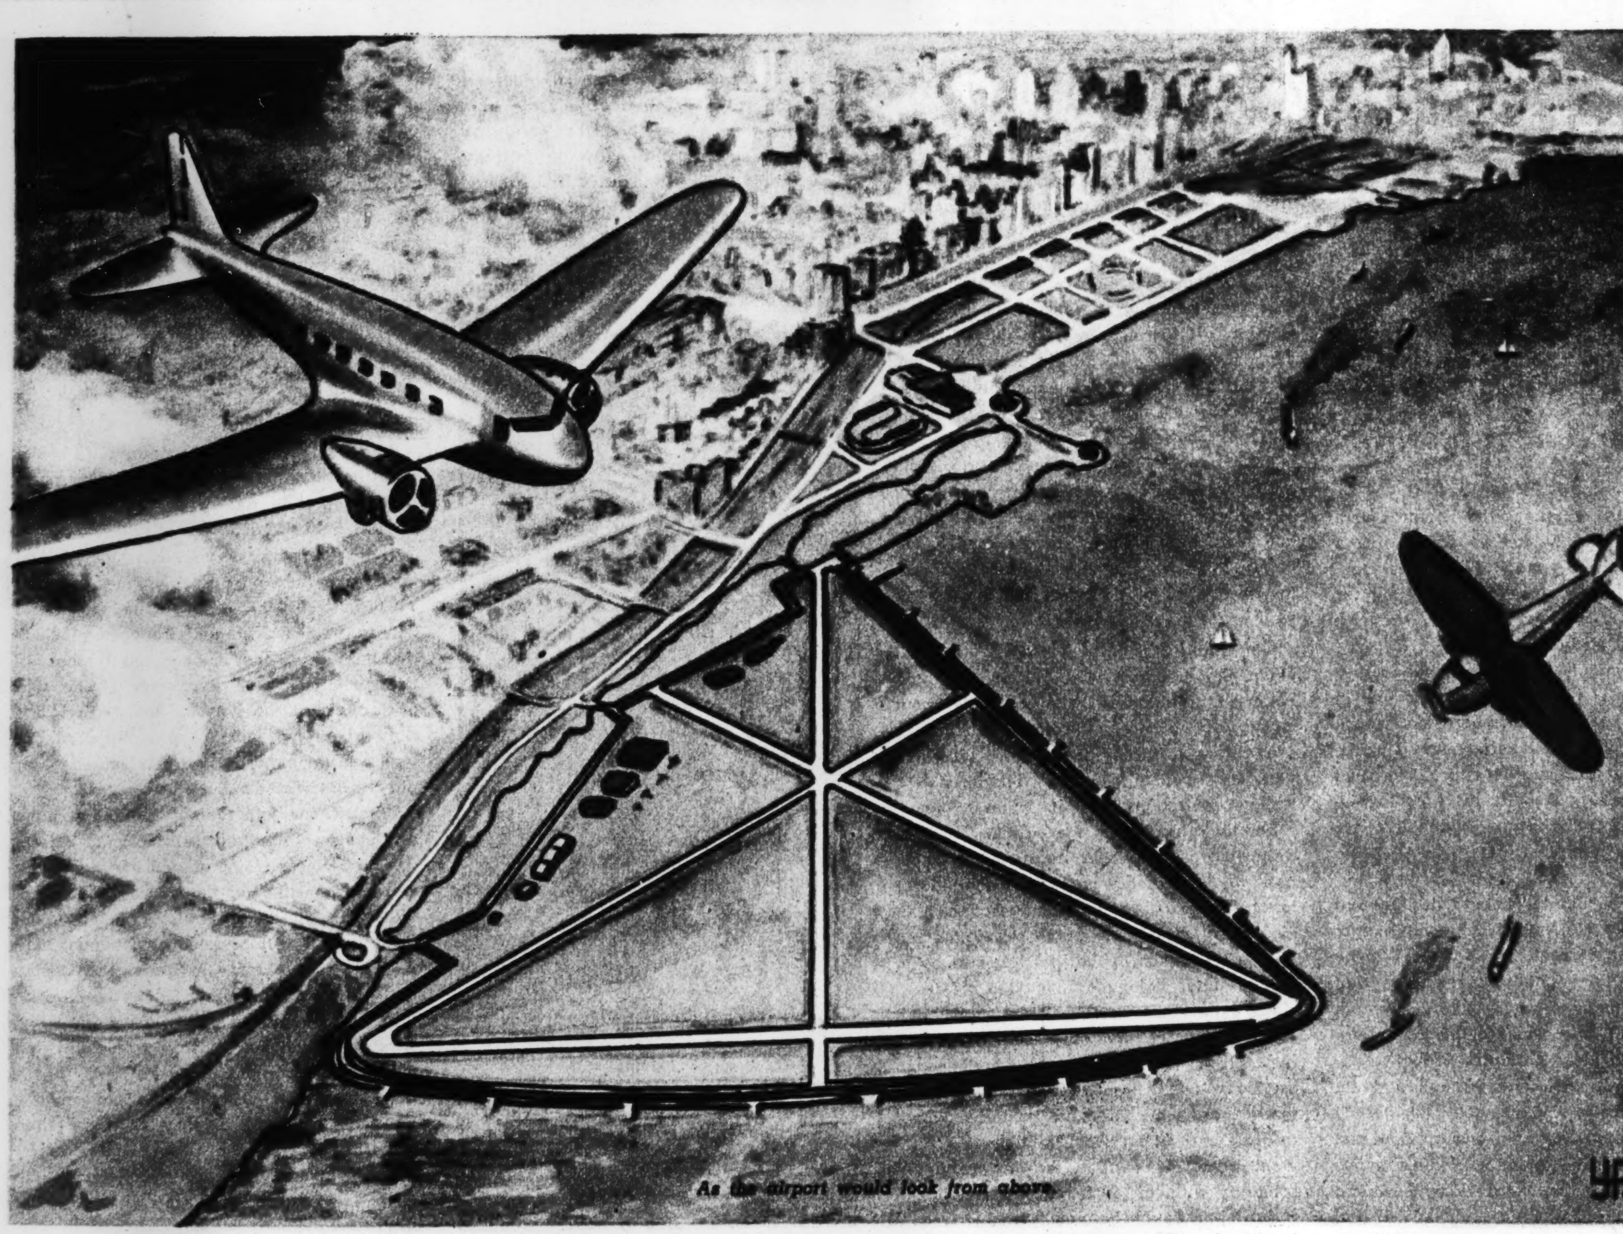
Ralph R. Leffler.

CHICAGO.

A JULES VERNE scene in which air liners shoot up from the bottom of Lake Michigan, appearing to emerge from the blue waters, while others glide down below the water level, seemingly making submarine landings, will become a commonplace in the near future if city officials follow aviation experts in approving the plans submitted by Ralph R. Leffler, chief engineer of structural design for the Chicago Sanitary District. Under Leffler's unique plans, the air liners would be using a triangular sunken airport, 20 feet below the level of the lake, its two and a quarter square miles of dry land protected by dikes extending seven feet above the water level. In contrast with the present airport, 12 miles from "the Loop," it would be only two miles from the heart of the city.

A dike running from Twenty-third street to Forty-first street, a distance of two and one-half miles, and lying from 50 to 600 feet off the mainland, would form an irregular base line for the triangular field. Since the other two sides, extending to the apex two miles out, would be subjected to the fury of Lake Michigan's northeasters, they would be formed by double dikes with moat between. The outermost dike on each side, protected by riprap extending 40 feet from the base, would be 75 feet wide. The second dike, 28 feet across the top, would be parallel to and 100 feet from the first, the intervening space forming a stilling pool where spray and waves from heavy seas would fall.

No matter how severe the storm, water would not be able to get across this 203-foot barrier, according to Leffler. In addition, the stilling pool could be used for bathing. The outermost dike would have ample room for two traffic lanes with parking space on each side and wide steps leading down to the pool.



As the airport would look from above.

Four major runways would criss-cross the surface of the walled-in lake floor, and provision would be made for addition of four more runways when necessary. All would be more than adequate for the largest planes now in use or contemplated since the shortest would be a mile and a half long and the longest, running southeast to northwest, two miles. For 300 feet or so at each end beyond their dead level lengths they would slope up to the tops of the dikes. The grade would be less than two per cent. Each runway would have a paved width of 150 feet. Earth shoulders on the sides, 75 feet paved section in the future. The dead-level portion of each runway would be paved to bear "the load weight plus landing impact on two wheels of the 30-ton ships now being built and of the 50-ton planes of the future," Leffler said. The construction of would be a very simple piece of engineering. The principal reason for this is that the lake bottom in the area he has in mind for the proposed field is composed largely of blue clay. This, Leffler said, eliminates any need of sinking piles — at prohibitive cost be necessary if the bottom there were sand.

Furthermore, about one-third of the site is only 15 or 20 feet below water level, so [illegible] and sand from that area, Leffler pointed [illegible] be used to fill in a large part of the section that is 20 to 30 feet below water level. The runways, of course, would be on fills topped with several inches of concrete or asphalt. The rest of the field would be sodded. Rain and whatever small amount of seepage there might be would be pumped into the Thirty-ninth street conduit, which is 13 feet below water level, by a small pumping station that could be built for $30,000. It would have to lift about five cubic feet of water per second for a distance of only nine or 10 feet.

CONSTRUCTION would proceed in the following manner: The seven-mile perimeter of the field would be surveyed and wooden pilings sunk every hundred feet as guide posts. Sandsuckers would lay a base of sand along the line of pilings.

On shore, hollow cribs about 15 feet wide, 25 to 35 feet deep, and 300 feet long, would be made out of concrete. Some time in May or June, when the northeasters have abated, the cribs would be slid into the water. They would be used only on the two legs of the triangle. Tugboats would guide each monster crib to its station in the line marked by the wooden pilings. As each floated to its proper place, engineers would manipulate the valves in the bottom so that water would slowly enter and carry the crib down to the sand foundation. Once in place, it would be pumped out and filled with sand. Other workboats and barges would start laying the riprap on the outer side while sandsuckers piled sand against the inner side. Nearby, more boats would be driving interlocking steel sheeting, each piece two feet wide, an inch thick and about 50 feet long, for the second dike of the 203-foot barrier. A thousand or 1500 skilled men and a small fleet of boats could finish this work during the spring and summer months, Leffler believes.

Construction of the base-line barrier would be much simpler since it would consist of just a single dike. This would be formed by steel sheetings supported by a 70-foot rampart of clay and sand.

After all dike work was completed, powerful pumpers would carry off the water within the walls. Once the field was dry, or nearly so, a crew of drag-lines and excavators would begin leveling the area; sandsuckers and screw dredges would begin pumping tons of clay and sand in for filler. After that, the work would be much the same as in the construction of any airport.

The sunken airport could be constructed

DROPPED $370,000 BUT COMING BACK for MORE

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

BIARRITZ, France.

THAT much-advertised comeback attempt of Amletto Battisti, the Uruguayan gambler, at the baccarat tables of the Casino Municipal here, was nothing more than a warm-up exercise, and the $370,000 he dropped in two weeks was mere chicken feed, he now contends. He has retired temporarily to Paris to lick his financial wounds, reanalyse his allegedly luck-proof mathematical system, and to howl renewed defiance at his enemies, daring them to come out and fight. Meanwhile he is leaving his bank in the hands of his chief assistant, Antonio Abecassin, to play it in a moderate way until the season here gets into full swing around the first of the year and the really big game appears. Incidentally Abecassin wasn't very successful with the system himself, losing $37,000 the last week of August, before Battisti took over the bank.

The mysterious syndicate which took Battisti for $1,380,000 back in 1929 and on which he is determined to be revenged, has been revealed to be the famous "Greek Syndicate," headed by the undisputed gambling king of the Riviera, Nicolas Zographos. Zographos, whose fortune has soared past the $65,000,000 mark, lives in semi-retirement on his yacht at Cannes. A Frenchman, M. Lachman, is general manager of his gambling salons and his relatives conduct most of his banks. Other henchmen do the betting for Zographos' syndicate at other casinos. So far the "Greek Syndicate" has remained aloof from Battisti's challenge, choosing to sit back and study the Uruguayan's system, but if it does give him satisfaction, probably its steeliest gamblers will be pitted against Battisti, with Zographos directing them by telephone from Cannes.

Battisti's latest setback was particularly disconcerting because it was chiefly at the hands of a woman. When the Uruguayan mathematician came to this famous resort on the Bay of Biscay near the Spanish border in August, accompanied by his lieutenants, he was armed with several million dollars and a supreme confidence in his new system. He issued challenges to his enemies and waited for them to show up. But they didn't, and he let Abecassin handle the bank for him for the first week. When his assistant didn't do so well, he himself took it over to put his system to the test of big money competition.

THEN into the glittering salon walked beauteous, ash-blond, British born Peresha Cortina Solzetra of the Argentine. Straight through the crowds in evening dress she made her way to Battisti's table. Chattering with the excitement of it all, she took a seat while Battisti regarded her coolly. The other punters (opponents of the bank) ahead of Senora Solzetra passed, but she eagerly called "banco" and matched the 1000-franc chips of Battisti's stake on the green cloth.

Baccarat is like black-jack, with eight or nine the "natural." The croupier shuffled the card deck, and passed it to Battisti to deal. When Battisti had flipped two cards to her, and taken two himself, the beautiful Senora was simply devastated. She had hit a nine. The dark, thin, 45-year-old Battisti was suave and imperturbable.

But when she began to hit naturals with startling frequency, with the stakes doubled and redoubled, moisture began to glisten on his forehead. Croupiers were busy raking in her winnings. Habitues of the salon crowded about the table to watch the high stake play, and the tension increased. Other players sensed the turn in his luck and eagerly bet against him. When the game broke up at dawn, Battisti's million-franc winnings (about $37,000) had dwindled to 200 francs. And Senora Solzetra got most of it. One of the other big winners, Ricardo Sandetta of Uruguay, celebrated by passing a hatful of 1000-franc chips around among the lovely creatures who had hovered back of his chair.

Battisti calmly proposed continuance of the duel the next night. Senora Solzetra readily agreed. He did better the next night. He lost only $20,000.

That's the way it went. His luck was no good from then on. He continued to drop $20,000 to $50,000 a night to the blond Senora, until her winnings reached $190,000 and he had lost that much again to other opponents. Her blue eyes starry, she told everyone that she was thrilled, really. Excited about her luck, people peppered her with questions. What was the secret of her play, what was her system?

Finally, she told them. She didn't have any system. She had never played before!

Mystic voices which guided her every day were responsible for her success, she said. "If I win all Senor Battisti's money," she declared, "it will be because I cannot help it. A voice told me to go to the Casino and play. When I play, I don't seem to be alive. I have never played before. I've wanted to ever since I was a little girl, but my parents wouldn't let me."

In hushed tones, she enlarged on this mystical business. "During the hours when I am away from the Casino I am an ordinary person. Then, suddenly, comes the command to go to the Casino. I walk to the table, take a seat without speaking to anyone, and the cards I receive seem just to be dropped into my hands."

Then, with a piety remarkable in such a gilded den of chance, she announced: "I shall give all my winnings to charity. Gambling in itself is immoral, because money brings death to peoples' souls."

Then she announced she was too tired to play the next night. Battisti continued to play and lost. The woman had definitely turned his luck to the bad. That was enough for him. No use fighting fate, even with mathematics. He turned over the bank to his assistant and took a train—"fled" some unkind people said—to Paris, where he announced that in the future he would play under strictly professional rules. These included deposit of a large sum of money as evidence of financial ability to play (the Senora did not put up a cent) and more than five years' gambling experience for each participant.

Battisti was one of many young South Americans who went to the French resorts following the World War when the French Government awoke to the possibilities of the resorts and the various municipalities built gambling casinos. He was born in Montevideo, Uruguay's capital, of Italian immigrant parents, and grew up to become an instructor in mathematics at the University of Montevideo. He made his start on the French Riviera in 1922 with only moderate finances. For several months he tried a lone hand at baccarat and the races in France and at roulette at Monte Carlo, and was so successful that he attracted the attention of M. Marienstrauss, a French bookmaker and gambler, who was then head of a baccarat syndicate which owned the concession in the municipal casinos at Nice, Biarritz, and Enghien, Belgium.

BATTISTI was taken in as a partner by Marienstrauss to play against Nick Zographos and his "Greek Syndicate" men at Marienstrauss' banks at Nice, Enghien and Biarritz, and at Deauville, Monte Carlo and Cannes, where Zographos held the banks. Battisti had startling luck and banked huge sums during the next five or six years. He lived quietly, his only luxury being a beautiful Rumanian girl named Emma Bernstein to whom he made lavish gifts.

From 1926 to 1929 Zographos waged his war with the so-called "Italian Syndicate," which like the "Greek" syndicate, was composed chiefly of Frenchmen. He finally crushed the "Italian Syndicate," taking $13,000,000 from it. His partner, Enzio Voyliano, came out of the struggle a mentally broken man, and died five years later in a sanatorium. Two members of the Italian Syndicate died of excitement at the gaming tables.

The Italian Syndicate disposed of, Zographos turned on Battisti and defeated him, winning $1,300,000 from him during the 1929 season. The next year, Zographos let his second string gamblers do most of the playing, and as a result Battisti recouped some of his losses. He had bad luck again in 1931, however, and after dropping $200,000 in ten days while holding the bank at Frank Gould's Casino de la Mediterranean at Nice, he retired for a rest.

In 1934, as a result of the Stavisky scandal, there was a general drive in France against "undesirable aliens," and many foreign gamblers were ordered out of the country. One was Battisti, who had some powerful enemies. With $2,000,000 in his possession, he went to Belgium and tried to promote a casino at Ostend. Failing that he went to Havana and got the gambling concession at the Casino. But taxes were too large to allow him a profit, so he went home to Montevideo to rest.

There he waited a year until politician friends in France had the expulsion order annuled.. Then he hurried back to France to get his revenge. He may lose his fortune in the attempt, he realizes, but the fever of playing for big stakes is too strong in him to let him settle down, live quietly and enjoy his money.

Mr. and Mrs. John Jacob Astor III.

NEW YORK.

FRANCIS ORMOND FRENCH, father-in-law of multimillionaire John Jacob Astor III and petitioner in bankruptcy a few days ago, says he expects to pick up a position or even a mere job any day now. Then, he feels sure, it won't be long until his $4800 in liabilities are settled—including $126 owed to a Chinese laundry man and 30 cents to the Western Union. If there are any doubts, the effete Mr. French can point out that after he dropped $500,000 in Wall Street in 1923 he lost no time in going to work for the Mogul Checker Cab Company. He became Hackman No. 224,087, late of Newport, Paris and Tuxedo Park, and took the atmosphere of the drawing room to the driver's seat of a taxi.

He was quite willing to work then, but he couldn't forget that he was a cousin of William Vanderbilt and related to Lady Cheylesmore. That inability to forget his relationships far overbalanced his determination to work. And now that same willingness to work has cropped out again, but this time he has another relative since his daughter, Ellen Tuck French, was wed to John Jacob Astor III. In the light of all this, there are some persons who go so far as to smile slightly when they hear Mr. French is even considering manual labor. They feel that he wore his taxi-driver's cap with a little too much of the Newport angle.

An official of the company recalls that: "I took Mr. French in when he was hard up. I gave him a new cab and on the first day he came to work, the office was all cluttered up with reporters and camera men.

"We paid 'Frenchy' as we called him, a dollar an hour. He made $7 the first day, exclusive of tips, which was all right for him. He also made a lot of suggestions, which wasn't so good for us."

Among some of these proposed suggestions were: (1) his offer to wash a taxi in the street; (2) to drive a camera man to the house of his Vanderbilt relatives and photograph them getting into his cab; (3) to drive a cab to the dock the day his ex-mother-in-law returned from Europe and solicit her patronage as a fare.

HE WAS told to stick to driving and forget it. But Mr. French simply couldn't forget his relatives. So he drove up to the Vanderbilt residence and tried to get them to come out by serenading them with loud blasts of his horn. Attracted by the large gathering crowd, a policeman elbowed his way through and demanded to know, "What's going on here?"

Informed that the taxi driver was just trying to attract the attention of his Vanderbilt cousins, the cop replied with Gaelic irony: "Vanderbilt's cousin, eh? Well, I'm the Police Commissioner's nephew and even he can't block my traffic."

This time French got off with only a reprimand. The next time he had a run-in with the law, he was fined $25. The charge was driving too close to a private car. Ironically, when it happened he was on his way to the Amalgamated Taxi Drivers' Association ball. To the press, he expressed his preference for this ball to the one given the same evening at Newport by Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont.

"I have yet to see," he declared airily, "why a French or a Vanderbilt is better or different from a Jones."

But in one of the frequent gab fests around the garage, he stated, "Honestly, boys, I never was really wealthy. I never had more than $500,000 at one time. One of my relatives had 20 millions. If I had just a quarter of that, I'd consider myself well off."

One Julius Martin, delegate of the taxi union, thereupon advised: "Frenchy, you'd better shift into neutral when you talk about money around here. The boys' mechanisms are all upset. They look at $1 bills like you look at century notes. I'll act like a traffic cop and signal you when to stop."

Shortly after joining the cabbies, he was dropped from the social register. To show how whole-heartedly he was on the side of labor, he became quite dramatic at the first meeting of the taxi union that he attended. "I kiss the button of the first labor union to which I have belonged," he cried.

His enthusiasm, however, was short lived. He soon left the taxi business for a try at literature. "There was no experience in driving a cab," he remarked sadly. "The world looks the same from behind a wheel as from a drawing room window. When I went broke, I pounded the pavements in company with an old Navy buddy. He got a job, but I got handouts from friends."

After Eleanor Burrill divorced him, this former dashing young man about town and Harvard graduate had other troubles. He took as his second wife Mary Gavin of Boston and began an earnest attempt at writing. A series of articles he wrote about society did get published. Their literary value was practically nil, interest being entirely in his back stairs revelations. Flushed with what he regarded as success, he said he was going to write a book. When he announced that it was to be an expose of Newport to be entitled "The Cesspool," his family was outraged. His elder daughter Ellen, whom he had given in marriage to the

Then she announced she was too tired to play the next night. Battisti continued to play and lost. The woman had definitely turned his luck to the bad. That was enough for him. No use fighting fate, even with mathematics. He turned over the bank to his assistant and took a train—"fled" some unkind people said—to Paris, where he announced that in the future he would play under strictly professional rules. These included deposit of a large sum of money as evidence of financial ability to play (the Senora did not put up a cent) and more than five years' gambling experience for each participant.

Battisti was one of many young South Americans who went to the French resorts following the World War when the French Government awoke to the possibilities of the resorts and the various municipalities built gambling casinos. He was born in Montevideo, Uruguay's capital, of Italian immigrant parents, and grew up to become an instructor in mathematics at the University of Montevideo. He made his start on the French Riviera in 1922 with only moderate finances. For several months he tried a lone hand at baccarat and the races in France and at roulette at Monte Carlo, and was so successful that he attracted the attention of M. Marienstrauss, a French bookmaker and gambler, who was then head of a baccarat syndicate which owned the concession in the municipal casinos at Nice, Biarritz, and Enghien, Belgium.

BATTISTI was taken in as a partner by Marienstrauss to play against Nick Zographos and his "Greek Syndicate" men at Marienstrauss' banks at Nice, Enghien and Biarritz, and at Deauville, Monte Carlo and Cannes, where Zographos held the banks. Battisti had startling luck and banked huge sums during the next five or six years. He lived quietly, his only luxury being a beautiful Rumanian girl named Emma Bernstein to whom he made lavish gifts.

From 1926 to 1929 Zographos waged his war with the so-called "Italian Syndicate," which like the "Greek" syndicate, was composed chiefly of Frenchmen. He finally crushed the "Italian Syndicate," taking $13,000,000 from it. His partner, Enzio Vagliano, came out of the struggle a mentally broken man, and died five years later in a sanatorium. Two members of the Italian Syndicate died of excitement at the gaming tables.

The Italian Syndicate disposed of, Zographos turned on Battisti and defeated him, winning $1,300,000 from him during the 1929 season. The next year, Zographos let his second string gamblers do most of the playing, and as a result Battisti recouped some of his losses. He had bad luck again in 1931, however, and after dropping [illegible]000 in ten days while holding the bank of Frank Gould's Casino de la Mediterranée at Nice, he retired for a rest.

Whether It Was a Planned Execution or an Act Committed in Self Defense It Was What the Kentucky Neighbors of the Garr Brothers Had Always Feared Would Happen.

"SAVE ME. HE'S GOT A GUN."

SHELBYVILLE, Kentucky.

WHEN, on a November night last year, Mrs. Verna Garr Taylor was shot to death with the revolver of Henry H. Denhardt on the highway between La Grange and Newcastle, everybody wondered what the "Garr boys," brothers of Mrs. Taylor, would do. Many expected that the Garrs, believing that Denhardt had killed their sister, would kill him. There was ground for the expectation. They were high-spirited men with strong family pride and so great was their devotion to their sister that it had been said that they worshiped her. They counted themselves the keepers, according to the Kentucky tradition, of their widowed sister's honor, in defense of which, they believed, she had died.

But disappointing every local expectation they gave Denhardt his day in court. The Court, in its first effort, failed them because juries couldn't agree. Then, on the night before the day when Denhardt would have had his second day in court, the tension broke and they killed him.

Whether it was a planned execution outside the law, as Kentuckians believe, preferring so to believe, or was an act of impulse, as the brothers say, it was the snapping of nerves long held taut.

The three, mature men although throughout Oldham County they are still called the Garr boys, endured the bereavement of their sister's death and the shame of the circumstances under which she died and, with new-found resolution, yielded to the law at the time the vengeance that they felt belonged to them. They sat in court and heard Denhardt's defense that Mrs. Taylor had killed herself. They saw him walk free for a season because of the jury's indecision. They went their ways feeling themselves injured and, during the months that they waited for a new trial to be held, kept hearing that Denhardt had sneered at them and their sorrow, flouting them as feeble avengers and making boastful threats.

The Garr boys remembered these things when for the first time since the trial they came face to face with Denhardt on a Shelbyville street, and he remembered that they hated him and wanted his death. Whether, in that remembrance, he reached for the revolver that he usually carried is beside the point except that it gives color to the Garrs' claim of self-defense. It is doubted down here that they required the spur of a gesture. Remembrance could supply the only spark that was needed.

It was against the wishes of her brothers, Roy, Jack and Dr. E. S. Garr, that Mrs. Taylor, six years a widow and a successful business woman of La Grange, began accepting the attentions which Henry Denhardt, former Lieutenant-Governor and ex-Adjutant-General of the State, pressed upon her. At the age of 61 he had retired from political and military life, and settled upon an Oldham County farm. They knew Denhardt and did not like him. They did not, however, actively oppose her in a matter which they felt could be left to her intelligence and discretion, even when she told them she had reluctantly accepted a ring from him. They noted with satisfaction that she did not wear the ring. She told them that she wore it only when she went out with Denhardt. At other times she concealed it, pinning it inside the bosom of her dress. She went so far as to say that the ring did not mean anything at all to her. Denhardt, she said, had just made her take it.

The three men were pleased when, early in the autumn last year, she told them she had definitely decided that she would not marry Denhardt. She told them, too, that Denhardt had threatened to kill her if she broke with him. They were disposed to do something about that, but Mrs. Taylor said she was not afraid and could take care of herself.

It is the belief that on the night when she was killed Mrs. Taylor told Denhardt that she was through with him and that he forced her to stay with him in his car until it stalled on the highway five miles out of La Grange. It was while they were waiting for help that Mrs. Taylor left Denhardt's car and when a shot was heard she was found lying dead beside the road 640 feet from where the car stood, with Denhardt's army service revolver lying beside her. Denhardt said, when he was tried on the charge of murdering her, that she took the weapon from the automobile pocket and went up the road alone. It was the contention of the Commonwealth that he had followed her up the road and when she repulsed him he shot her and hurried back to the car.

The brothers, following the death of Mrs. Taylor, were more crushed than vengeful. When Denhardt was arrested and indicted, they continued to take the sorrowful view of the situation. Many of their friends frankly advised them to take the law into their own hands, but they shook their heads. It was something that did not, somehow, fit in with their grief. They said that they could best honor their dead sister's memory by letting the law take its course. Friends who would have supported them in any act of vengeance bowed to their decision.

Throughout the trial last April at Newcastle the three brothers sat across a table from Denhardt and watched him in a way that alarmed him. He feared that they meant to do him harm.

HE COMMUNICATED his fears to his lawyers and they conferred with Commonwealth Attorney Kinsolving and J. Ballard Clark, special prosecutor. Clark, long-time friend of the Garr family, pledged the safety of the accused man on the strength of the assurance the Garrs had given him that they would not harm Denhardt. They carried no weapons, he declared, and would not under any circumstances come armed into the courtroom.

Denhardt was so little reassured that, on another day, when he came face to face with Dr. Garr at the top of the courthouse steps, he started back crying, "Save me, he's got a gun."

Officers of the Court surrounded Dr. Garr and he said quietly: "Gentlemen, I have no weapon," and showed that he had none.

There was a feeling when the jury failed to agree that the Garrs would take the case into their own hands, and Denhardt's fears to that effect were greatly intensified. He was greatly relieved to get away from Newcastle unharmed, but afterward, with regained courage, he spoke with contempt of the Garrs and once, in a spirit of bravado, he went to La Grange and blustered about. "The Garr boys say I'm afraid to come to La Grange," he said. "Well, I'm here, ain't I?" This fact is attested by a number of witnesses.

The Garr boys, as it happened, were not in town at the time.

The three received information from time to time that Denhardt had made threats to kill them. They told Clark about it. He reminded them that, even though the law had failed them the first time, they had promised to let it take its course. They assured him again that they would not seek personal vengeance, but reminded him that they could not answer for what would happen if Denhardt attempted to make good his threats against them.

Clark dismissed that. "He's just a big blow-hard," he said. "Don't pay any attention to his threats."

The Garrs, however, had their apprehensions. They felt that some day they would meet Denhardt outside of court and there was no telling what might happen then, for in such a situation they would not trust him and they were not sure that they could trust themselves.

Time passed and they did not meet. Roy was away much of the time attending field trials, for he had followed in the footsteps of his father, E. D. Garr, who was a noted trainer of bird dogs. Jack was away from the scene at his home at Mount Washington, Ohio. Dr. Garr went about the practice of his profession in La Grange and Oldham County. Denhardt, except for the one occasion when he made the blustering visit to La Grange already mentioned, kept well away from there. It was known that of the three brothers Dr. Garr was the one he least cared to encounter because the doctor, shell-shocked in the World War, remained a nervous and excitable man, irascible and subject to sudden angers. Although, considering it a point of honor, he had kept himself well in hand during the trial, there was no doubt that if he had encountered Denhardt anywhere else, he would have been thrown into a frenzy. If that happened Denhardt, cool and practiced in the use of weapons, might have killed him, but he had no wish to do that. Not at least while he was yet facing the charge of killing Mrs. Taylor.

Whether he knew it or not, Denhardt had greater reason to fear Roy Garr. Larger physically and more aggressive than either of his brothers, he had taken more to heart the death of Mrs. Taylor than either of the others. Though months had passed since she was killed he could not speak about her without tears rolling down his cheeks. He was driven by strong emotions. If he and Denhardt, both armed, had met, it is scarcely doubted in La Grange that both would have died.

Jack, the youngest brother, was the least dangerous of the three. He was affable and, by reason of his stammering speech, somewhat diffident. Denhardt had nothing to fear from him.

The second trial of Denhardt was set for Tuesday, September 21, at Newcastle. Roy so arranged his field engagements in Canada and the Dakotas that he returned the Friday before to his home near La Grange. On Monday Jack arrived, driving from Ohio. That day they were driving together attending as they now say to matters of business. At 4 o'clock in the afternoon they drove into Shelbyville, county seat of Shelby County, 19 miles from La Grange, and parked their car just off Main street on narrow Sixth street, across from the Armstrong Hotel, which fronts on Main street.

AT 7 Denhardt arrived at the hotel with Rodes K. Myers of Bowling Green, his chief counsel, for a conference with Denhardt's other lawyers, John M. Berry of Newcastle, and W. Clarke Otte of Louisville. The conference lasted until about 9:30. Then they went downstairs and stood a moment at the curb talking. Berry and Otte drove away. Denhardt and Myers went to a restaurant. They were returning to the hotel, crossing Main street diagonally. The Garr boys, having, as they say, finished the business that brought them to Shelbyville, were about to drive away when they saw Denhardt and Myers under the street light and paused, looking at them.

Myers saw them and his words gave the spark for what followed. In startled and warning tones he exclaimed: "There are the Garr boys." Roy Garr says that at Myers' exclamation, Denhardt dropped his right hand to his hip as though to draw. Roy fired first and, advancing with steely steadiness, continued to fire, standing over Denhardt as he lay at the hotel door, where he had fallen in his flight, and sending a last bullet into him. Dr. Garr joined excitedly in the fray and fired two shots, which, it is considered, probably went wild.

To the policemen when they came Roy handed his empty revolver and said: "I killed him. I beat him to the draw."

That night and through the following days that the Garr boys spent in jail they seemed to know a peace that they had not known since the death of their sister. The tension that had racked them was lifted. They felt they had been the instruments of an act of justice and were content. Even Dr. Garr lost his nervous excitability and was calm.

Whether it had been planned, as the dramatic setup indicated and as everybody believed, or had been set off by a spark, it appealed to local sentiment as dramatically perfect retribution. As such it met with more approval than the reverse, for Denhardt, whether he deserved it or not, had the hatred of many Kentuckians.

This was shown as letters and telegrams poured in, addressed to Roy Garr of "The Garr Boys, Jail, Shelbyville, Kentucky," commending and congratulating them, all based

WASHINGTON.

A FEW years ago a carrot was a substantial thing, short and stocky, relying only on a conscious virtue for its place on the marketing list. The beau ideal of a carrot had a nice color, but no pretensions whatever to a figure. Then the public, intrigued with the new dynamic designing, decided it wanted its carrots as well as its automobiles and railway trains streamlined. The carrot of today, accordingly, is a svelte affair, slender and tapering, its proportions nicely suited to the elegance of the current feminine mode.

Time was, and not so long ago, when broccoli was as strange to American tables as bird's-nest soup. Now this weedy-looking vegtable has come to feel quite at home with corn bread and pumpkin pie; it's a fairly "high style" number in the groceries of this country. Many consumers probably think it's a recent addition to the vegetable kingdom, but it has been an esteemed food in Italy for centuries; it is merely a newcomer, relatively, to markets of the United States.

Tomato juice, so popular nowadays as to be practically ubiquitous as a breakfast drink and as an aperitif, used to be merely something that ran down a person's chin when he ate a summer salad.

For there are fashions in food—particularly in fruits and vegetables—just as there are in clothing, dogs and sin. It is sometimes as difficult to account for the rise to public favor of a certain food style as it is to explain why women crucify their admirers by wearing a certain type of hat. Changes in dietetic habits resulting from medical discoveries are of course an important influence; vitamin researches, for example, undoubtedly did much to promote the vogue of that so-called edible, spinach. Such things, too, as changes in standards of living and of beauty have affected the kinds of things people eat. Whatever the cause in an indivdual case, the fact is that public demand keeps changing in the field of vegetables and fruit, and there is a constant effort on the part of produce growers to meet it—in fact, to create new demands.

In this effort the United States Government plays an important part. The Federal Bureau of Plant Industry of the Department of Agriculture is a prolific source of new things for the menu, its research workers are continually striving to give the American eating world something in the way of fruit or vegetables that it has not known before—some innovation representing improvements in taste, nutritional value or other quality. Increased knowledge of genetics in recent years—of the properties and actions of the genes and chromosomes which determine physical qualities—has been of great service in this work.

The chief interest of the bureau, of course, as Dr. Victor R. Boswell, chief horticulturalist, points out, is in the development of varieties which are definitely improved in certain respects rather than in catering to a public whim concerning shape or color. Also, he says, its task frequently is to acquaint Americans with vegetables or fruit which other peoples have long known and liked, or to revive the popularity of some native product. Its scientists often work in co-operation with State and other agencies.

COMPETITION for markets and the discrimination of consumers both demand finer vegetables, and many of the older varieties once considered satisfactory now are hopelessly out of date and sell at lower prices, Dr. Boswell says, adding that the Department of Agriculture scours the world for breeding stock which will supply desirable characteristics of disease resistance, improved quality, or better "style."

"For instance," the scientist continues, "we have developed numerous new varieties of tomatoes which in addition to being resistant to certain of the many diseases that afflict this plant, also provide the public with a product that tastes better, looks better, and is firmer and meatier. The latter two factors insure the housewife of getting the vegetable to her table in the best possible condition.

"Excellent progress has been made by the Bureau of Plant Industry in breeding wilt-resistant varieties of peas, particularly the large-pod market garden and shipping sorts. New varieties of snap bean will be available to the public soon if strains developed in co-operation with State experiment stations bear out their fine early promise. New varieties of potatoes are available and others are in prospect.

"We are experimenting with potato types which are especially adapted for those ever popular adjuncts of American meals, potato salad and potato chips. We know today—people didn't know it years ago—that certain dishes need a potato of special characteristics for best results. What we are trying to do now is to produce potatoes—and many other vegetables—which have those particular virtues.

"The task of combining in single strains quality and resistance to several diseases is a most difficult and tedious one."

A new hybrid sweet corn, known as Golden Cross Bantam, has been developed. Now the breeders are endeavoring to combine with the disease-resistant qualities of this new variety the added element of earliness. Then both consumer and producer will be excellently served—and a new fashion set.

New varieties of sweet potatoes are being developed by Government scientists who have introduced strains from abroad which insure growers against crop destruction by wilt or "blue stem." The new varieties, it is reported, are not quite so smooth as the old, but are just as good to eat.

MISS HOUSIFF I'D LIKE TO HAVE YOU MEET TWO OF OUR LITTLE FOREIGN COUSINS JAPAN

Dr. Boswell calls attention to the fact that not only do produce fashions change from year to year, and from decade to decade, but they vary considerably in the different parts of the country. Thus, while in one section turnip tops are eaten, and the roots often tossed aside, elsewhere the exact opposite occurs. Somewhat the same situation prevails with respect to beets. In many places the roots only are used, but in the South, for example, the beet greens are in equal demand by the public.

The fact that in one section turnip roots are desired, and in another the greens only, complicates the grower's problem. In the first instance they must develop plants with large, meaty roots. In the second, they must produce an abundance of greens, with definitely less emphasis on the roots. In the solution of this problem the Government is of great assistance.

Plant breeding sometimes means the salvation of an industry. It proved so in the case of lettuce, which was threatened with vast destruction by disease. Today new varieties are available which are resistant to brown blight and mildew. Cantaloupes resistant to mildew also have been developed.

Literally hundreds of new kinds of fruits have been developed—and now are in the process of evolution—in response to the demands of consumers and producers, says H. P. Gould, senior pomologist of the Bureau of Plant Industry.

Especially interesting and important is the work done to supply new varieties of citrus fruits with qualities which make them particularly appealing for certain specific requirements. There are lemons which represent a cross between a lime and a lemon, retaining the best features of each. There is a new variety of fruit called a limequat, which is a cross between a common acid lime and a kumquat.

Another name which probably is a stranger to most persons is "citrangequat," developed as a lime substitute of fair quality and great hardiness for regions with winters too severe for growing either the limequat or the calamondin. Still another citrus variant is called the citrangedin.

Speaking of that fruit, Dr. Gould says "It has been found acceptable by soda fountains for use in preparing 'limeade' which can scarcely be distinguished from the true limeade."

The manner in which science is providing producers and consumers with "new model" varieties designed for specific purposes is indicated in connection with the Nippon orangequat.

"Among the citrus fruits which for centuries have been largely used for crystallizing and preserving," Dr. Gould says, "the kumquat is perhaps the favorite. Its utilization, however, is much more important in Oriental countries, especially in China and Japan, than in the Western Hemisphere. It plays an important part in the dietary of these Oriental peoples, and preparation of the fruits for crystallizing and preserving is a highly developed art which is handed down from father to son through many generations.

"ONE reason why the preserving of kumquats has never reached important proportions here is that the small size of the fruit necessitates a large amount of hand labor in harvesting and preparing it for the final treatment. A somewhat larger fruit having much the same quality as the kumquat, with a peel of mild flavor, would reduce greatly this item of hand labor. A hybrid between the Satsuma orange and the 'sweet' kumquat promises to meet the need for a fruit of this character. It bears no relation to the common citrus fruits. Especially for the home fruit garden the Nippon orangequat has distinct promise, not only as a preserving and crystallizing fruit, but as an 'ade' fruit as well."

A new variety of fruit which is gaining some prominence is the plumcot, which, as its name indicates, is a cross between a plum and an apricot. And then there is that man-devised Youngberry, which combines the pleasing features of the Phenomenal blackberry and the Austin Mayes dewberry. This fruit has proved especially desirable for preservation by freezing.

As a result of the demand for tomato juice, Government scientists now are testing and selecting progeny from crosses made a few years ago to develop disease-resistant varieties of tomato which will give a full, rich volume of juice.

There are two fruits which the public generally considers to be "made" types, or crosses. They are the grapefruit and the Loganberry. Both of these, however, are distinct kinds in their own right, and are found in nature.

THE Mafia had its own accomplished assassins, but when it put a $10,000 price on the head of Detective Bill Quaine its gunmen and stabbers, its bombers and sandbaggers refused to give the fearsome sign of the bitten thumb—the signal that the dreaded society was about to claim another victim. He bore a charmed life, they told Lupo the Wolf, and all thorugh the squalid streets of Little Italy superstitious Sicilians echoed the whispered phrase.

But there were some who did not believe he was more than mortal. Eight of them banded together and called on the Mafia headquarters. Within a few minutes they left to kill Bill Quaine from ambush. The chief told them to use guns although he dwelt longingly on the pleasure it would be to murder the hated detective in true Sicilian style—with a knife and a hundred slashes.

As he did every night Quaine left the One Hundred and Fourth Street Police Station and walked up Third avenue to One Hundred and Sixteenth street. As he approached the elevated structure some instinct told him danger lay ahead. He stood on the sidewalk staring at the pillars and folded his arms, during which motion he drew his revolver, concealing it in the fold of his arm.

He presented an easy target there in the gathering dusk, but still the eight swarthy slayers held their fire because they knew that to miss might mean death. Finally one of the eight became impatient and poked a little bit of his head around the pillar—he dropped with Quaine's bullet in his brain.

The others took flight and a gun battle went on up that congested thoroughfare with bullets ricocheting from the steel elevated structure pillars. Fellow policemen came to Quaine's aid and the would-be murderers were placed under arrest.

Not many men become legends within their own lifetime, but William J. (Happy Jack) Quaine is one and somewhere—perhaps in Dannemora, Alcatraz, Joliet or San Quentin—prisoners rub their jaws in rueful reminiscence and think of that swift meeting with the little stocky man and the equally swift flurry of fists that beat them into subjection.

For only the other day Bill Quaine announced that he was through with it all, after 30 years, and that he wanted only the peace and rest and study he planned to get when he came to this country from Ireland just after the turn of the century. Some time in the next few days Bill will get his formal retirement papers, the Commissioner will shake his hand and the little graying man will walk out of Police Headquarters for the last time.

IN THE Dersim region of East Anatolia, some 200 miles south of the Black Sea and 300 miles west of the Turkish-Iranian border, an end came, a few months ago, to a bit of warfare of which the Western world has heard little. The combatants were Kurdish tribesmen, in armed rebellion against the Government of Turkey, and Turkish soldiers sent to suppress the revolt.

The Kurds of this remote region had never been enthusiastic about the regime of Kemal Pasha Ataturk with its sweeping program of modernization, its insistence on the abandonment of old ways of life in favor of new ways borrowed from Western civilization; and Moslem priests, especially resentful of innovations, had fostered unfriendliness toward the Government, preaching disobedience to the edicts from Angora. Matters reached a crisis when the Government demanded that the tribesmen surrender their arms, permit garrisons to be established in their territory and leave the business of collecting taxes to a Government agent instead of the tribal chief. Five thousand of the Kurds rose in revolt, under the leadership of Seyid Raza.

It was not an easy task to put down that rebellion. The Dersim country is mountainous, well suited to the guerilla type of warfare the rebels waged. From rocky heights Kurdish snipers would busily slay foemen who were trying vainly to reach them. Thirty thousand Turkish regulars found the 5000 rebels more than a handful, and lost 5000 of their own men.

Eventually, however, numbers began to tell. Also the tribesmen developed a considerable dread of the Turkish airplanes. One day early last June a Turkish aviator dropped a bomb on the mud hut of Chief Rebel Seyid Raza. Seyid didn't happen to be at home, but several of his lieutenants were there, and they were quite thoroughly destroyed. The incident seemed to convince the rebels of the futility of further re-

SKETCHES FROM LIFE

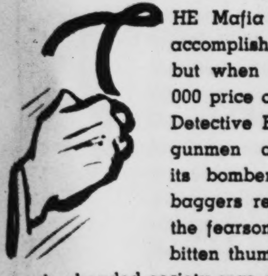
SABIHA GOKCEN)

A Tough Man With His Fists

NEW YORK.



THE Mafia had its own accomplished assassins, but when it put a $10,000 price on the head of Detective Bill Quaine its gunmen and stabbers, its bombers and sandbaggers refused to give the fearsome sign of the bitten thumb—the signal that the dreaded society was about to claim another victim. He bore a charmed life, they told Lupo the Wolf, and all thorugh the squalid streets of Little Italy superstitious Sicilians echoed the whispered phrase.

But there were some who did not believe he was more than mortal. Eight of them banded together and called on the Mafia headquarters. Within a few minutes they left to kill Bill Quaine from ambush. The chief told them to use guns although he dwelt longingly on the pleasure it would be to murder the hated detective in true Sicilian style—with a knife and a hundred slashes.

As he did every night Quaine left the One Hundred and Fourth Street Police Station and walked up Third avenue to One Hundred and Sixteenth street. As he approached the elevated structure some instinct told him danger lay ahead. He stood on the sidewalk staring at the pillars and folded his arms, during which motion he drew his revolver, concealing it in the fold of his arm.

He presented an easy target there in the gathering dusk, but still the eight swarthy slayers held their fire because they knew that to miss might mean death. Finally one of the eight became impatient and poked a little bit of his head around the pillar—he dropped with Quaine's bullet in his brain.

The others took flight and a gun battle went on up that congested thoroughfare with bullets ricocheting from the steel elevated structure pillars. Fellow policemen came to Quaine's aid and the would-be murderers were placed under arrest.

Not many men become legends within their own lifetime, but William J. (Happy Jack) Quaine is one and somewhere—perhaps in Dannemora, Alcatraz, Joliet or San Quentin—prisoners rub their jaws in rueful reminiscence and think of that swift meeting with the little stocky man and the equally swift flurry of fists that beat them into subjection.

For only the other day Bill Quaine announced that he was through with it all, after 30 years, and that he wanted only the peace and rest and study he planned to get when he came to this country from Ireland just after the turn of the century. Some time in the next few days Bill will get his formal retirement papers, the Commissioner will shake his hand and the little graying man will walk out of Police Headquarters for the last time.

His first idea was to put this academic talent to good use in the new world, but jobs were scarce and friends suggested police work. Soon after he joined the force a horse ran away on his beat and he made a spectacular stop. He was leading the frightened animal back to its owner when he heard the screams: "Help, burglar." From the window of a nearby tenement he saw a woman gesticulating toward the roof. Quaine gave a bystander the horse to hold and rushed up on the roof where a giant of a holdup man stood waiting for him.

Almost before the young patrolman was on the roof the gunman was upon him, both arms flailing. He wrestled Quaine to the coping and tried to toss him to the pavement five stories below. It was very nearly the end of a career which was to be incredibly rich in incident, but Bill fought his way back and dropped the gunman with a terrific right. A few more punches and the bandit was a bloody, jelly-jointed mass.

Police Commissioner Richard Waldo was in the precinct station as Quaine came in supporting the huge bandit with his five feet eight of compact strength. He let go to salute the commissioner and his captive slumped to the floor.

"It wasn't a pillow," he moaned.

Waldo wanted to know why Quaine had not used his gun or night stick.

"Why should I when I can handle him with these," Quaine said displaying his small but capable hands.

The Commissioner was impressed and promoted Bill to a detective attached to the One Hundred and Fourth Street Precinct. Although Waldo did not know it he had sounded the death knell of three of the deadliest gangs in the city and the end of Little Italy as a sanctuary for the criminals of the city. Little Italy was the East One Hundred and Fourth Street's precinct.

IN A territory where policemen walked only in pairs, Quaine had a system all his own. He never spared his fists on known criminals and when he saw a police character he merely had to signal to have the unlucky victim stop and reach for the sky. Quaine took his time frisking the offender usually to the accompaniment of piteous protestations that "I've been .going straight" and "Don't hit me, Bill."

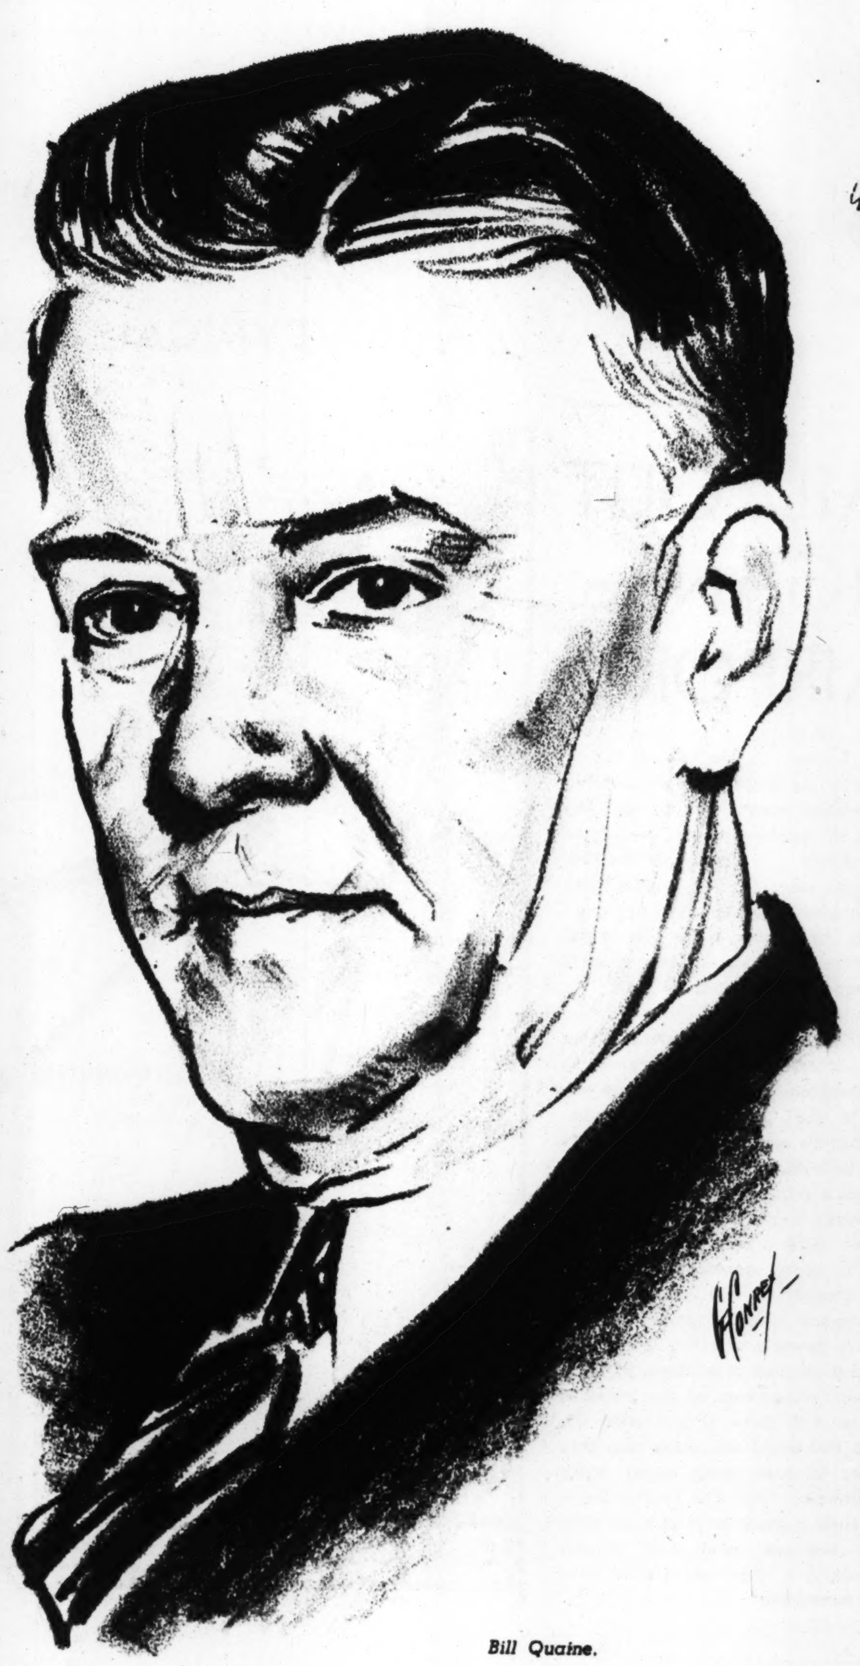
When he first started working out of the One Hundred and Fourth Street Station he made it a point to warn every criminal he met that their next meeting would be the signal for fistic fireworks. At first the toughs and bullies snickered, but a few tastes of Bill's knuckles and they began to leave the district. Gangsters mourning his presence to comrades in crime sometimes referred to him as "the lump squad."

Business people were jubilant when Bill Quaine came to Little Italy, but those two bogey men used by many New York mothers to frighten little children—Lupo the Wolf and Morello the Fox—called meetings of their followers. More than once a knife slithered out of the darkness and quivered into a fence near Quaine's head. And even more often a sniper shot at him from a black alley, from a darkened hallway or a moving automobile. He was never hit, adding to his reputation.

So many were the cases Bill broke, so many the sensational arrests in which he figured that it would take volumes to recount them. But most veterans remember best his epic rout of the "Murder Stable Gang." This band of Italians, determined to keep control of the Little Italy milk supply, assassinated a few drivers and poisoned many horses with doctored apples. They operated from a filthy delivery stable in a back alley.

Quaine rode with milk drivers night after night and finally sighted several suspects. He did not have enough evidence for an arrest, but he did have enough to warrant a "polish"—a few punches. So he caught each suspect and gave him the bare knuckle treatment. Soon fully half of the members left the city in fear of his fists and from the information he pounded out of the others he made several arrests.

Another of his cases was "The Murder Club." An Italian known as "The King" devised this ingenious method of building up a fortune. He would buy into a business and have one of his men murder the partner. In time he had a string of stores. His assassins sat around in a saloon and drew lots to see who would commit the next killing. Quaine solved the case because every time he came into the saloon he saw the same man. This gangster, it later developed, had charge of the arsenal, a secret he disclosed after Quaine had taken him into a room for a little private discussion.



Bill Quaine.

One of the reasons for Quaine's success was that he was comparatively free from political pressure. Once a gambler known as "Spider" reported to his friends that he had come into political influence and would have Quaine transferred. He was offered 20 to one that he was wrong and he accepted. A few nights later Quaine walked into one of "Spider's" hangouts and ushered him into the back room. The detective came out alone rubbing his knuckles.

"All right boys," he said. "You can raise the odds to 100 to one and it will still be safe."

STRANGELY enough Quaine considers himself the black sheep of his aristocratic family and on vacation never mentions his police connection. For many years he passed his leisure weeks in Bermuda. The manager of the hotel at which he stopped once offered him a suite of rooms free of charge if he would remain another week, so much was he in demand as a dinner guest and dancing partner by a group of titled Englishmen and their wives and daughters.

He talks hardly moving his lips, usually in cultured accents, and his one mannerism is rubbing the right side of his nose. All the fingers on both his hands have been broken at least once. Once he caught a man wanted for robbery; the prisoner was sent to Bellevue with six broken ribs and complications; Quaine remembers hitting him only once.

He has been charged with brutality to prisoners more than once, but it is his code to be harsh with those he considers malefactors. On the other side of the ledger he is tender with those he likes. He has got 1000 men and women jobs, has helped out many girls and convicts who wanted to go straight. He has given away much of his salary to families in distress. On spring days he used to sit in front of the station and help children with their lessons.

Once a police captain questioned his theories.

"You are a fine officer, Mr. Quaine," the captain said, "but I think you are a little cruel. Don't you realize that some day you will die and come before the Divine Creator to be judged for your labors on earth?"

"Captain," the detective replied, "I believe the Divine Creator put me here for a purpose—to whip these blankety blank sons of so and so's into line so they can also go before Him and be judged for their labors on this earth."

The Turkish Amazon of the Air

ANGORA, Turkey.

IN THE Dersim region of East Anatolia, some 200 miles south of the Black Sea and 300 miles west of the Turkish-Iranian border, an end came, a few months ago, to a bit of warfare of which the Western world has heard little. The combatants were Kurdish tribesmen, in armed rebellion against the Government of Turkey, and Turkish soldiers sent to suppress the revolt.

The Kurds of this remote region had never been enthusiastic about the regime of Kemal Pasha Ataturk with its sweeping program of modernization, its insistence on the abandonment of old ways of life in favor of new ways borrowed from Western civilization; and Moslem priests, especially resentful of innovations, had fostered unfriendliness toward the Government, preaching disobedience to the edicts from Angora. Matters reached a crisis when the Government demanded that the tribesmen surrender their arms, permit garrisons to be established in their territory and leave the business of collecting taxes to a Government agent instead of the tribal chief. Five thousand of the Kurds rose in revolt, under the leadership of Seyid Raza.

It was not an easy task to put down that rebellion. The Dersim country is mountainous, well suited to the guerilla type of warfare the rebels waged. From rocky heights Kurdish snipers would busily slay foemen who were trying vainly to reach them. Thirty thousand Turkish regulars found the 5000 rebels more than a handful, and lost 5000 of their own men.

Eventually, however, numbers began to tell. Also the tribesmen developed a considerable dread of the Turkish airplanes. One day early last June a Turkish aviator dropped a bomb on the mud hut of Chief Rebel Seyid Raza. Seyid didn't happen to be at home, but several of his lieutenants were there, and they were quite thoroughly destroyed. The incident seemed to convince the rebels of the futility of further resistance—to break the spirit of the rebellion. Soon afterward the Kurds surrendered and the insurrection was over, even though Seyid Raza himself remained at large until September 13, when starvation forced him to surrender.

Turkey has acclaimed as a worthy addition to its national heroes the flyer who dropped the conclusive bomb on the rebel chieftain's hut. And it has given its praise with a special enthusiasm because of the fact the flyer is a woman. She is Sabiha Gokcen, who is a foster daughter of President Kemal Ataturk and first lieutenant in the Turkish Flying Corps. She is 22 years old and the first woman to be commissioned a regular officer in the nation's military aviation service. For her exploit in the Kurd rebellion the national Assembly of her country has awarded her the Flying Medal in Diamonds, for "conspicuous gallantry," Turkey's highest aviation decoration. This was the first time it had been bestowed since 1931, when it was given to Russell Boardman and John Polando for their nonstop flight from New York to Istanbul.

The career of Lieutenant Gokcen is of particular significance because it affords concrete evidence of the amazing transformation in the status of Turkish women that has taken place since the rise of Kemal Ataturk to power. Here is a woman, whose life formerly would have been confined to the harem, winning distinction in the most masculine of professions.

Sabiha's father was a captain in the Turkish army. A comrade-in-arms of Kemal Pasha, he died in 1921 during the war between Greece and Turkey in Asia Minor. Soon afterward her mother died. The orphan was adopted by Kemal Ataturk, who had become head of the Turkish Government. She was one of the six orphaned children he adopted to brighten his home after his divorce from Latife, the writer. Five of the orphans were girls, all daughters of soldiers killed in the Greek war. The sixth was a shepherd boy whom Ataturk happened to notice in an interior village. One of the adopted daughters, Sehra incidentally, was killed in 1935 when she fell from a London-Paris express train.

Sabiha attended school in Angora, the capital, and in Istanbul, and the American College in the latter city. Strange as it seems in view of her later interests, she became skillful at embroidery and showed talent in painting. But she was a modern Turkish girl, as were her adoptive sisters. They scorned the traditional veil, wore smart gowns from Paris, and used the powder and rouge of the West. Afit, eldest of Ataturk's foster daughters, was his official hostess.

SOCIAL pursuits failed to satisfy Sabiha. In her teens she determined to be a flyer, and she finally prevailed on her foster father to send her to Soviet Russia to take a course in flying and gliding. On her return, two years ago, she took an examination and received a pilot's license.

The next step was beset with difficulty. She wanted a commission in the Flying Corps, but Ataturk was opposed to accepting women in the regular army. Many of the emancipated Turkish women, however, wanted just that done, and Sabiha joined the movement directed to that end. She helped to get up a petition signed by a tremendous number of women in which they asked that members of their sex be admitted to telephone, radio, transportation and other army services. Ataturk received the petition, but didn't let the ladies in the army.

In the spring of 1936 something happened to change his mind. Army maneuvers were held at that time, and Sabiha persuaded a colonel in the Flying Corps to let her fly her own private plane in his outfit, which had, of course, its special assignment in the war game that was being played. In the handling of this air unit's task Sabiha conducted herself brilliantly, showed that a woman could capably carry out military duties. Ataturk was proud of his daughter—and apparently convinced that she had proved her point. He ordered a military school for women opened, and let Sabiha enter the army's aviation school at Eski-Chehir, becoming the school's first girl cadet.

When Sabiha graduated this spring she was commissioned as a regular officer in the Turkish Flying Corps, the first woman to hold such a position. She volunteered for service in the campaign against the Kurdish rebels.

"Turkey's Flying Amazon," as she is often called since her bombing exploit, is now attached to the Yestilkeny Airdrome, outside Istanbul, as a flying instructor. Her duties don't require it, but she does a lot of daring stunting, which always attracts a crowd of gaping—and gasping—spectators. But this young woman has nothing of the swaggerer or the hard-boiled dare-devil about her appearance or manner. She is rather shy in demeanor and soft spoken. Her face is gay and surrounded by a mass of brown hair. She is feminine—and a feminist, judging by her recent remarks to an interviewer.

"My conception of modern womanhood," she said, "is that of my beloved father, President Kemal Ataturk. The women of today must be free. They must have access to all careers once reserved to men. They must enjoy equal rights with men, become Deputies and stateswomen, but also remain good wives and mothers."

for less than $20,000,000, Leffler asserted, as compared with $70,000,000 required under another proposal, to make an island, by filling, for a smaller airport in the same locality.

Four and one-half miles of twin dikes at $1,750,000 a mile — — — $8,000,000

Two and one-half miles of single dike at $600,000 a mile — — — $1,500,000

Six and three-quarter miles of paved runway at $440,000 a mile — $3,000,000

Two miles of sloping runway at $750,000 a mile — — — — $1,500,000

Half a mile of jetties and breakwaters — — — — — — — — $1,000,000

Three bridges to mainland, control tower, hangars, pumping station, shops for minor repairs, landscaping — — — — — — — — $2,000,000

Total, not including paving of future runways or pleasure drives on dike top — — — — — — — — $18,500,000

In citing the advantage of the lake-bed airport, Leffler particularly stressed the fact there are no tall buildings near it and that it would put the city within six minutes of plane service instead of the 50 now required to reach the Municipal Airport. In his letter to Mayor E. J. Kelly, he wrote, "My engineering and aviation friends tell me that the method of construction and the layout . . . shown . . . is by far the best they have seen. . . ." Among these persons who have expressed approval, he said, are officers of the Illinois National Guard aviation unit and officials and engineers of various air lines.

LEFFLER, Sanitary District engineer for 16 years, supervising 85 bridges and the pumping stations in the Chicago area, emphasized that his airport proposal had nothing to do with his official capacity and was just a suggestion the same as that any citizen might make.

"I do think," he said, "that it is sound in every respect and would be much cheaper as well as superior to the proposed island airport. It is certainly in keeping with the progress of the times—in fact it is ahead of them. A casual comparison of my proposed runways with those of any other airport in the world will show that they are two to three times longer, wider and stronger. That it is practicable to build such a superior airport so close to the business center and railway terminals of a large metropolitan area seems incredible."

on the assumption that the death of Denhardt had been an execution outside the law, well planned and well carried out. But it was not that, Roy Garr says. He said it to Ballard Clark, his lawyer and friend, when Clark hurried to Shelbyville jail to see him. "Ballard," said Roy, "I had no notion in the world that Denhardt was in Shelbyville until I saw him there under the street lamp and saw his hand go to his hip."

It is beside the point, as Roy Garr looks at it, that there was no revolver in Denhardt's pocket. It is sufficient for him that Denhardt, as he says, made a move to draw. It might have been a bluff. More likely it was the involuntary movement of a man who habitually wore a weapon, but this time had left it in his room.

At the examining trial the three Garr boys were calm. They shook the proffered hands of friends and smiled at other friends they saw seated, and listened undisturbed to the testimony for the Commonwealth which was intended to show that they had killed Denhardt in the carrying out of a plan.

They gave their testimony quietly and gave every sign of satisfaction and peace of mind over what had happened.

Roy told of a time at a hotel at Eminence, during the first trial, when at luncheon with his two nieces, daughters of Mrs. Taylor. "Denhardt walked in," he said, "and when he saw me he backed out of the dining room with his hand at his hip."

The hearing was merely for the purpose of determining whether the Garrs should be admitted to bond. When the proof had all been presented Judge Walters said: "The proof is not evident or the presumption great enough to hold these men without bond."

THERE was a wild demonstration of approval. Men cheered and women clapped their hands and many wept. The two daughters of Mrs. Taylor, Frances Taylor and Mrs. Mary Pryor Brown, threw their arms about their uncles and kissed them. Hundreds crowded about the brothers to congratulate them.

The bonds were fixed at $20,000 each for Roy and Dr. Garr and $10,000 for Jack Garr. Dozens of men asked for the honor of signing the bonds. Six were accepted and the others turned away disappointed.

When the Garr boys are tried for the murder of Henry Denhardt the verdict will be, nobody doubts, justifiable homicide—self-defense—but the case will go down in the memories of Kentuckians as an execution outside the law.

Astor scion and who had since borne an Astor heir, was up in arms against him. So was his younger daughter, Virginia. They were angry enough when he invited his old Harvard classmate, Ernst F. Hanfstaengl, Hitler's press agent, to Ellen's wedding, but his proposed book was the final act that estranged him from his daughters.

Young Astor was so distressed over his father-in-law's literary activities that he told him: "If you publish that book, I won't let you in my home." The answer: "I don't want to get into your home. I never liked big houses, anyway."

But before Mr. French was able to do anything about his book, his second wife suddenly left him. That happened on August 13, the day after he declared himself bankrupt.

"I argued and argued with him against going into bankruptcy for $4800," she explained. "But he wouldn't listen to me and I can no longer stand things the way they are. I've stood by him through a lot of unpleasantness—and believe me, there has been a lot. This, however, is just too much."

A few days ago, however, she told reporters at her rooming house in Boston that "everything seems to be wonderful now. I've just had a lovely letter from Frankie." All "Frankie" had to say was that he had written her to be careful that she did not injure her health by too strict a diet. "I told her to eat more potatoes," he added.

He sits at home today, taking his misfortunes philosophically, perhaps even whimsically, for he said: "I'm going to find some kind of work and work at it like hell until I've paid off everybody 100 per cent."

PREHISTORIC SEA CREATURES

By WALTER DAHLGREN

Fascinating are the tales, both current and legendary, of those dwellers of the deep called "sea serpents." This big PLESIOSAUR might indeed have given rise to all these wonderful stories—except that the species disappeared completely millions of years before even the most ancient of mariners came into being. It was the sailorman's delight to imagine such creatures, and maps drawn in olden days were decorated with such fancies. Even today strange tales are told of sea serpents having been seen. Upon scientific investigation, however, these always turn out to be something else—usually a peculiarly shaped log floating upon the water. But that does not discourage the next imaginative person who sees an odd shape dimly silhouetted against the dusk!

The two smaller creatures are ICHTHYOSAURS (meaning "fish lizard") which were probably a menace to the fish of the ancient seas. ● This is another of a series of prehistoric animals — save them all for a complete Prehistoric Paste-Up World.

DIRECTIONS ● Mount page upon a piece of thin cardboard and then cut out the parts. Be sure to cut all the slits indicated also. Folding upon the dotted lines will bring parts into proper position to be pasted (stars indicate where to put paste). We'll paste up the large, snaky Plesiosaur first: Paste the tabs on the back to their proper position inside the body—then paste the two sides of the tail together. Now paste the triangular piece, "A" (on the neck at left of page), upon triangle "B." Then tab "C" is pasted to the inside of first neck—then paste the two necks together. Insert the neck up through the cut-out opening on the body and paste the four tabs to the inside of the body. Give the tail a "wiggle" and the creature is completed. Now for the two Ichthyosaurs: Fold on dotted lines and paste the two sides together. The fins are then inserted (so that they point backward) into the slots—the large fins into the forward slots and the smaller ones into the rear slots. Fold fins down on each side to make the fish stand, and they are completed.

I've tried so hard, and it's a shame,
I could not find a simple name—
To give this creature of the past;
Till finally, quite at the last—
I let it BE a PLESIOSAUR,
For after all, that's what they are!
Fish Lizards are the other two—
The briny deep their rendezvous.
And there they spent the livelong day
In search of food and sportive play!

HICKORY HOLLOW FOLKS

And the Things They Do

By WALTER QUERMANN

A REFORMED OPOSSUM

THE CHARACTERS

O. HUM—A badly puzzled opossum.

Folks who steal things and who don't tell the truth are always in trouble. O. Hum is a good example of this. The other day he couldn't resist the temptation to steal one of Hilda Hoarder's pies. And when that honest little squirrel caught him with it he told her that Rip Rackey, a grouchy old raccoon, stole it and had given it to him. Now O. Hum knew that Rip would be very angry at him for telling such a story, and he was very careful to keep out of sight whenever Rip was around. But in spite of his watchfulness, Rip finally caught him and threw him into Crooked Creek and O. Hum unwittingly swam up the creek to Crooked Land, where his arms and tail became very crooked. Poor O. Hum. At first he was very much alarmed, then he grew terribly ashamed and hid his arms and tail under a big cloak of lies and went to live in Lie Land. But the Wind of Truth blew away his disguise and O. Hum continued his wanderings in these bad lands. At last the somewhat crooked road he had been following divided, and we see him trying to make up his mind as to which path he should take as

THE PLAY BEGINS

O. HUM—Gee, one of these paths is awful crooked, and it seems to go back to Crooked Land—Gosh, I don't ever want to go there again. And this other path seems to go to a much nicer place. But it's so straight and narrow, I'm afraid I'll fall off of it. And I won't go back to Lie Land. Hm-m-m. I guess I'll take this straight and narrow path—maybe if I watch my step I'll be able to stay on it. (And O. Hum starts walk- on the straight and narrow path. Once or twice he thought he was going to fall off of it, but somehow he managed to stay on. And after a while, much to his surprise and delight, he found himself back in Hickory Hollow and, what is more, his arms and tail were no longer crooked. Gosh, but O. Hum was happy and you may rest assured that from now on he'll always take the straight and narrow path.)

The Bottom Dropped Out of This Wheat Farm

Convulsion of Nature in Kansas That Had the Scientists Puzzled.

POTWIN, Kansas.

ALLIE FOULK was talking with another fellow the other day about the weather. Rain was mentioned—it usually is when Kansas farmers talk, for that's the kind of weather that is frequently in considerable demand out here. But Foulk said he wasn't in any particular need of rain. Then he pointed to a wheat field about half a mile from the road where they were standing. "I've got a big water hole over yonder in that field," he said.

They walked over to the water hole. It had appeared—at least, Foulk had first noticed it—earlier that afternoon, when he was planting wheat in the 60-acre field. Foulk was driving a tractor and a helper was running a planter. As he was making a wide swing with the tractor, Foulk saw a piece of ground nearby drop out of sight. He hurried his heavy machine away from there, then returned to see what had happened. He found a deep hole, about 25 feet in diameter, in the earth. It was slowly becoming larger, as its edges fell in, and up from the bottom water was spurting. He thought this was very interesting and quite strange. But there was work to be done, so presently he went on with his task of planting wheat.

As the visitor and Foulk approached the water hole, it grew bigger. Great masses of earth sank into the pit. Standing a little distance away, they watched uneasily this mysterious sinking—watched chunks of the earth's surface, tons of soil, break off from the rest of the land, topple and fall 30 feet into an ever-widening, churning pool of muddy water. Soon the chasm was 75 feet across.

At nightfall, bits of the wheat field were still disappearing, swallowed by the spreading pit. By this time, news of the unexplained phenomenon had got about, and sightseers began gathering at the scene, which is about a mile and a half northwest of Potwin. Some of them tied ropes to their automobiles and clung to these safety lines when they approached the edge of the sunken area. They said it might be a bottomless pit. The waning moon came up, and in its pale, uncertain light the spectacle of segments of apparently solid ground dropping and sliding with no known cause into the dark sub-surface pool took on a special weirdness.

By daylight the crumbling of the edges of the depression had slowed. The sun came up and details of the freak of nature became clear. Eighteen hours after the water hole had first been noticed, the cavity in the flat table land of the wheat field was nearly 150 feet long and 100 feet wide, roughly oval. It was filled to within about 30 feet of the top with water, which was now a clear green. Along most of its perimeter the sides of the pit rose almost straight up from the water but at one end the bank was a gentle slope.

A few of the more adventurous sightseers climbed down this slope and were in the pit when two sections of this unsubmerged ground sank out of sight. They hastily clambered up to solid ground—and remained at a respectful distance from the edge while they watched more land crumble away.

For a time no one had any idea how deep the water was in the pit, but the surface movement of sticks, straw and foam indicated that it came from a stream with a strong current. Later, soundings disclosed the water was 15 to 20 feet deep around the edge of the cavity.

The size of the depression increased very slowly after the first 24 hours, and after a few days no further sinking of the ground was observed. The hole in the wheat field measured then 175 feet by 125 feet, and the depth of the water in it was found to be 35 feet.

Crowd of sightseers continued to travel State Highway No. 196 to the farm, but before the wonder was well into its second day they were barred from close view of the phenomenon. Foulk and the owner of an adjoining farm, Charles R. Joseph, didn't want people tramping over newly planted ground, and, with the backing of Sheriff Tom Turner of Butler County, forced the curious to content themselves with what they could see from the highway.

The 60-acre wheat field which has lost part of its acreage is on land owned by George Wilkinson of Illinois and farmed as a tenant by Foulk. The rest of the land farmed by Foulk is rented from Joseph. The region is known as the Whitewater Bottoms. On one side of the bereft wheat field is the Whitewater River; on another side is Dry Creek. Both streams were swollen by rains not long ago.

Geologists from Wichita, center for 20 years or more of a considerable oil development, visited the Potwin pit and tried to account for this strange sinking of a section of the earth's surface, similar to that which took place recently near Buhl, Idaho—an event for which no entirely satisfactory explanation has been made public.

WHILE declining to say with certainty what caused the collapse at Potwin, the Wichita geologists came to agreement on a theory, which is, substantially, this:

A subterranean body of water formed a cavern under the wheat field. This might have come about through the action of acid-carrying ground water on shale containing gypsum; such shale is common in this region. The dissolving effect of the acid would weaken the roof of the cavern until it could no longer bear the weight above it. And when the roof gave way, the ground above it naturally sank. A good many small holes caused in this way are scattered through Kansas and Oklahoma; geologists have come to take them as signs of gypsiferous shale.

Why the water in the pit was green puzzled the geologists. Two of the last additions to the pit filled quickly with water heavily laden with mud; it had a circular motion, which led to the belief that these parts of the cavity opened directly into the subterranean body of water.

With the cessation of surface sinking it was thought that the underground cavern or caverns had been filled and that the danger of any extensive collapse of the land in the neighborhood was over.

Perhaps more alarm would have been felt if a sink hole or cave-in had been without precedent in Kansas. But Kansans have been hearing of such disturbances for half a century at least. Back in the eighties the bed of Bear Creek collapsed at a place south of Lakin, and a herd of cattle drowned in the suddenly-formed lake. Nearly 30 years ago several pits appeared in the farm of Abe Reiger near Whitewater, and the occupants abandoned the place for a while. Fifteen years ago, a piece of land 10 miles northwest of Peabody fell into an underground lake. A few years later, east of Sharon Springs, a river flowing beneath the Smoky Hill River ate away limestone formations separating the upper layer of earth from the underground stream, and a piece of land some 200 feet in diameter sank into the lower river. Geologists think many freakish topographical formations in Kansas were created in a similar way.

When the big cave-in occurred this was how the process looked to the eye and to the camera.

With "acid indigestion" it stands to reason that the longer it goes, the worse it gets—and the harder it is to alkalize. Therefore, act at the first sign of distress.

If you would relieve and "head off" nausea, "upset stomach," heartburn, gas, the thing to do is alkalize immediately.

Try this quick-acting way: take two Phillips' Milk of Magnesia tablets—or two teaspoons of the liquid which have the same alkalizing effect. Almost at once you feel "acid indigestion" curbed. "Acid headaches," acid breath, pains from acid indigestion—all are given amazingly fast relief. You feel like a different person.

When you're going out carry your alkalizer with you—always—in tablets. They taste like peppermint. They cost 25¢ for 30. When you buy insist on Genuine Phillips'.

a Waterman's

Typical of Waterman's fine quality pens is the De Luxe Ink-Vue for men. The pen that tells you when to refill. In attractive Emerald-Ray, Copper-Ray and Jet. Pens $8.50—Pencils $4. Other Waterman's Pens, $2.50 to $10. Pencils to match, $1 to $5

IT STARTS at the crack of a gun!

You don't shake it. . . You don't coax it. . . Merely touch it to paper and it begins to write . . . every time.

The reason? It's the famous Waterman's Super Point! This actually passes through 80 separate operations and is hand polished under a magnifying glass before final perfection. It is made throughout of 14-K gold, tipped with hard and costly iridium. Then this Super Point is fitted to Waterman's patented Capillary Feed that keeps the ink always free-flowing, responsive to every writing movement.

Match a Waterman's against any other pen—see how much faster it starts. Match it on any basis. Size for size, price for price, Waterman's Ink-Vue Pens invariably hold more ink because of Waterman's Double-Action Lever that locks without losing ink, thus filling the pen to 100% capacity. And, of course, the ink is always visible in the Waterman's Ink-Vue line.

You'll find a wide selection of colors and designs with built-in beauty that speaks for itself. See your local dealer for the pens of TOMORROW today!

THEY'VE GOT US 20 TO 14, NED—WE'VE GOT TO GET THIS TOUCHDOWN!
ONLY TWO YARDS FOR A FIRST DOWN, BRANT—IT'S UP TO YOU!
LET'S GIVE 'EM THE OL' STONE WALL AGAIN, BOYS!
C'MON, PAL—LET'S GET THE TWO YARDS!
GO, NED, GO!
NAIL BRANT!
THEY GOT HIM—HE'S DOWN!
HE'S DOWN—BUT HE WENT TO THE 9-YARD LINE!
WATER!
I GUESS WE'RE BEATEN WITH BRANT GONE!
NOT BY A LONG SHOT! WE'RE GOING TO WIN THIS GAME FOR NED BRANT!
JAKE THE TRAINER
SIGNALS—27—85—53—48—
I'M SORRY I LET YOU DOWN, FELLOWS—I LOST THE GAME FOR CARTER!
BUT WE DIDN'T LOSE—WE WON, 21 TO 20!
YOU—YOU WON?
DON'T TRY TO GET UP, NED—WE WON ALL RIGHT, AND IT WAS THAT LAST SMASH OF YOURS THAT MADE IT POSSIBLE!

Putting every ounce of his remaining strength into the drive, Ned Brant shot forward like a projectile toward that big Coleraine line.

But Ned Brant lay still when the players piled off him. Bud Shekels rushed to kneel beside his motionless friend.

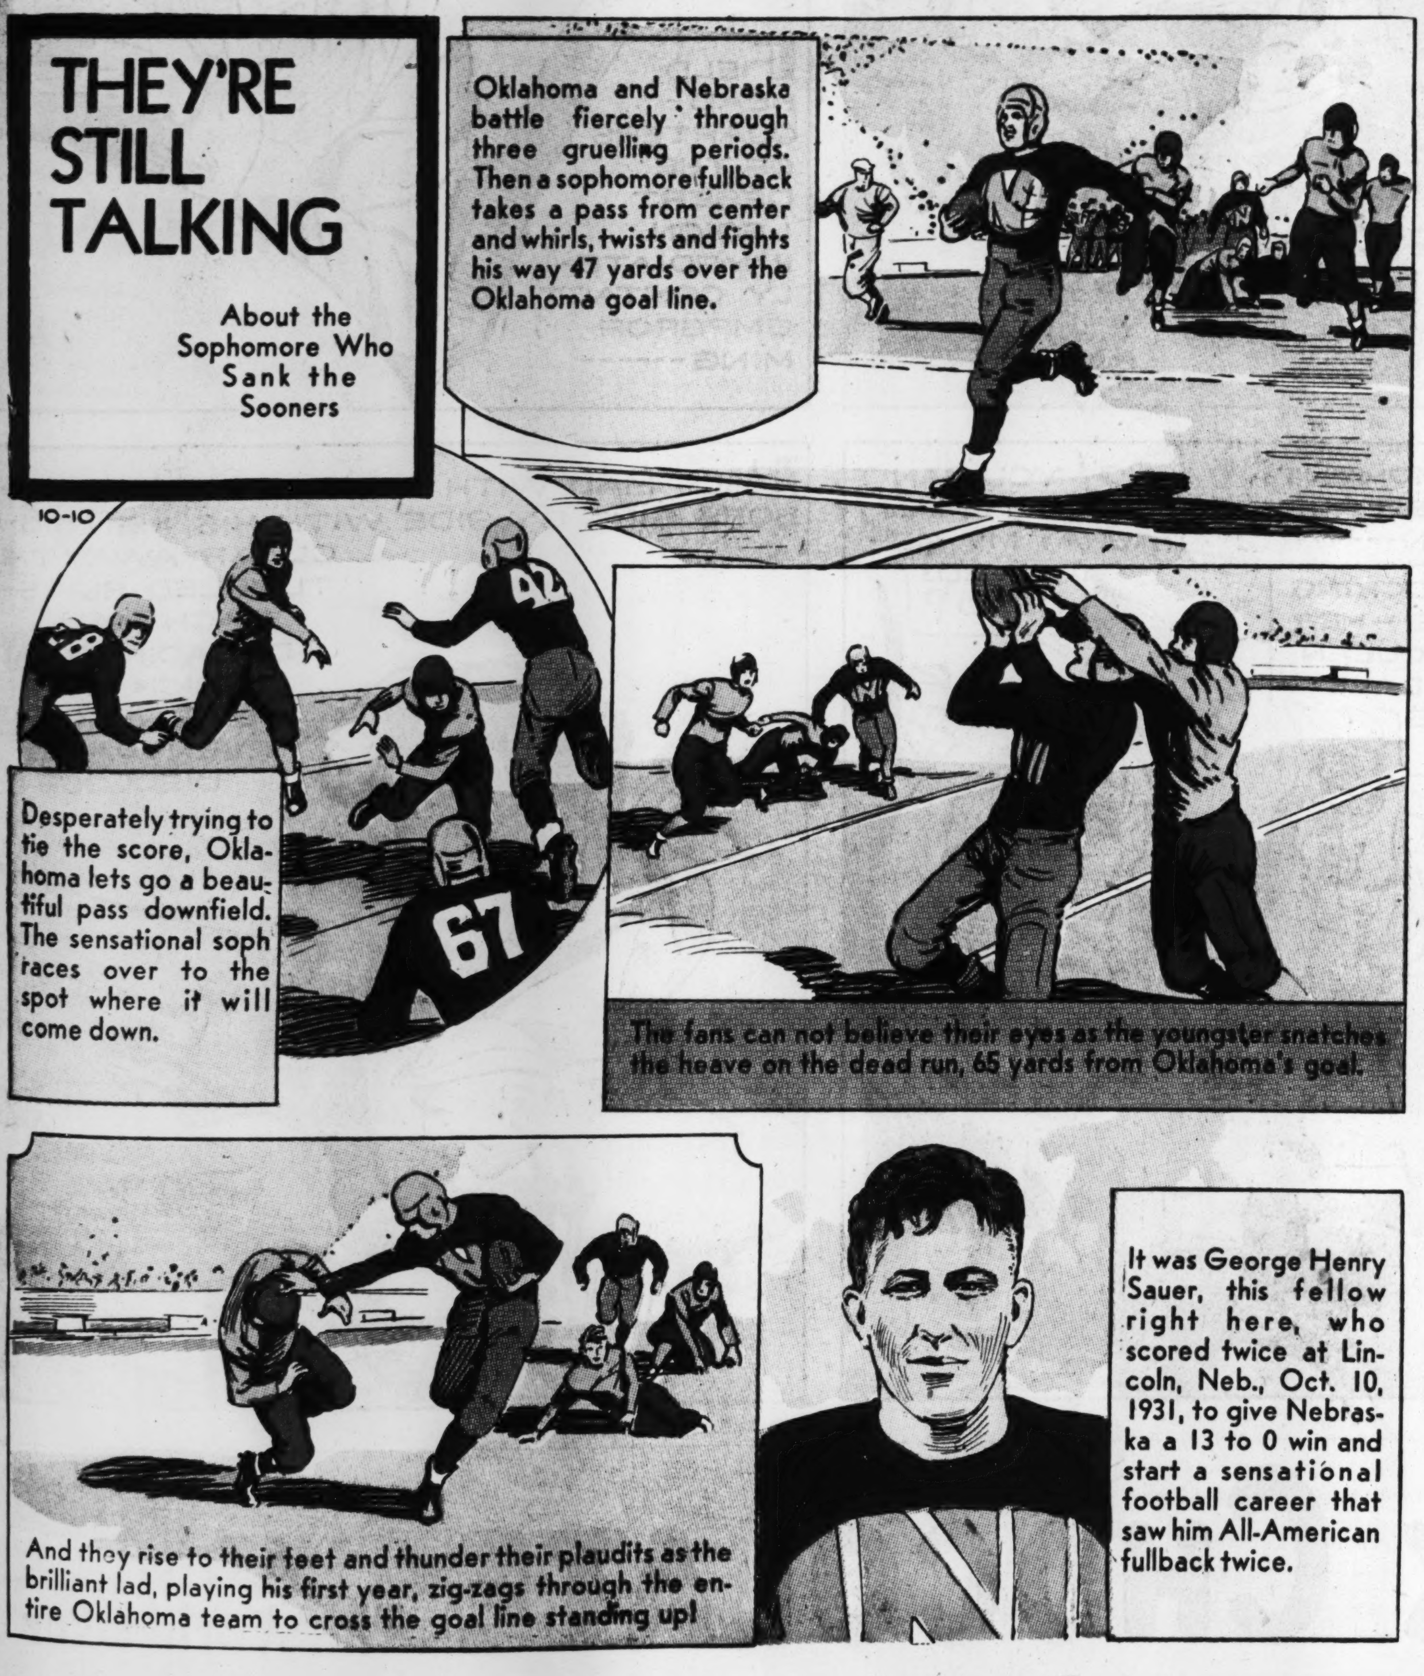
Carter's battered lads forget their bruises as they think of Ned Brant being carried off the field and the touchdown they want to present to him.

THEY'RE STILL TALKING

About the Sophomore Who Sank the Sooners



Oklahoma and Nebraska battle fiercely through three gruelling periods. Then a sophomore fullback takes a pass from center and whirls, twists and fights his way 47 yards over the Oklahoma goal line.

Desperately trying to tie the score, Oklahoma lets go a beautiful pass downfield. The sensational soph races over to the spot where it will come down.

The fans can not believe their eyes as the youngster snatches the heave on the dead run, 65 yards from Oklahoma's goal.

And they rise to their feet and thunder their plaudits as the brilliant lad, playing his first year, zig-zags through the entire Oklahoma team to cross the goal line standing up!

It was George Henry Sauer, this fellow right here, who scored twice at Lincoln, Neb., Oct. 10, 1931, to give Nebraska a 13 to 0 win and start a sensational football career that saw him All-American fullback twice.

THOUSANDS TELL HOW OXYDOL SAVES TIME AND DRUDGERY

Soaks out the dirt in record time . . . gets white clothes 4 to 5 shades whiter . . . yet safe as can be for colors, hands!

Letters from thankful women all over the country bring proof of OXYDOL'S great superiority for washing clothes! For OXYDOL brings women, at last, a "no-scrub, no-boil" laundry soap that is positively safe for colors and hands!

As Mrs. Milton Boyd, of 701 Cypress Street, Kansas City, writes: "I couldn't believe a soap that soaked out the dirt in 15 minutes could be safe—until I tried OXYDOL. OXYDOL doesn't fade a thing—and it leaves my hands so soft and white."

Developed by the makers of gentle Ivory soap, OXYDOL does these 4 amazing things you never dreamed a laundry soap could do:

(1) Soaks out the dirt in 15 minutes, without hard scrubbing or boiling. Even the extra dirty spots come clean and white with a few quick rubs. (2) Gets white clothes 4 to 5 shades whiter, proved by scientific Tintometer tests. (3) Cuts washing time 25% to 40% in tub or machine. (4) Yet so safe that every washable color comes out sparkling, brilliant, fresh!

Even sheer cotton prints washed 100 consecutive times in OXYDOL suds, showed no perceptible sign of fading.

Women can scarcely believe these amazing things until they try OXYDOL and see for themselves. You'll be astonished, too, when you see how you can get thick 3-inch suds in any water, hard or soft! How fast these suds go to work on dirt, grease, stains. Women everywhere report that OXYDOL is a life-saver in washing clothes.

Switch to OXYDOL, today! And note how economical it is. Tests show that, one package will often go one-third to one-half again as far as even the latest soap chips on the market. Procter & Gamble.

OGDEN L. MILLS, EX-SECRETARY OF TREASURY, DIES

WAS REPORTED IN EXCELLENT HEALTH

Worked at House Yesterday—Wife at His Side When End Comes— He Was 53 Years Old.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—Ogden L. Mills, former Secretary of the Treasury, died unexpectedly of a heart attack at his town house at 11:55 a. m. today. He was 53 years old.

Friends said he complained of feeling ill after breakfast. Mrs. Mills, the former Mrs. Dorothy Randolph Fell of Philadelphia, was with him when he died, as was his ward, Winthrop Sands.

Mills had been in "excellent health," according to friends at the home, although it previously had been reported that he had been slightly ill for two weeks.

He worked yesterday at his home, although he did not go to the office, and played golf three days ago.

During the summer it was reported he was not in the best of health. He had not been notably active, at least publicly, in Republican party State and national affairs recently. He spent part of the most active period of the city mayoralty campaign on his yacht Avalon, between Cold Spring Harbor, L. I., and Newport, R. I.

Mills' Career: Son of Wealth Who Made Way for Self.

Ogden Livingston Mills, born of a proud and wealthy family, carved out for himself a career in finance and politics.

He was privately tutored until he went to Harvard, where he was graduated with a Bachelor of Arts degree in 1904 when he was 19, three years younger than the average Harvard graduate.

After getting his law degree from Harvard in 1907, he became an employe and then a partner of Stetson, Jennings & Russell, a New York law firm, and soon was in demand as a corporation trial lawyer.

A year after being admitted to the New York bar, however, he became active in ward politics. In 1912 he ran for Congress in the Seventeenth New York Congressional District, but was defeated.

Two years later he was elected to the State Senate. As chairman of the important Committee on Affairs of New York City, he supported bills to grant rehearings to discharged firemen and policemen, to regulate professional nursing, to give pensions to widows and compensation to injured workmen, for compulsory health insurance and for the establishment of a State police force.

As chairman of a joint committee on taxation he presented a report which resulted in the taxing of corporate incomes and, in 1918, a year after he left the Legislature, in a tax on individual incomes as a substitute for the personal property tax.

War Service.

He resigned from the Legislature in 1917 to accept a commission as Captain in the United States Army. He went to the War College in Washington and then overseas in January, 1918, to general headquarters of the A. E. F., where he stayed until April.

From April to June, 1918, he was with the First Division in the Montdidier sector and then was assigned to the staff college at Langres until September, when he went with the Second Division to St. Mihiel. He was transferred back to general headquarters in October and was with the Sixth Division in the Argonne in November. After the armistice he was assigned to the peace conference in Paris and was honorably discharged in March, 1919.

After the war Will Hays, Republican national chairman, drafted him in 1920 as chairman of the important committee on policies and platform and made him also a member of the committee on resolutions. That autumn Mills was elected to Congress and in his first year in the national House, was appointed to the influential Committee on Ways and Means.

Three Terms in Congress.

He served three terms in Congress, piling up substantial majorities in a New York district that was closely divided. He gave up his seat to run for Governor of New
